

Thomas Corwin and the Whigs. The Gazette is of opinion that we do "not seem to apprehend" the position of the Ohio senator named above, "as contra-distinguished from that of the main body of the Whigs." The Gazette is right—we do not. More we know as well as our neighbor that "there are some things too well established to be affected by the touch of brazen-faced falsehood." And the fact that the whigs of the north, as a body, did hold the same sentiments, occupied the same position, in relation to the war with Mexico, as that shadowed forth in Senator Corwin's speech, is one of them! And they in reality occupy the same position now—their late apparent somewhat to the contrary notwithstanding! When our neighbor published that speech and endorsed it—when his two federal contemporaries in the county also published and endorsed it—when his party, in doors and out, re-echoed such endorsement, and applauded its author for his bold and manly stand, denounced all those who differed with them, and personally used their influence to cry down an attempt to raise a volunteer company here, we certainly thought and still think "they declined to aid in prosecuting the war." When we saw that speech in every whip paper that came under our observation—in every one of which it was applauded and endorsed, and in none of which we saw a word of censure or condemnation of any of the monstrous sentiments contained therein, we certainly thought the position of the whig party could be in no way "contra-distinguished from that of Thomas Corwin!" We think so still—we shall continue to think so—we shall continue to say so—until our neighbor explains the difference between the author of a sentiment and an endorser of one.

At Baltimore, on the 28th ult., a huge black ruffian, named Charles Walker, was convicted for ravishing a little white girl, 13 years of age, and infecting her with a most loathsome disease. Death is his portion by the laws of that State.

A Good Toast. One of the numerous family of Smith's, at the recent dinner given at New Orleans to Col. May, gave the following toast: "The health of one yet in the May of life, Charles May—Last May we dined with him as Captain May—This May he dines with us as Colonel May. May we dine with him next May as General May."

Under the pretensions of "investigating" the doings of the General Government, there has always been a party which has opposed every important measure of government, and whenever they had a chance to take sides with the enemies of this nation, they have been eager to do so. They have been opposed to the administrations of all the Presidents, except that of four years under the senior Adams and four weeks under Gen. Harrison. When by an almost unanimous vote of Congress it was declared that a state of war existed by the action of Mexico, they assailed that Congress voted a lie, and that President Polk alone declared war, and sent Gen. Taylor with his army, into the peaceful Republic of Mexico. Why all this? Because the United States must be made out of fit in the wrong, as that party has always found her! "The war is aggressive," say they, and in order to prove this, have proclaimed to the world the most palpable and foolish falsehoods, that men making any pretension of regard for candor or truth, were ever engaged in propagating. "The Neucos is the boundary of Texas," and General Taylor was sent into Mexico." It has often been asked, did Mexico call the Neucos the boundary? We happen to have a history of Mexico and its States, which was written more than twenty years since. Of the State of Texas it says: "The Province of Texas comprises that vast extent of country between the Rio del Norte and the western boundary of the United States. This extensive region was claimed by the United States as a part of Louisiana, but this claim was relinquished to Spain by the Florida treaty." (P. 122.) Did the Revolution of Texas, and her subsequent national independence, cut her off to the Neucos? The Rio del Norte was the boundary given to that State while a province of Mexico; the State revolted, became independent, and was at last received into this Union; and where is the boundary now? When the Mexicans crossed the Del Norte and killed about ninety of our soldiers, upon our own soil, before an American gun had been fired, these patriots asserted their "periodicals, that they were killed by the Indians, and not by the Mexican army." No, no, the peaceful "down-trodden," virtuous Mexicans would not kill our men, nor make war upon us. They are right. Ergo, it must have been some ferocious Indians!

After General Arista, with a strong Mexican army, had marched into the State of Texas, and taken a position between Gen. Taylor and his supplies, and when the news of the battles of the eighth and ninth of May had reached us, they declared this transported in Mexico! and we read in "glaring capitals," that "our men had slain ten thousand," and the burning of Matamoros (which was the first news, though incorrect) was "arson."

Defending our own territory from invasion was murder; but some ugly Indians killed our soldiers, and of course Mexico was innocent! We have frequently heard these patriots whose own army might be cut off, and wish that Polk was in the front of the battle and the first one killed! What a noble band of patriots! One of the same stamp by the name of Rufus King, during the last war with England, offered to furnish a rope with which to hang Madison. This was done upon the floor of Congress. What papers are they which have never mentioned the outrages that Mexico have committed upon us? Mexico is right, the English, the French, and the Algerines are right, but our own government is always wrong. In angustis amici boni apparent.
