Bryan Outlines Campaign Issues.
 In a Speech at Bonesteel, S. D., Nebraskan
 Tells Policies Which Democratic Party
 Will Ask Voters to Indorse in November.

In his address at Bonesteel, S. D., last week, William J. Bryan outlined what the principal issues put forth by the Democrats during the coming campaign would be and indicated what might be expected in the Denver platform. In part he said:

"We are just beginning a national campaign. The Republican party has been in power for the last thirteen years and will in the coming campaign ask for a continuation of power.
 The Democrats will present a criticism of Republican management and propose a change in the personnel of the offices and a change in the policy to be pursued. The voters, after hearing both sides and considering the arguments for and against the policies presented will decide the question at issue and determine the trend of the Government for four years.
 The Democrats will ask for the election of Senators by direct vote of the people in order that it may be easier for the voters to control the Government; the Democrats will ask for effective legislation against the trusts in order that the people may be protected from monopolies; the Democrats will ask for reduction of the tariff in order that the people may be relieved from excessive taxation; the Democrats will ask for effective railroad legislation that the people may be protected from watered stocks and fictitious capitalization, for until we know what the railroads are actually worth we cannot determine what they should collect in the way of transportation rates; the Democrats will ask for a reconciliation of the differences between labor and capital, that these two important factors in business may work harmoniously together; the Democratic party will oppose imperialism, which is violating the fundamental principles of our Government, and is at the same time increasing our expense for army and navy; the Democratic party will ask for legislation, State and national, to protect bank depositors and to prevent panics"

Commentation from a Republican.
 (Washington Letter in Catawissa News Item.)
 Washington, D. C., May 2, 1908
Catawissa News Item:
 I write to call the attention of the Republicans of seventeenth congressional district to the speech delivered by the Hon. John G. McHenry advocating the passage of the bill introduced by him for the purpose of supplying relief and alleviating suffering incident to accidents in coal mines. He has taken hold of legislation in general equal to any of the older members, and is considered here to be the ablest member from our district since the Hon. S. P. Wolverton.

I consider him to be worthy of the unanimous vote of the citizens of the Seventeenth District.

New York View of Penna. Shame.

The $499,000 shortage of Cashier William Montgomery, of the Allegheny National Bank of Pittsburgh is one more tragedy to add to the long roll of death and dishonor on which figure the names of public officials and bankers involved in Quay's manipulation of the Pennsylvania state treasury.

The Allegheny National Bank was the Quay bank in the western end of the state just as the people's Bank of Philadelphia, whose cashier, John S. Hopkins, committed suicide was the Quay bank in eastern Pennsylvania. Following Hopkins' death came disclosures resulting in the arrest of Quay, his son Richard and State Treasurer Haywood, on the charge of conspiring with Hopkins to use the People's Bank funds for speculation in stocks by Quay. Quay escaped by pleading the statute of limitations. State Treasurer Haywood is said to have died of grief over his disgrace. One of the features of the proceedings in the Quay case was the refusal of Cashier Montgomery, of the Allegheny National Bank, to produce books before the grand jury, which would show other stock operations of Quay with funds from state depositories.

Of other officials connected with the state treasury during the days of Quay's fatal domination, Cashier J. Blake Walters committed suicide. State Treasurer William Lysey fled in disgrace and State Treasurers Amos C. Noyes and William B. Hart died under the strain of official dishonor. After Quay's death followed the suicide of T. Lee Clark, cashier of the wrecked Enterprise Bank, which had observed the practice of making political loans in return for official favors from the state treasury. Several of the bank's clerks were sent to jail.

And now, to crown all, the people of Pennsylvania, in recognition of Quay's eminent services as lifelong political corruptionist, are about to place an imposing statue of the man at the approach to the new state capitol at Harrisburg, which is itself one of the greatest monuments to graft in this country.

The Philadelphia Record will publish, beginning Sunday, June 7th, a story by William J. Grimm, entitled "Onneta of Gnadens Huerten". This story is now published for the first time. It is a tale of colonial Pennsylvania at the beginning of the French and Indian War, and during the latter part of the active career of Conrad Weiser, the then famed but now almost forgotten Indian interpreter. This story should be of special interest to the Germans of Pennsylvania. It will be continued through June and July. Place a regular order with your local news agent to be sure of getting a copy.

A Hair Dressing
 Nearly every one likes a fine hair dressing. Something to make the hair more manageable; to keep it from being too rough, or from splitting at the ends. Something, too, that will feed the hair at the same time, a regular hair-food. Well-fed hair will be strong, and will remain where it belongs—on the head, not on the comb!

WASHINGTON

From our Regular Correspondent.
 Washington, D. C., May 28, 1908.
 The currency question is, of course, the one absorbing topic in political circles in Washington at the present hour, but the extravagance of the projects urged at this session of Congress is coming in for its share of the public attention. While the figures on the total appropriations for the present session are incomplete careful estimates indicate that they will exceed $1,020,000,000. This amount exceeds that of any previous session by $100,000,000. There is no little adverse comment over the fact that the largest increases over former years are to be found in pension, post office, army and navy appropriation bills, while the sums appropriated for educational purposes are small and not commensurate with the relative importance of the public's needs. It has been delicately hinted that every $10,000 spent by the Bureau of Education would bring a far richer return than every $100,000 expended on the navy.

Democratic members of both houses of Congress are in favor of the campaign publicity bill, which has received added notoriety by Mr. Bryan's clever letter to Secretary Taft relating thereto. Both Mr. Bryan and Mr. Taft are on record as favoring the bill, but whether the attitude of these two men will have sufficient weight with Congress to secure the passage of a publicity bill remains to be seen. The opinion prevails that Republicans will see the advantage, politically, of going before the country with at least a profession of willingness to have the Presidential campaign financially conducted along lines that are open and above board, and will therefore pass some measure that will require publicity in the collection and expenditure of national campaign funds.

It is estimated that the Democratic Convention at Denver will cost Tammany at least $115,000. Five special trains have been engaged to carry 650 braves to the great powwow. The estimates are divided into two sums, $65,000 for transportation and $50,000 to make a big show in Denver.

More than two-thirds of the Democratic national convention have now been elected. Complete delegations were chosen last week in Alabama, California, Florida, Michigan, Missouri, South Carolina, Washington, Wyoming, Alaska, Hawaii and the District of Columbia. Four delegates-at-large were elected in Pennsylvania. Of the 172 delegates named in these States and Territories, Mr. Bryan received 159, while thirteen were not instructed or committed.

The call for the national convention fixed its membership at 1,002, the Philippines being excluded from representation. However, six Philippine delegates have been chosen and will apply for admission. Of the 677 delegates so far elected, 481 are instructed to support Mr. Bryan or committed to his support by resolutions of preference or public announcements; 22 are for Johnson; 11 are for Gray and 63 uncommitted. Mr. Bryan has the support of 71 per cent. of the delegates so far elected.

Anti-Bryan people in Washington were jubilant when they read of Gov. John A. Johnson's exploit in the swimming pool of the Hotel Chamberlin at Old Point Comfort, Va. His double somersaults, they declare, will help him tremendously with a people who have been trained in the last seven years to demand physical dexterity of their popular heroes.

The greatest relief is felt throughout political and social Washington that the currency bill has passed the House. There is every expectation that it will go through the Senate and that adjournment was possible on Friday. The bill that has just passed the House is a compromise between the Aldrich and Vreeland bills and carries the clause creating a currency commission to be composed of nine members of the Senate and nine members of the House.

Not since the death of President McKinley has a funeral been marked with such elaborate military honors as those which distinguished the removal of the remains of the body of George Clinton, once major general in the revolutionary army, first governor of New York and a Vice President of the United States. After resting for ninety-six years in Congressional Cemetery in this city, the remains were taken to New York City en route to Kingston, N. Y., for final interment, and for the first time in the history of military funerals, women participated in the ceremonies incident to the disinterment, at the request of the War Department.

Washington is in the throes of a "mad dog" epidemic, produced largely, no doubt, by the recent death of a victim of rabies in New York. The authorities are endeavoring to circulate the information just issued by the New York Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, in which, among other things, the notions entertained by the vast majority of people as to the habits and conduct of a dog supposed to be mad are shown to be wholly fallacious.

Declares Against Stream Pollution.
 Supreme Court Upholds Constitutionality of the Purity of Water Law.

Judge Swartz, of the Montgomery county courts, in delivering his opinion said: "The act of the legislature is a police regulation for the protection of the public health. This is a highly beneficial act; it is doing much to promote public health."
 Judge Porter, of the superior court, in his opinion said: "The statute was passed in the exercise of the police power of the state. That power undoubtedly extends to all regulations affecting the health, good order, morals, peace and safety of society. All sorts of restrictions and burdens are imposed under this power, and when these are not in conflict with any constitutional prohibition, or fundamental principle, they cannot be successfully assailed in a judicial tribunal. That the preservation of the waters of the state from pollution, involving danger to health, is a proper subject for the exercise of the police power cannot be seriously questioned."

Of widespread importance is the recent decision of the supreme court of Pennsylvania upholding the constitutionality of the act of April 22, 1905, known as the "Purity of Water Law," under which the commissioner of health is given power to protect the streams of the state from pollution.

The case in question was the "Commonwealth of Pennsylvania against Edward Emmers," and had been carried by the defendant from the Norristown county courts to the superior court and then to the supreme court, the decision in each instance convicting the party violating the Purity of Water Law by polluting a stream with sewage.

The defendant is the owner and operator of the hosiery mill situated on or near the banks of the Schuylkill river, in Montgomery county, where he employs a large number of operators. Nine water closets for the use of these employees, sewage from all of which closets was discharged by a single pipe into the Schuylkill river, were declared by the commissioner of health to be a menace to public health, and the defendant was given notice that this discharge of sewage must be discontinued under the provisions of the Purity of Water Law. Failing to comply with the law, the mill owner was prosecuted.

 A New Postal Ruling.

Stringent orders have been issued by the postoffice department to all postmasters not to divulge the name or addresses of any of the patrons of the office. Heretofore postoffices have been considered local directories, bureaus of information and depositories of all sorts of neighborly gossip. If a person wanted an address or list of names it was understood that the postmaster was in duty bound to supply this information, together with the habits, the character and fitness of each individual who comes in contact with the postmaster or office. The guardians of Uncle Sam's postal affairs are requested to keep the affairs of office as inviolate as the business of a bank.
