Rough Notes by the Way.

Correspondence of the Erie Observer.

CAMARGO, MEXICO, Oct. 24, 1847.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Being detained at this point for a short time, the thought struck me that an account of my passage from New Orleans would afford me amusement and be perhaps interesting to your readers. I'm far from believing myself the worst man in "these parts," but with all my patience these vexatious delays beget in me a most irreverent desire to swear, and so I take to writing as some do to drink, "just to drown sorrow."

It was the evening of the 13th of October that we left the dangerous vicinity of the Crescent City, on board a U. S. transport schooner, and on the following day about five in the evening made sail from the Balize.—The Pilot left us with the pleasant assurance that we should not only have a quick but pleasant passage, and so

"Adieu, adieu, my native land fades o'er the waters blue,
The night winds sigh, the breakers roar and shrieks the wild sea-mew."

If I did not give way to all the sad reflections of childhood, I was nevertheless not without some very serious thoughts at leaving its loved shores; but then with my elastic temperament these feelings never could long predominate over the savory smell that now issued from the cabin. Some of the passengers however positively refused the joys of "tea and turnout," and it was remarked that they were a shade paler than usual. Was it the thought of "sweethearts or wives" that blanched their cheeks? Surely no dignified gentleman could be so vulgarly unpoetical, at such a moment, as to get sick and vomit; but it was even so.

The moon rose in all her resplendent majesty and shed a mellow light over the waters of the Gulf, the breeze freshened, the bright phosphorescent foam flashed around our prow and sparkled in our wake. The schooner was put S. by S. W. half W., and sped merrily on her course at the rate of six knots an hour.

I am not particularly poetical at present, and if I was it's doubtful whether I could do justice to a sunrise or sunset scene on the Ocean Suffice it to say that the sun did rise and did set for three successive days, nor omitted it's presence on the fourth, for on that day we made that most desolate of all spots on God's footstool, Brazos Santiago. Our passage was like hundreds of others; light winds, occasionally freshening and then dying away; schools of porpoise leaped up around us, the dolphin chased the flying-fish, and occasionally a lost and fatigued bird sought rest upon our rigging. Our Captain, who by the way, was a regular son of the "old Keystone," kept a rich larder, and between whist, acre, brandy-wash and spiced puddings, who could find room or conscience to grumble!—not your honorable correspondent—sure.

Brazos Santiago is one of a series of islands that, with occasional channels between them, extend from the Rio Grande up to within twenty-two miles of Corpus Christi; the upper extremity of this one is used as a government depot, and the quartermasters have made quite a town of it, dividing it off into streets, squares, &c. The Greenwood, an old river steamer, lies high and dry on land, and is used as a public hotel. The houses are built on stilts, a commendable caution against rising tides. A half a dozen government steamers and as many schooners were lying here with plenty of yellow fever on board. There was quite a disagreeable smell of decomposed matter, an over supply of flies, which taken in connection with the fever, I confess a nervous disquietude as to tarrying thereabouts—but then it did not amount to fear, oh no! Nearly opposite, on the main land, and about three miles distant, is Point Isabel, another government town, with a general hospital in it. It was from this place that Gen. Taylor marched on the 7th of May, '46. I am not aware of its possessing any other distinguished feature worthy of notice.

My course lay up the Rio Grande; so on the morning of the 17th inst. I tumbled my baggage into a forage train and "toddled" for the "mouth," a distance of eight miles. This is probably the largest depot on this division, and a very healthy position at the present time, which is rather strange. At the little town of Bagdad on the opposite side of the river, (and a sweet place by the way,) lay a dozen steamers and a few schooners in all the variety of taking in and discharging cargo, repairing, &c., together with an auctioneer who was selling condemned horses, gave the whole quite a bustling city air. The face of the country here is at present most entirely covered with water and the crookedness of the river is proverbial. As an instance, after the boat had been under way about two hours, during which she had headed to every point of the compass. I went on deck and could see Point Isabel, Brazos Santiago and the "Mouth" neither of them by a straight line being more than ten miles distant.

Reveille found us next morning at Matamoras. The horses were neighing at a cavalry camp hard by, and the rays of the morning sun were reflected back from the burnished arms of the sentinels, as they paced to and fro upon the walls of Fort Brown. In a short walk through town I saw a detachment of the 10th Infantry "on morning drill," that omnibus which the editor of the Flag had been making himself quite merry about, and heard that the fever was raging rather severely.—This was sufficient, and I—sloped for the boat.

Above Matamoras the scenery becomes interesting; the banks are higher, and adorned with clusters of wild flowers, sattinwood, musquit, Spanish cedar, and the deep green foliage of the ebbony tree, together with other shrubbery too numerous to mention—especially if, like myself, one happens to be ignorant of their names.

The crops are rather slim this season, and there is every where present indications of a thorough inundation; I am prepared to say, however, that very few of the inhabitants have been drowned, for from every "rancho" came crowds of the half naked swarthy natives, from the grand parents down, to see our little craft as she went puffing by.

The second night we laid up at a "rancho," and here for the sake of a small speculation in gingerbread and "segaritos," the old boss of the establishment gave us a fandango. Our Captain furnished a fidler, whose flattering cognomen was Sheepskin, but usually abbreviated to "Sheep," and by permitting ourselves to be roundly cheated in the above mentioned articles (which we gave the adorable fair sex by way of refreshments) we managed with the aid of about a dozen "senorettas," of rather questionable beauty, to have quite hoe-down in the moonlight.

The next night we lay at Reynoso, a government depot which is now being broken up. The town is situate upon a range of high lands that take their rise hereabouts and run parallel with the Rio Grande. Without anything particular occurring, we made this miserable Mexican hole, in another twenty four hours. The town is situate on the San Juan river, three miles from its mouth, and a very pretty stream it is too.

The only bit of news stirring at present, is the killing of our express rider, taking our mails between this and Monterey. There is said to be some five hundred guerillas between this and the latter place, and the trains necessarily go strongly guarded. I shall leave for Mier to-morrow, from which, or some other place, you may expect to hear from me.

Yours, "OMEGO."

GROSS BANK SWINDLING.—An injunction was laid on the Memphis Bank of Tennessee, on the 26th ult. at the instance of Mr. Evan Rogers, of Philadelphia, who owns a large number of shares. Under this process the bank, it is supposed, will go into liquidation and be finally wound up. The Memphis Eagle of the 30th ult. says:—

That several hours after the writ of injunction had been served on the President and Messrs. Looney, Connell and Malthie, directors, they, with Mr. Gaines, another director, held a meeting in the bank and discounted each other's notes to an amount which cleaned the vaults of it as it may an enough of the notes of the suspended bank to make the amount $50.000.

That they also discounted the president's (Dr. Fowlke-) notes to an amount sufficient to take up the bills drawn by the several directors—for Fowlke's benefit we suppose—on Cross, Connell & Co., thus substituting his individual paper at twelve months, partly for their own responsibilities as drawers, &c., to a very large amount, leaving Fowlkes standing debtor on the books of the bank, it is said, for near four hundred thousand dollars!

This being done, they afterwards surrendered the keys of the stripped vault and bank to the sheriff, and walked out! If this does not cap the climax of bold financiering, then we give up. Beats Plainfield.

EXTENSIVE FORGERY.—Great consternation existed in Boston, on Friday morning, among the "shanks and brokers," caused by the discovery of extensive forgeries having been committed by George Miller a Broker of that city. It appears that he has had some heavy business transactions with S. F. Belknap, of Concord, one of the largest railroad contractors in the country. With the aid of these genuine notes, Miller manufactured over $65,000. The forgery was discovered by Mr Belknap, who much to his surprise was notified that four notes of about $10,000 were due and waiting payment.

Mr. ATTLEE, the wife of Wm. H. Attlee, Esq. was given up by Drs. Neale of Washington, D. C. and McClintock of Philadelphia, Dr. Rowland D. C. & Dr. Chew her physicians all tho ught she must die. She had every appearance of being in consumption, and was so pronounced by our physicians—Sherman's Balsam was given and it cured her.

Mrs. GARRABRANTZ, of Bull's Ferry, was also cured of consumption by this Balsam when all other remedies failed to give relief—she was reduced to a skeleton. Dr. A. C. Hall the Dentist, 251 Broadway, has witnessed its effects in several cases and is not ever medicine offered to the public but the Balsam operated like a charm. Dr. C. A. Lee witnessed its wonderful effects in curing Asthma, when it never failed to do good. Spitting Blood, at once stopped by its use. Liver complaint, and Dyspepsia, it never fails to relieve. Pain in the breast and sides, Whooping Cough, Influenza, Croup, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Inflammation of the Lungs, and all diseases of the throat, and even pretended Consumption.

Beals gave it to her to use—saw who was laboring under Consumption, and to another sorely afflicted with the Asthma. In both cases its effects were immediate, soon restoring them to comfortable health.
