Lewisburg capitalists have applied for a charter for the Union Water Company and will erect a dam on Chillisquaque Creek, Northumberland county. The company proposes to generate electricity to the extent of 500 horse power, and as the power house will be located within two miles of Lewisburg it is surmised that the Union county seat is to furnish the market for the power generated.

Pennsylvania Railroad experts have been experimenting for years to discover a method of treating ties so as to prolong the life of the wood. They are now satisfied that they have mastered wood preservation and are about to establish a station for treating all kinds of wood materials used by them, and exposed to the weather. This plant is to be located at Mount Union, Huntingdon county. The company owns about 90 acres of land available for this plant.

Mail Carrier Not Robbed.

We published an account last week of a Sunbury mail carrier who was beaten and robbed, and found groaning in a barn. Following an investigation, and on being confronted with certain facts showing irregularity, the carrier finally confessed to a postal inspector. He admitted having taken several drinks of liquor. It went to his head after a short time and he felt unable to continue his work. He went to the barn and crawled to the hay mow and slept off the effects of the liquor. He awoke at about four o'clock and realizing the enormity of his offense he planned the story of the robbery and carried it into effect. He tore his shirt, scattered the mail over the floor and lay under the wagon and began to groan until he attracted the attention of Mr. Epler.

Sewage Disposal.

The proposition that emanated from the convention of third class cities, recently held in Altoona, that the state assume a part of the cost of constructing sewage disposal plants in such cities and boroughs as are obliged to build them, is a mighty good one and is entirely fair and reasonable. The protection of the streams of the state against sewage pollution is a public matter that benefits all the people and it has the same claim for state aid that the hospitals, schools, bridges and highways have. The next session of the legislature should enact a law that will partially relieve municipalities of the financial burden that the construction of these disposal plants will entail upon them, and which are deemed essential to the preservation of the public health.—Milton Standard.

Ejecting Passengers.

A new order has been issued for Pennsylvania trainmen, governing the ejection of passengers from trains for non-payment of fare or violation of rules. The ejection must be made at a station and preferably one in, or close to, a town or settlement of some sort; and when the person ejected is a woman or a child unaccompanied or a man drunk or otherwise incapable of caring for himself, it must be made at a station where an agent is on duty, and the agent must be notified of the ejection, that he may properly look out for the ejected woman or child.

Demand for Horses.

The horse business has kept right on developing in spite of the fact that the automobile industry has been engaged in similar undertaking. The demand for horses is still great. The supply of some classes of them is inadequate. The prices are high. The automobile may scare the horse into the ditch, but it isn't likely to crowd him to the wall. There will always be a field for the horse, as there will always be a field for the automobile.

Both Aided in Killing Cobbler.

Marcavich Confessed That Both He and "Pimple Face" Joe Murdered Yessalonis.

What will undoubtedly prove to be one of the greatest murder trials in the history of Northumberland county will be that of "Pimple Face" Joe Keckeskie at the coming term of criminal court at Sunbury, when he will be charged with complicity in the murder of Cobbler Yessalonis, the aged Springfield victim, for which crime Stanney Marcavich has already been sentenced to hang.

The confession of Stanney Marcavich, who was convicted of the crime, will play an important part in the trial. Marcavich has confessed that both he and "Pimple Face" Joe were present at the murder. Stanney confessed that he struck the cobbler with a club, felling him to the ground and that Joe, then seeing the cobbler moving, seized a hatchet and struck the blow which resulted in the death of the cobbler. The two men then divided the money found in the cobbler's sash and ran away. Joe hurried in the direction of the Corbin colliery and held up a fellow country man committing this second crime in an endeavor to prove an alibi.

It developed at the hearing last week that while running away from the scene of the murder Joe met Stanney Cotaska, a Shamokin saloonkeeper, who was called as a witness. Cotaska testified that on the day of the murder he saw a crowd of people running in the direction of the shoemaker's shop and met "Pimple Face" Joe walking in the opposite direction. He said to Joe, "What's the matter down there?" and Joe replied, "The shoemaker is killed, but I don't know how." It will be remembered that at the Marcavich trial Joe testified that he had not been near the shoemaker's shop and did not know anything about the murder of Yessalonis.

The Northumberland county officials Saturday endeavored to get Stanney Marcavich to repeat his former confession but he stated that he would not leave his cell to testify in the case. He says he is ready to hang.

Joe was recommitted to stand trial for murder.

If anything boils over on your stove and begins to smoke and cause an unpleasant odor throw a handful of salt on it. This removes the objectionable smell.

Holes in plaster walls may be stopped with a mixture of sand and plaster of paris mixed into a paste with water. When dry cover with a piece of paper to match the wall.

To clean windows try this method: "Take two or three pieces of lump starch, dissolve them in a quart of water, and with this wash the windows. Let the glass dry, then polish with a dry cloth.

To clean tan shoes wipe all dust from them with dry cloth. Soap woolen rag with white soap, rub lather over shoes, wash with clear water, wipe partly dry, place where air and sun will dry quickly. This cleans and preserves leather.

Flying Machine That Flies.

After flying for over an hour in an aeroplane at Fort Meyer, on Wednesday, Orville Wright came nearer demonstrating that flying machines might become practical, than has ever been done before. Such a demonstration should arrest public attention because the evolution of the flying machine would mark a greater epoch in the world's progress than that of the telephone or the telegraph.

To Face Disaster Trial.

Mrs. Monroe Grief-Stricken Over Prospect of Arrest.

Mrs. Harriet A. Monroe, of Washington, D. C., who owned the moving picture machine during a performance of which at Boyertown, Pa., 170 persons, including her sister, were killed in a panic, said that she would not dodge the warrant which has been issued for her arrest. "I shall not seek to avoid the service of the papers," she said, "although the announcement that someone has issued a warrant for my arrest is hard for me to bear in connection with the sorrow that is already mine."

Mrs. Monroe appears to be broken in health and as she talked of the catastrophe she shed tears. "There is little for me to say," she answered, when questioned as to the responsibility for the disaster. "I was no more to blame for the fire than the man who now seeks to add another sorrow to my cup. Heaven knows I have suffered enough already, for the fire cost me the life of my sister and the loss of my business. It has about ruined me and I have been miserable every moment since the tragedy."

Mrs. Monroe says she does not regard the operator of the machine as inexperienced. He handled it satisfactorily, she contends. The fire, she says, was caused by the overturning of a coal oil lamp by a stage hand, who came from behind the wings to investigate a spattering in one of the pipes. The operator immediately shut off the machine and endeavored to check the panic-stricken people, but to no avail.

Mrs. Monroe was not present when the accident occurred.

A War Veteran's Tribute to Pe-ru-na.

Rudolph B. Schwickardi, Capt. 39th N. Y. Vol. Inf., writes from 1818 G St., N. W., Washington, D. C., as follows: "Having the fullest confidence in the efficacy of Peruna, both as a tonic and as a remedy for catarrhal trouble, I commend its use in the strongest possible terms. It should be in every household."

Mr. William J. Lees, 3501 Morgan St., St. Louis, Mo., member Frank P. Blair Post No. 1, Grand Army of the Republic, and ex-Commander of the U. S. S. Benton Misa Squadron, writes: "The war left me with a complication of stomach, liver and kidney troubles, and I decided to take Peruna for my affliction. I began to use it about five years ago at the earnest solicitation of some friends. At that time I was only able to be up about half of the time, and my health was simply miserable. I consider a bottle of Peruna and on is a preventive. I certainly do endorse your remedy, and am glad to do so."

Helped From Chronic Catarrh.

Capt. Lemuel M. Hutchinson, Montpelier, Vt., writes: "It gives me pleasure to write you this letter at this time on account of the good your Peruna has done me when I was quite done up with a very bad cold. I could hardly perform my ordinary Penny Will Pay Cash.

Following successful trials on the Erie division, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company will begin paying its employees in cash in three or four months, in accordance with the adoption of the decimal system which was inaugurated for the first time in August. This new method will do away with the check system now in operation on the main line, and will meet with the approval of the company's employees.

The company started to pay the employees on the Erie division in cash for the first time last month with satisfactory results.
