You Will Miss It

If you don't subscribe for this paper for the coming year. It will contain all the worth while news of the world, at home and abroad, with the accent on the AT HOME.

The Exorbitant Cost of Government.

Senator Aldrich greatly incensed some of his Republican colleagues, the other day, by declaring, in a speech upon the floor of the chamber of which he is the manager, that "if I were a business man and were given permission to manage the affairs of the government I would run them at $300,000,000 a year less than it is now costing to run them."

Since the inauguration of President McKinley, in the spring of 1897, the expenses of the government have increased at the rate of nearly $500,000,000 a year. The expenses of the Spanish war were considerable, of course, and afforded ample excuse for the increased cost of government during the administration of that lamented chief magistrate. But the Spanish war was over and all the extraordinary expenses attached to it discharged before calamity elevated Theodore Roosevelt to the office of President.

Senator Hale told Senator Aldrich, the Washington correspondent already quoted assures us, that his "declaration made it seem that the Republican party had squandered billions of dollars during the period it has remained in power." And that is an exact fact. During the period since the elevation of Roosevelt a strife has been maintained to multiply offices, increase salaries, add to the cost of public services in other ways, until an aggregate of expenditures has been reached that was never dreamed of even during McKinley's administration.

Lippincott's For March.

It is quite evident that age cannot wither, nor custom stale, the infinite variety of Lippincott's Magazine. Each month it bobs up serenely with a first-class complete novel, seven or eight entrancing short-stories, and a wealth of miscellaneous matter, all timely and readable.

The March issue opens with a romance of the automobile, "The Substitute," by Eleanor M. Ingram. This is a remarkable piece of fiction—remarkably interesting, remarkably realistic. There are thrills all through it, and the description of the motor-race at the end is so vivid and enthralling that it affects one very much as would one's actual presence at the track.

Nor are the short-stories a whit behind the novel in point of excellence. They are "The Smile of a Lady," by Owen Oliver; "Transients in Nineveh," by Will Levington Comfort; "A Bargain in Rugs," by James Raymond Perry; "The Hills of Dawn," by Mahel Nelson Thurston; "Going Up," by Ella Middleton Tybout; "The Case of David Giddy," by Ellis O. Jones, and "The Hold-Up," by Roscoe Gilmore Stott.

The third of Joseph M. Rogers' series of six articles on "What is Wrong With Our Public Schools" deals with "The Teacher." As might have been expected, these papers are creating something of a sensation in pedagogical circles, and, to some extent, outside. "The Teacher" is one of the most important, as well as one of the most interesting, of the series.

In "Ways of the Hour" the following subjects are discussed: "Grand Opera in English," by Minna Thomas Antrim; "Rich and Poor Dependents," by Bolton Hall; "An Old Friend," by Thomas L. Masson; "Chew Your Universe," by Homer Croy; "Are all the Great Authors Dead?" by Littell McClung. Thomas L. Masson also contributes a short and intensely funny sketch entitled "Argument."

Poems by Florence Earle Coates, William R. Benet, Ethel Talbot, and Rose Chambers Goode; spicy epigrams by Minna Thomas Antrim, and "Walnuts and Wine"—sixteen pages of signed jokes, jingles and anecdotes—complete the number. It's a big quarter's worth.

Diet for the Stout.

Stout people should limit the amount of potatoes and sugar they eat, as these articles of food favor the deposit of fat underneath the skin. Dry toast, lean meat, stewed fruit, and fish are suitable foods in treating obesity, and rich, fat, sweet, and greasy dishes ought to be avoided.

Heroic Treatment.

Little Willie wore his stocking inside out, a habit shocking. To correct his naughty whim, Mother turned the hose on him.

THE SOOTHING SPRAY of Ely's Liquid Cream Balm, used in an atomizer, is an unspokeable relief to sufferers from Catarrh. Some of them describe it as a Godsend, and no wonder. The thick, foul discharge is dislodged and the patient breathes freely, perhaps for the first time in weeks. Liquid Cream Balm contains all the healing, purifying elements of the solid form, and it never fails to satisfy. Sold by all druggists for 75c., including spraying tube, or mailed by Ely Bros., 96 Warren Street, New York.
