FISH COMMISSIONER.

The Milton Record has this to say about William E. Meehan, the State Fish Commissioner, and we endorse every word of it:

When the State Department of Fisheries was organized, four years ago, William E. Meehan was appointed commissioner, and at once brought the department into national prominence. He is not only an expert in the work of fish cultivation, but he is full of enthusiasm, and is energetic and persistent in the work. Under his administration more has been done for the preservation and cultivation of fish in the waters of the state and in the enforcement of the laws than was ever contemplated under the old system. Mr. Meehan's term is about expiring, and the governor will do the state a service by continuing so efficient an official in the office.

MATRIMONY, THE BOND OF UNION

"Dan Cupid," is said to be the greatest archer of all ages. When he smites, the love smitten, the love smitten hearts, are helpless victims before the bond of matrimony. But, if true affinity has not met, in the love smitten hearts, how serious are the consequences of such a divided union!

People of tender years are naturally drawn into the matrimonial meshes, before the riper years of experience have asserted themselves, and hence, many people have married before they were fully developed, in judgment and physical manhood, or womanhood. And often, their folly became manifest, when too late to retract.

Many a clergyman has been so highly censured, and often fined for uniting juvenile lovers, in the bonds of matrimony. Hence, during Pattison's first administration, nearly all the clergy of our state petitioned the Legislature to pass a law for their own protection against censure and fine, by irate parents, who so strongly protested against clandestine marriages, that parties desiring to be united in matrimony should first procure a license from the Courts, before they could be united in matrimony. Any clergyman, Alderman, or Justice of the Peace, uniting in matrimony, without the proper license, any persons, desiring to be thus united, are amenable to the law, and subject to a heavy fine. In fact, such marriages would be null and void in our state.

Hence many young people go out of their own state, to be united in marriage, in another state, where no such license is required. Is this right? Is it just? Does it treat the clergy of their own state and perhaps of their own denomination, with due respect, and courtesy? Can they feel the same hearty welcome, or joy, when their own pastor visits them, from whom they ran, to be united in another state by a clergyman who has no claim upon their sympathies or well being? or who cares nothing for their future welfare. But is it not also ignoring the laws of their own state, and for whom the laws were enacted for their own protection as well?

Then again, people going to another state to be united in matrimony, either to avoid the law of license, or for a pleasure trip, will get from the officiating clergyman, a loose marriage certificate, which if it should get lost have no means of confirmation of their marriage, which is often so very important in many cases.

People getting married under the laws of our own state, not only get a marriage certificate from the officiating clergyman, but there is a court record of it, in addition, which can never be lost or eradicated. A marriage is a very solemn step and seals the destiny of every individual that enters upon it, for better or worse, so long as both shall live, is a thought that should be well pondered before taking such a step. All officiating clergymen should impress the sanctity and prestige upon the applicants, with a well established marriage ceremony, whose influence will be felt throughout life, at least, if the persons so united are proper subjects for the marriage altar.

FOOD MAKES BEAUTY

IT IS ANY FOOD THAT A WOMAN HAPPENS TO CRAVE.

The Range is From Small Birds to Corned Beef and Cabbage—Diets Which Enable Women to Keep Their Nerve When in Trouble.

"Each woman is a law unto herself in the matter of diet," said a woman who makes a study of psychology and many other things. "I once saw a woman on trial for murder who asked for a lamb chop and French fried potatoes and a cup of coffee. She ate them to the very dish, then washed her hands and face, brushed her hair, smoothed her gown and announced that she was ready."

"All the newspapers commented upon her remarkably fresh appearance. Her complexion was like the rose. She had been in a dull dark room for months, but she came out looking as fresh and as well groomed as though she had been out in the sunlight every day."

"When she walked through the snow she kicked it from very delight, and when she got into the air she fairly skipped. A man would have dropped and dragged his feet along as he walked."

"I believe that it is all due to the diet that women have. Women stand nervous strain better than men, and in hours of trial they eat more."

"A sort of extra sense tells them that it is time to keep up their strength. This same sense also tells them that they will need the influence of their beauty."

"When a man is in trouble, when his nerves are unstrung, he eats nothing at all. The drug store supplies him with something for his nerves and he stops in elsewhere to get a bracer. When it comes to a slice of good roast beef and potato he is missing."

"Beautiful women make a fad of fine dining. I know one lovely woman who makes a study of delicate eating. She has a complexion like a peach and hands as smooth as velvet, inside and out. Her hair lies as though it had been varnished, so high is its gloss, and the waves are deep and dark."

"It is all my diet," she says. "It used to be that women ate pastry and lived on candy between whiles. Now it has come to pass that woman has learned to like wild game and that she realizes the direct relation between good substantial eating and a good substantial style of beauty."

"I remember going to the court room to see a woman who had been called as a witness in a most trying case. She went through the ordeal in a wretched condition. At recess I approached her hand. She smiled and extended her hand."

"I must eat something," said she. "What shall it be?" I asked. "A plate of corned beef and cabbage," said she.

"I succeeded in getting a platter of it and she ate greedily. That afternoon she surprised the lawyers and the spectators by her brilliancy. "All this goes to prove that you can never tell what will come next, where a woman is concerned, though her success in nearly every case can be directly traced to her very epicurean list."
