He said that one of his neighbors had used grease or tallow with success,

Professor Surface answered as follows

"Replying to your recent letter, I beg to say that it is unusual for rabbits to peel trees at this time of Knight Templar Dance, Masonic year, but I am satisfied that the methods of preventing this destruction during the winter would be efficient and safe now. Among these are the following, stated in the order of preference by myself:

- 1. Painting with white lead and raw linseed oil, made as thick as house paint,
- 2. Painting or spraying with the boiled lime-sulfur wash containing considerable sediment.
- 3. Rubbing the trees with tallow, blood, of a treshly killed rabbit, or the entrails of any animal.
- 4. Protecting by means of wire netting.
- 5. Use of poison, traps, dogs and gun.

"As a matter of fact, Number 5 should be combined with any one of the others. During the winter rabbits will often leave the trunks of trees alone if freshly cut branches are dropped on the ground where they can not fail to get them. I do not know if this would work in summer, but recommend a trial.

"A gentleman has just written to me that he used coal tar successfully for borers, but did not state the kind of trees on which he used it. I am seeking further information on the subject. If coal tar or gas did not injure his trees, it would be effective in preventing seasons in New York and is said to damage by borers and rabbits, but I do not think it is safe to recommend this as a preventive, for, in my opinion, there is some danger revolves about Billy, whose father has been murdered. Billy takes of damage to the trees, excepting under unusually favorable conditions. I once saw what was formerly a nice orchard that had been killed by the application of mixed tar and linseed oil."

Autumn Arbor Day.

State Superintendent Schaffer has issued the following: HALL TO THE TREES.

"Patient and generous, mothers of mankind; Arching the hills, the minstrels of sense The trees bless all, and then, brown mantled, stand The sturdy prophets of a golden land."

During May of last year meetings were held at the White House in Washington for the purpose of promoting the conservation of our natural resources. These meetings were attended by many of our leading statesmen, scientists and captains of industry. In the opening address the President said:

"We began with an unapproached heritage of forests; more than half the timber is gone. We began with coal fields more extensive than those of any other nation, and with iron ores regarded as inexhaustible, and many experts now declare that the end of both coal and iron is in sight."

We derive most of our food from the fields and the streams, from the garden, the orchard and the forest. The want of iuel may be supplied by the use of water power to generate electricity that can be changed into light, heat and motive power. On The other hand, it takes decades of growth to reproduce an orchard, or a forest, and ten thousand years to form soil a foot in depth. It is claimed that forests help to clouds and rainfall. They surely aid in regulating the flow of the water in our streams and rivers, and in lessening the size and fremency of the floods and freshets which carry off silt and soil and hereby diminish the fertility of he land. The value of trees for shade, for eauty, for fuel, for timber and for ther economic purposes should be mphasized by every teacher. The slanting and care of trees, their rotection from fire, insects and other enemies, the wonderful proesses of budding and grafting hould be taught in every school.

A letter was received at the Di- inches in size, white or colors, vision of Zoology of the Pennsylva- printed on short notice. nia Department of Agriculture, in reference to the "blight" that attacks quince, pear, apple, and other trees, but especially the two first mentioned. The letter was worded as follows:

"For a number of years we have grown quinces, and almost every season we have noticed the ends of a considerable number of the year it has been so to a considerable extent, and we find that it occurs Will you please be kind enough to let us have some information in regard to the subject?"

State Zoologist Surface replied, saying:

"This no doubt is due to a plant disease known as Fire Blight, Twig Blight, Black Blight, Pear Blight, and other names. It is a bacterial disease and exists within the twigs. It can not, therefore, be destroyed by sprays because external applications will not reach it. It is necessary to cut off the blighted parts, being sure to cut off some distance. or at least one-half foot, below the blighted portion, and gather the twigs thus removed and burn them, occasionally dipping the knife into some disinfecting material, like dilute formalin solution or turpentine, in order to sterilize it and prevent the possibility of carrying the blight germs from one twig to another. You may find some blighted spots in the bark, and these likewise should be cut out and washed with turpentine or

"This disease infects the quince, apple and pear, and in some places is very destructive. As it can not be cured in the sense of actually curing a branch that is blighted, it is necessary to prevent its spread important to look over all such trees with blighted twigs and remove them at this season of the year, before the leaves fall, as they can be more casily found now than during the winter.

It is probable that Blight spreads most in the early spring when the sap commences to ooze from the Yarn Will Cut Steel.

Yarn, with powdered stone, can cut a steel bar. Major McClaughry, warden of the federal prison at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., once found a prisoner who was supposed to be pounding stone working away at one of the bars to an outside window. The man was induced to give a demonstration. A grating of the same description was placed in his cell and a guard stationed over him to watch the cutting process. With the limestone dust and silicate from the stone pile, the yarn from his sock and a little water, the man cut the bessemer steel bar in eighteen working hours. With some fine emery, a chalk line and two wooden handholds to save his fingers he made a clean cut of the other bessemer bar in five house.
