FIRES THAT NEVER GO OUT

Flames of a Buddhist Temple-Sicilian Fire of Vengeance.

In Slam is a fire that not only lasts or years but has what have been antly termed "lineal descendants." It is to be found in a Buddhist temple mar Bangkok, where every fourth year at a certain period the pricals light a fresh fire in a big brazier. This lame is kept alive for four years and s in turn extinguished after supplying a brand to ignite its successor. Inasmuch as this practice has obtained for upward of two centuries the Buddhist fire of Bangkok is in a sense the oldest in the world.

Another long term fire is said to exist at Sarhad, Persia. This flame is a symbol of religious fervor and it is death to extinguish it; it has burned for seventy years. In explanation of this curious rite it is said that the Persians, rigid Mohammedans and regarding their former fire worshipping faith with detestation, nevertheless suffer the Sarhad flame to continue to display their gratitude for a service rendered a high official of the Persian Government many years ago. At that time, it is said, a plous Parsee, who had come to trade at Sarhad was the happy means of saving the Grand Vizier from assassination. So the grateful Shah of that day ordered that the fire lighted by the Parsee should be kept alive indefinitely.

There are some regions of the earth, like those inhabited by the Esquimaux, where the motive for retaining fires for long periods lies in the great difficulty of obtaining means for lighting new ones. One traveller reports seeing a fire in Lapland that had not been extinguished during seven years. It had been carried from place to place in an old ship's bucket.

The keeping up of fires for years at a time is said to be sometimes an incident of a Sicilian vendetta. The wronged individual when lighting his "fire of vengeance" is said to take solemn oath that it shall not be extinguished until his thirst for revenge shall have been satisfied by the death of the offending person. There is on record a trial in Palermo wherein it was shown that the accused, charged
