Grave Found After 40 Years.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Root and their daughters, of Danville, have returned from an exceedingly pleasant visit to Jamestown, Norfolk and numerous other points of interest in that section says the Morning News.

Although the party visited the Jamestown exposition and found much to interest them there, yet their trip was undertaken principally for the purpose of finding, if possible, the grave of Mrs. Root's brother, Lloyd Marks, who died while in the service just after the surrender of Lee.

Nothing was known of the young soldier's grave and the manner of his burial by the relatives in the north. Indeed, it was not until after the expiration of one year that it was learned for a certainty that he was dead. Up to the present visit the relatives here were uncertain whether he was sleeping in one of the cemeteries or, like thousands of others, had been buried somewhere with the unknown dead in a trench.

Lloyd Marks grew to manhood at Roaring Creek post-office, Columbia county. Along with George W. Root he enlisted in the 123th Regiment P. V., Third Pennsylvania Heavy Artillery and served nearly throughout the war.

Mr. Root and family in their search visited the National cemetery at Hampton, Va. Without much effort they were successful in finding the grave and were furnished with complete records relating to his death, etc. His grave, which is near the center of that beautiful cemetery, is marked with a stone on which is engraved his full name, number, &c., all attesting to the remarkable care that since the close of the Rebellion the government has bestowed on the graves of its fallen heroes.

Sunbury and Danville Road Gets Under Penny.

Bids have been invited for the undergrade crossing of the Danville and Sunbury Transit Company where the latter is to pass under the track of the Pennsylvania railroad near the silk mill at Riverside. It is confidently stated that work will begin on the crossing in two weeks at the furthest and that in a short time the cars will run through Riverside borough.

The plans and specifications, as is customary in such cases, have been furnished by the Pennsylvania railroad company. These have been much delayed so that it is only on the approach of autumn that the Danville and Sunbury Transit Company has been permitted to begin work on the crossing, which was an improvement arranged for in early spring.

The plans call for concrete construction, the crossing to take in a width of the railroad equal to three tracks. At that point the railroad embankment is five feet high. The trolley track is to lie at a depth of seventeen feet below the level of the railroad, which implies that an excavation of twelve feet below the general level will have to be made.

With this trouble satisfactorily adjusted the Danville company will be in a position to push forward towards Sunbury next spring.

MURDERER DEAD.

William Whitaker, the Mt. Carmel wife murderer, who was awaiting the death sentence in the county jail at Sunbury, escaped the gallows by dying in his cell last Tuesday week of acute indigestion. The details of his brutal crime are familiar to COLUMBIAN readers. Whitaker was married to a young lady of Mt. Carmel, but owing to his abuse she left him and returned to her parents. Whitaker coaxed her to come back to him and when she refused he took his razor and went to her parents' home. He called her into the parlor and when she again refused to live with him he cut her throat. At the trial an effort was made by Whitaker's attorneys to prove him insane, at the time of the crime, but the effort fell flat and the jury did not consider the insanity plea, agreeing in a few minutes on first degree murder. On Tuesday afternoon he was taken ill suffering from acute indigestion, but his condition was not considered serious. A doctor was called and his treatment gave relief. A half hour later he was found lying on his cot dead.

The Merry Opera of "The Toy-makers."

That celebrated company of merry-makers, "The Jollities" will soon be the attraction at the Grand Opera House and it is predicted that no one in this town will miss "The Toy-makers" that new side-splitting, musical absurdity which was written by Charles Felton Pidgin the author of that famous book "Quincy Adams Sawyer" which was read and talked about as "the best New England story ever written." Mr. Pidgin has written both book and play and every one should read this amusing story if possible before seeing "The Toy-makers." Years ago in Merry England "The Toy-makers of Nuremberg" was adapted from the German and under the name of "Dolly" was sung by Minnie, Rudersdorf the gifted mother of Richard Mansfield, making a great success over there. Now Mr. Pidgin is Chief of the Massachusetts Bureau of Statistics, he is simply brimming over with fun and dry humor which he knows how to serve up to the public in a most satisfying manner.

The date of the production of "The Toy-makers" is Thursday Nov. 21 and it will be given at the Opera House for one night only. The story tells of a wonderful doll invented by "John Stubbs Senior" and brought to life by electricity through many curious and comical adventures and puts the audience in great good humor. Twenty-six new musical lyrics make up this clever comic opera, full of melody which were written by Charles D. Blake and John A. Bennett. New costumes and beautiful scenery were designed especially for "The Jollities" who give a clean, unhackneyed evening's entertainment in this jolly opera "The Toy-makers."

New Gate at Fair Grounds.

A change has been made at the Fair Grounds concerning the admission of those holding stand tickets and wearing horsemen badges.

A new gate has been made at the east end of the secretary's office where all those who have special privileges will be admitted during the fair.

This change will relieve the crush that often occurs at the main entrance gate and relieve the ticket takers there of much of the annoyance they have experienced in former years.
