

DAUGHTER SAVED FATHER'S LIFE

Struck Assailant's Hand as He Fled at Him.

WILL PROBABLY RECOVER

Child's Action Deflected the Bullet Fired at New York's Postmaster at Close Range, Otherwise He Would Have Been Fatally Wounded—Tragedy Occurred On Street—Assailant Was a Former Inmate of Inmate Asylum and Sought Mr. Morgan's Life For a Fancied Grievance.

New York, Nov. 19.—Edward M. Morgan, postmaster of New York city, who was wounded in the abdomen by a bullet fired by E. H. B. Mackay, an eccentric English stenographer, who then committed suicide by resting well, and unless complications develop he will recover.

Mr. Morgan probably owes his life to the quick wit and bravery of his fourteen-year-old daughter, Dorothy, who saw Mackay draw his revolver and struck it with her hand. This deflected the bullet, otherwise the postmaster would have been fatally wounded, for his assailant was at close range and fired four shots in all. The shooting occurred at One Hundred and Forty-sixth street and only a short distance from Mr. Morgan's home. He was on his way down town at the time.

An investigation of the life and record of Mackay reveals that he was of a morbid nature and a former inmate of an asylum in Worcester, Mass. That his act was premeditated is made certain by a letter he left, but aside from a fancied grievance against Mr. Morgan and the postoffice authorities concerning the handling of his mail nothing has come to light to indicate why he should have sought to murder the postmaster. His clothing when secured gave up between thirty and forty smokeless cartridges, a heavy slung shot, a knife with a four-inch blade and a clasp knife. A quantity of literature on Socialism and a slung shot similar to the one found on the body were discovered in his room. That he was rational during work hours, however, was attested by the Broadway firm of lawyers by whom he was employed.

Mr. Morgan left his home, accompanied by his daughter, Dorothy, who was accompanying him to the subway station on her way to school. Mackay had been pacing up and down the sidewalk near the corner of Broadway and One Hundred and Forty-sixth street for two hours before the shooting. When Mr. Morgan and his daughter left their home and walked toward Broadway Mackay turned down the side street and met them.

Evidently he had never seen the postmaster, for as he met Mr. Morgan he asked, "Are you Postmaster Morgan?" At Mr. Morgan's affirmative reply Mackay drew his revolver and fired a shot into the postmaster's abdomen.

The wounded man fell to the sidewalk, and as two witnesses of the shooting came running up Mackay lay down on the sidewalk, opened his vest and sent one bullet into his head and another into his heart. He was dead when the first man reached him.

MORSE IS A BANKRUPT

Swears He Has Not Enough Money to Pay His Debts.

New York, Nov. 19.—Charles W. Morse, who two years ago was rated as being worth upwards of $20,000,000, swore under oath, that he had not enough money or securities left from his vast fortune to pay his debts.

This revelation was made when the attorneys for Morse appeared in the United States circuit court of appeals to argue for the admission of Morse to bail. Morse, who has been sentenced to fifteen years' imprisonment at hard labor in the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., was not permitted to leave the Tombs prison when the motion to show cause why he should not be admitted to bail was argued, but an affidavit made by him was read. The motion was argued before Judges Landis, Peck, and Cox.

Wallace MacFarlane appeared in behalf of Morse, and in his endeavor to secure a favorable decision the lawyer quoted from the opinion of Judge Lough in refusing to grant bail, in which Judge Lough said that no amount of bail would be sufficient to insure the appearance in court of such a wealthy man as Morse when he was wanted.

The judges took all the papers in the case and reserved decision on the motion for bail.

25 MILES GROSS TOWN

Philadelphia Finds Itself a City of Distances.

Philadelphia, Nov. 19.—That Philadelphia, too, has some claims to being a city of "magnificent distances" is demonstrated by a little study just made by Mayor's Statistician George W. B. Hicks, the result of a Founders' Week inspiration. He shows it is possible to move forward in a direct line on a journey over twenty-five miles long and not once have to pass the Philadelphia city limits.

It was proposed during Founders' Week to place at every entrance to the city ornamental lamp posts on which would be shown the number of miles to city hall and the number of miles to the opposite extreme of the city's limits.

SHOT DEAD IN PISTOL DUEL

Edward W. Carmack Killed on Street at Nashville.

RESULT OF POLITICAL FEUD

Robin Cooper Fired Three Shots, and Mr. Carmack Fell, Dying Instantly. Cooper Was Shot In the Right Shoulder—Dead Man Was Formerly a United States Senator and Had Many Friends in Washington Among Both Democrats and Republicans.

Nashville, Tenn., Nov. 19.—Former United States Senator Edward Ward Carmack, editor of the Tennesseean, was shot and killed in Seventh avenue by Robin Cooper, son of Colonel Duncan C. Cooper. Mr. Carmack was going north in Seventh avenue, and Colonel Cooper and his son were approaching Seventh avenue in Union street. Soon after they came in sight of one another the shooting began. Robin Cooper fired three shots and Senator Carmack one. Colonel Duncan C. Cooper, it is said, drew a pistol, but did not fire.

Senator Carmack fell to the ground with the trio of shots, dying instantly. Robin Cooper was shot in the right shoulder, but was not severely hurt.

EDWARD W. CARMACK.

The third bullet was in the neck and made a wound one and one-half inches long and caused almost instant death. It is said that the trouble between the men is one of the results of the recent Democratic gubernatorial primary, in which Carmack was defeated. Carmack had, since he became editor of the Tennesseean, been rather caustic in adversely criticizing what he called the Democratic machine, and had printed several editorials about Colonel Cooper.

Within the last few days, it is said, Colonel Cooper told Carmack that these editorial criticisms must cease Monday another editorial reference to Carmack appeared in the Tennesseean, and this is supposed to have been the immediate cause of the trouble.

As soon as Senator Carmack fell on the edge of the street curbing Colonel Duncan Cooper put his arm around Robin Cooper, and both walked a few feet down Seventh avenue to Dr. G. Fort's office, where the slight wound in Robin's shoulder was treated. Dr. Fort said that the wound was not slight.

An ambulance carried the body of Mr. Carmack to an undertaking establishment. The pistol of Mr. Carmack was found lying at his side, with two chambers empty, and it was turned over to an officer. The stump of a cigar that Mr. Carmack had been smoking was also found on the walk beside his body.

Young Cooper was later carried to a hospital and Colonel Cooper is held at police headquarters. Robin Cooper is an attorney, twenty-seven years old and unmarried.

PLUNGED BIG KNIFE INTO MAN'S HEAD

Philadelphia Chinaman Murdered and Robbed.

Philadelphia, Nov. 19.—Jong Fook, a Chinese laundryman, was found murdered in his establishment at Thirtieth and Arch streets, in the center of the city, under mysterious circumstances. He had apparently been attacked while asleep on a bunk in the rear of the laundry and stabbed to death. His face had been viciously slashed with a large butcher knife, which had been finally plunged into his forehead. The knife was imbedded in the skull up to the hilt when the police found the body.

A colored woman who regularly scrubbed out the Chinaman's laundry went to the place and failed to arouse the proprietor. She summoned a policeman, who forced his way into the shop. The Chinaman's blood-stained body lay on the floor near his bunk. The chairs and fixtures in the place had been tossed around, his chest and trunk forced open and the place thoroughly ransacked, which leads the police to believe that the motive of the crime was robbery. The colored woman who first summoned the police and a colored man were arrested on suspicion, but no light has been thrown on the mystery.

which the battleship takes her name, broke over her bow a bottle of champagne, declaring as she did so, "I name thee North Dakota."

Among the invited guests who witnessed the launching of the battleship was John Burke, the newly-elected governor of North Dakota.

The launching of the North Dakota means the introduction of a new type of warship in the American navy. She will be the first American all-big-gun battleship or real Dreadnought to fly the Stars and Stripes.

The North Dakota, which is similar in all respects to the Delaware, which is under construction at Newport News, Va., will have a long forecastle deck extending from the bow almost to the center of the ship. Ten twelve-inch guns are arranged in five turrets, two to a turret, the forward turret being so located that the axis of its guns are twenty-four feet above the water line and just abaft this turret is another, the barbettes of which is of sufficient height for its guns to clear the roof of the forward turret.

Abaft the break of the forecastle deck and also situated on the axis of the ship are two more twelve-inch guns turrets, the guns of the forward turret in this pair being over the roof of the after turret. Aboard and near the stern is the fifth and last of the big turret Naval men declare that no navy in the world possesses a ship of the Dreadnought type in which the guns are better arranged.

For repelling torpedo attack the North Dakota will carry a secondary battery of fourteen five-inch guns. These guns are all mounted broadside and are expected to attain a maximum speed in excess of twenty-one knots an hour.
