THE UNKNOWN WRECK

BY MRS. A. M. EDMOND.

It drifted off the dismal sea,
The spot of wind and wave,
A frail and shattered thing was she,
The deep deluded grave.

No footsteps tread her lonely deck,
No stalwart form was there,
As she plunged, a lonely wreck
With broken mast and bare.

O where are they who manned the ship,
Her brave and gallant crew,
Who saw her low a careering dip,
In yonder depth of blue?

Ask not of landmen where ascends
The curling smoke of hope,
Or where like distant music bleeds
The city's busy hum.

Search not for them among the crowd
Who rove with footstep free,
Nor seek in the churchyard shroud
But seek them of the sea—

The stormy sea with cavern dark
A thousand fathoms low,
There lie the men who manned the bark
That foundered long ago.

They sleep where countless wrecks are strown
For hands that toil no more,
Where glittering treasures all unknown
Adorn the coral floor.

Float on, float on, O lonely wreck,
And tell thy tale of woe,
Where sleep the men who tread thy deck
A thousand fathoms low.

The giant waves have wildly rung
Their wail of woe, their wail,
But thou with stern, saddest tongue,
Dost still the tidings tell.

ny of skaters. Mademoiselle Eugenie, then a strikingly beautiful brunette of eighteen was excitedly, though somewhat coquettishly, attired in a short skirt and tightly-fitting jacket of dark blue cloth, richly trimmed with black fur. Upon her head she wore a small cap; her raven hair was put plainly back; the rich brown of her complexion was brilliant with a glow of pleasure, and her large dark eyes were flashing back the sunshine.

After amusing herself as usual for awhile, Eugenie observed a burly English corporal, with whom she had a slight skating acquaintance, progressing leisurely toward her, drawing a miniature sleigh. This, she presently saw, contained the first-born of the corporal's house, a stout boy of about half a year old, well wrapped in furs and flannels, and rosy-cheeked with the healthful wintry air.—Eugenie glided along by the little vehicle, chatting pleasantly, and delighting the proud father by her praises of his pretty child, till suddenly a wild thought darted through her brain, she caught the infant from the cushions laid out on her, the Swiss manner, putting up one hand to steady it, and was off like a flash! As for the corporal, "his sensations were more easily imagined than described," to use a novel expression. He stood stupefied and transfixed for a moment, then gave a cry between a groan and a yell, and started in pursuit. He was a tolerable skater but he knew not with whom he had to compete. Eugenie was now roads ahead of him, looking back and laughing provokingly; now passing so near that he almost grasped her dress; now circling about him with fearful rapidity. At last the poor man became furious, swore roundly at the mischievous girl, and called for aid in rescuing his child.—Three or four, Henri among the number, laughing heartily, set out in eager pursuit; but Eugenie, after eluding them at every point, flew back to the little sleigh, lowered the child from her head, kissed him hastily, laid him smiling and unharmed upon his pillow, and was off again.

Among the interested, though inactive, spectators of this strange scene, were two British officers, then stationed at Montreal.—Captain Hamilton and Lieutenant Thurston. The former was highly connected and the heir to considerable wealth, had a soldierly appearance, a symmetrical form, and a fine manly face, happy, and without, innocent in its expression.

Thurston was a man of the world, with a peculiar English physiognomy; was considered handsome from his companion, to whom he was an attached and devoted friend.

On leaving the river, after Eugenie and her brother had disappeared, Hamilton maintained a thoughtful silence until he reached his quarters, when he exclaimed—"Thurston, we must take the acquaintance of General Leroux, for by the powers, I would give my commission to know that girl! She is a glorious creature—glorious creature!"

"Fudge, Hamilton; she is a merciful little savage—a very agreeable, running away with babies, and frightening worthy fathers out of their wits."

Our officers found little difficulty in gaining an entrance into the hospitable mansion of the courteous Gen. Leroux, and ere many months were past, they were on a footing of familiar intercourse with his family. Captain Hamilton's admiration for Eugenie deepened into love, and many things seemed to augur favorably for the success of his suit. The father and brother of the lady were both won over by the many excellencies of the young soldier's character, his intellectual qualifications and the charm of his manner; but the heart of Eugenie herself was not so easily conquered.

Her lover soon ascertained that many of her feelings, tastes, and early prejudices were opposed to the interest which he sought to create. First of all, her amor patrie was far stronger than that of most women; she passionately loved la belle France, and as passionately hated her enemies. Thence she cherished in the depths of her soul, that wild, enthusiastic, adoring love for the memory of Napoleon which none but a true Bonapartist can fully understand.

When a mere child, she had seen the great hero—she had a distinct recollection of his face, of his winning smile, as he addressed a few playful words to her. Henri Leroux even declared to Hamilton that her right cheek, which had received the imperial salute, had been injured from that time, no less august lips having pressed the sacred spot. To her father and brother Eugenie never spoke of
