

MEXICO HOPING FOR PEACE

Ready to Strike Hard in War if Guatemala Refuses Her Demands.

EARNEST FOR PEACE

Secretary Root Believes Trouble May Be Settled, But United States Will Not Interfere.—Forces Are At Work To Avert Hostilities—Guatemalan Consul Talks.

Washington, D. C., May 28.—Mexico, according to advices that have reached the State Department, still hopes to avoid war with Guatemala, but she is firmly determined in event of Guatemala's failure to comply with her demands to end the present situation with a contest that shall be sudden, short and decisive.

Despite Mexico's aggressive attitude Secretary Root has not given up hope that peace may be preserved. The good offices of the United States have been put forward as a standing offer to the countries involved, but this government cannot, nor is it disposed to, act as energetically as it has acted in strained situations between Central American countries to which Mexico was not a part.

The United States and Mexico having for a year now worked harmoniously together to insure permanent peace in Central America. Secretary Root and Assistant Secretary Bacon feel that Mexico is as earnest in its desire for peace as the United States and may be relied upon to exhaust all possible peaceful expedients before going to war.

One of the greatest external forces working to avert war between Mexico and Guatemala is the feeling of very important Latin-American republics, including Mexico, that war at this time would be unusually bad for the reputation of them all.

Secretary Root has been much impressed with the feeling of first class governments, like Brazil, Argentina, Chili, Peru and Mexico, that they are handicapped in the eyes of the world by frequent revolutions in and wars between the backward republics, like those of Central America. It was this feeling which caused many Latin-American diplomats warmly to commend the idea of a confederation of Central American States into a single government strong enough to repress revolution within and command respect from without.

Secretary Root finds this sentiment a great deterrent of war between Mexico and Guatemala. The existence of the feeling many diplomats believe will prevent Mexico from striking unless some more overt act is committed by Guatemala which will bring public sentiment squarely against that Republic.

The Mexican Embassy and the Guatemalan Legation are entirely without advices to-day.

PLANTS 1,600 ACRES IN PEAS

Company in San Joaquin Valley Expects to Ship 250 Carloads.

New York, May 27.—H. P. Anselmi, assistant general freight agent of the Santa Fe, after an extended trip through the San Joaquin valley, declares:

"The most interesting thing I noted in my trip was the pea canning factory at Ockdale. The company here has 1,600 acres of peas under cultivation and it expects to ship out 50 carloads of canned peas from that little town. Land which was formerly put to use for the cultivation of hay and grain is now planted in peas, and big money is being made by the planters.

INSPECTION STOPS BEEF SALE

Refuse to Let Cattle Go Subject to Post-Mortem Examination.

Chicago, Ill., May 29.—Because of the enforcement by the big packers of their new rule requiring post-mortem inspection of cows and heifers as a condition of purchase, only the high class of "Delmonico" grades of beef were sold at the stock yards for the Chicago trade. All the cows and heifers went to the slaughter houses outside Chicago, mainly to Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Cleveland and Pittsburg concerns.

Monday was the first day for the enforcement of the post-mortem rule and its operation was watched with keen interest. The big packing firms did not succeed in buying a solitary cow or heifer, according to the returns made to the live stock commission men at the close of business. None of the three thousand animals numbered in the list of the day's receipts as "cow stuff" remained unsold, however, and on this showing the commission claimed that the big firms were routed in the day's skirmish.

When the market opened in the morning the buyers for Armour & Co., Nelson Morris & Co., the National Packing Company, G. H. Hammond & Co., Schwartzschild & Sulzberger and the Western Packing Company announced that they would bid for cows and heifers only on condition that acceptance and payment would follow, not precede, the government post-mortem inspection. They were promptly told by the commission men that their bids would not be considered on such terms.

Definite lines of procedure had been mapped out by both sides. After it became definitely known that the big packers had instructed their buyers to make absolutely no purchases of cows or heifers unless subject to the new rule, the commission men having this class of cattle for sale ignored these buyers. Many buyers from Milwaukee and the other cities where there are slaughter houses operated independently of the Chicago big packers, and to these the "cow stuff" was let go at prices that were somewhat on the "bargain day" order—that is to say, from 10 to 20 cent below the range of prices at the close of last week's marketing.

P. O. INQUIRY FOR MRS. GOULD

Formal Complaint That Her Mail Was Tampered With.

New York, May 29.—Formal complaint was made to United States District Attorney Stimson that Mrs. Howard Gould's mail was tampered with on several occasions while she was living apart from her husband. Her attorney called on Mr. Stimson and urged that the Federal authorities investigate Mrs. Gould's charges. It is likely that the Post Office Department will take up the matter and assign inspectors to work on the clues that have been furnished by Mrs. Gould. Mr. Stimson was also told of Mrs. Gould's suspicions that she had been shadowed by Secret Service men, and an investigation will be begun along that line.

London, May 27.—Andrew Carnegie has just announced his latest philanthropic plan, which provides for the repatriation and pensioning of all poor and aged Scots now living in Great Britain.

Carnegie proposes to see that all his old fellow countrymen who are living outside their native land and who are in want are made easy for the rest of their lives.

Applicants for his bounty must be sixty years of age and indigent. They will be sent back to their former homes in Scotland at Mr. Carnegie's expense and a pension of fifteen shillings ($3.75) a week will be allowed.

Announcement of his scheme was made by Mr. Carnegie immediately upon his arrival at Skibo Castle, his Scottish home.

MO. CAN OUST STANDARD OIL

Commissioner Upholds Attorney General Hadley's Specifications.

Jefferson City, Mo., May 27.—Special Commissioner Anthony, in his report to the Supreme Court on the suits brought by Attorney General Hadley to drive the Standard, Republic, and Waters-Pierce Oil Companies out of Missouri, recommends that their charters be revoked and that they be ousted from the State.

These three companies, forming a combination under the leadership of the Standard Oil Company, according to Commissioner Anthony, have unlawfully monopolized the oil trade of this State since 1901. The Commissioner describes their operations as "a conspiracy formed to control prices and throttle competition." It Court, under the law and the evils pointed out that the Supreme Court gathered by the Commissioner, has the power to cancel the charter of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company and revoke the licenses of the Standard and Republic Oil Companies, which are incorporated outside of Missouri.

OLEOMARGARINE ARREST

Revenue Men Say Martin, Accused of Conspiracy, Is Head of Trade.

OPERATES FROM N. J.

Former Federal Agent Himself, He Is Said to Have Escaped Many Traps Laid For Him—It is Hoped That His Indictment and Arrest Will Stop the Traffic.

Jersey City N. J., May 29.—By the arrest of O. S. Martin, manager of the plant of Braun & Fitts, of No. 52-54 Hudson street Jersey City, on a charge of conspiracy, the United States revenue officials believe they have struck a severe blow against the illicit coloring of oleomargarine in New Jersey for New York consumption. Martin was placed under heavy bail and will be brought to trial during the June term of the United States District Court in New Jersey.

Martin has long been regarded by the revenue officials as the chief of the New Jersey oleomargarine trade, and is said by them to have contrived several methods of handling the product so as to evade the revenue laws. A former revenue official himself and acquainted with the methods of the federal agents, Martin has escaped from several traps set for him by the revenue men.

His indictment followed the arrest of Charles C. Clement, of No. 59 Seventh avenue Guttenburg, N. J., on a charge of manufacturing and selling colored oleomargarine without a license. Clement had a large plant, and is known to have owned at least two distributing wagons in New York and New Jersey. A raid was made on his plant by the revenue men and the product confiscated.

Find Consignment on Pier

Soon after the arrest of Martin the revenue agents found a consignment for Hartford, Conn., of 2,500 pounds of colored oleomargarine on Pier 20, East River. The fifty tubs did not bear the revenue stamps of ten cents a pound, but as the names of both consignor and consignee were fictitious no arrests were made. The consignment was confiscated.

Martin went to Jersey City from Chicago as manager of the Braun & Fitts establishment several years ago. His first clash with the federal authorities came some time ago, when he invented capsules of coloring matter, which were sold with orders of uncolored oleomargarine. The restaurant keepers or small merchants could stir this dye into the oleomargarine before placing on sale, and thus evade the heavy tax on the colored imitation butter.

N. Y. MARKET LETTER

(From our Special Correspondent.)

New York, May 27.—Speculative trading in the wheat market was much less active, with the tendency of prices again lower, owing principally to bad weather all over the country.

The wheat market, like that in stocks, is professional to a degree now, and the buying is not so fast and furious as it was. The public has been in the wheat market to a great extent, but having been badly hurt is inclined to keep its hands off.

Wall Street is trying to figure out the crop situation, and has come to the conclusion that more wheat has been killed by the rumor-mongers than by frost, wet weather and the green bugs. Crop experts, like experts of another sort, are apt to shade their views according to the desires of those who employ them, and for this reason it is fair to suppose that exports working for grain houses that have been buying wild have been busily engaged in killing off this particular sort in order to put the price up. At least this is the opinion of the people in Wall Street.

The group of produce speculators who, several weeks ago, bought up what they thought was all the available supply of old potatoes, with the object of unloading their holdings at high prices, received a severe check. About 8,000 barrels of potatoes they didn't know existed were offered for sale at much less quotations. More are said to be coming.

About 4,000 barrels of potatoes were unloaded in a day at a single pier, and several 1,000-barrel lots were received at other piers. The speculators were surprised; they thought they had cleaned up the supply. It seems, however, that the high prices attracted sellers from distant points, and on this the dealers here had not figured.

Warning to Lazy Postmasters.

Washington, May 29.—Hereafter postmasters who advise their patrons to buy bank drafts, express money orders, or to employ other methods of transmitting cash than by money order or registry, will be removed by Postmaster General Meyer. Lazy postmasters have found it more agreeable to direct patrons to the nearest bank or express office to purchase exchange than to take the pains to issue money orders or register letters. This has operated to reduce the postal revenues.
