

THE OBSERVER

THE WORLD IS GOVERNED TOO MUCH.

SATURDAY, MARCH 4, 1848.

NUMBER 42.

VOLUME XVIII.

THE OBSERVER IS PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY, AT FIVE CENTS.

A. P. DURLIN & B. F. SLOAN, Proprietors and Publishers.

OFFICE CORNER OF STATE STREET AND PUBLIC SQUARE, CHICAGO, ILL.

TERMS OF THE PAPER: One copy 50 cents per month; six copies $2.50 per annum.

ADVERTISING: One square, one year, $5.00; one square, six months, $3.00; one square, three months, $1.50.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY

BENJAMIN F. DENISON, Attorney at Law, No. 11, French Street, Erie, Pa.

KELSO & LOOMIS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in Dry Goods, Groceries, &c.

W. WARREN, Sole Agent for the Erie, Pa., District of the Erie, Pa., District.

T. W. MOORE, Dealer in Groceries, Provisions, Wines, Liquors, &c.

MARSHALL & LOCKWOOD, Attorneys at Law, Office up stairs in the Tammany Hall building.

SMITH JACKSON, Dealer in Dry Goods, Groceries, Hardware, Queens Ware, &c.

JOHN H. MILLER, Commission Merchant, Office in Exchange Buildings.

B. N. HUBERT & CO., Wholesale and Retail Dealers in Dry Goods, Groceries, &c.

BENJAMIN GRANT, Attorney and Counselor at Law, Office No. 2 State St.

GRAHAM & THOMPSON, Attorneys & Counselors at Law, Office on French Street.

I. ROSENZWEIG & CO., Dealers in Foreign and Domestic Dry Goods, Ready-Made Clothing, &c.

GALBRAITH & LANE, Attorneys and Counselors at Law, Office on Sixth Street.

G. LOOMIS & CO., Dealers in Watches, Jewelry, Silver, German Silvers, &c.

WILLIAMS & WRIGHT, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in Dry Goods, Groceries, &c.

WILLIAM RIBLET, Cabinet Maker, Upholster and Undertaker, State Street.

S. DICKINSON, M. D., Physician and Surgeon, Office on South Street.

WALKER & COOK, General Forwarding, Commission, and Produce Merchants.

JOSEPH KELSO, Manufacturers of Tin, Coping and Sheet-Iron, &c.

GESTER, SINKETT & CHESTER, Sole Founders, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in Stoves, Hollow-ware, &c.

BURTON & PERKINS, Wholesale and Retail Dealers in Drugs, Medicines, &c.

C. M. TIBBALS, Dealer in Dry Goods, Groceries, &c. No. 111, Chesapeake, Erie, Pa.

CARTER & BROTHER, Dealers in Drugs, Medicines, Paints, Oils, Dye, &c.

WELCOME TO GEN. SHIELDS.

From the death-struggle of a hero, Where the eagle's rattle Echoes o'er the tented folds.

Brilliant flowers of Fame's twin sig. Around thy brow are boldly shining.

When our flag, blood-stained and drooping, Stood where thou wast faintly stooping.

THE IRISH DAUGHTER. A TRUE STORY.

BY GRACE GREENWOOD.

"And so you won't go with me, Jamme?" "Hush, darling—you know I cannot leave my mother, lone widow that she is.

"Oh, Jamme, Jamme, this parting is quite breaking my heart—but don't ask me to stay again—God bless you, and keep you there."

James was just one of a warm-hearted, high-spirited, frank, and handsome Irishman. Mary was a fair, blue-eyed girl of eighteen.

Some four years previous to the period of the parting scene, with which we commenced this sketch, Mary's only brother, Willie Conway, went out to America.

For the first week of the voyage all was fair above and calm below; but then came on squally and tempestuous weather.

Poor Mary! the same sense of filial duty which made her go with her parents, forbade her urging her lover to accompany her.

For the first week of the voyage all was fair above and calm below; but then came on squally and tempestuous weather.

Poor Mary! the same sense of filial duty which made her go with her parents, forbade her urging her lover to accompany her.

For the first week of the voyage all was fair above and calm below; but then came on squally and tempestuous weather.

Poor Mary! the same sense of filial duty which made her go with her parents, forbade her urging her lover to accompany her.

For the first week of the voyage all was fair above and calm below; but then came on squally and tempestuous weather.

Poor Mary! the same sense of filial duty which made her go with her parents, forbade her urging her lover to accompany her.

For the first week of the voyage all was fair above and calm below; but then came on squally and tempestuous weather.

Poor Mary! the same sense of filial duty which made her go with her parents, forbade her urging her lover to accompany her.

For the first week of the voyage all was fair above and calm below; but then came on squally and tempestuous weather.

Poor Mary! the same sense of filial duty which made her go with her parents, forbade her urging her lover to accompany her.

For the first week of the voyage all was fair above and calm below; but then came on squally and tempestuous weather.

Poor Mary! the same sense of filial duty which made her go with her parents, forbade her urging her lover to accompany her.

For the first week of the voyage all was fair above and calm below; but then came on squally and tempestuous weather.

Poor Mary! the same sense of filial duty which made her go with her parents, forbade her urging her lover to accompany her.

age and terrified childhood, safely up to the crowded stern, and saw them, one by one, led down by ropes to the rock beneath.

"Where are you going?" said the mother, faintly. "Back to get some covering for father and you."

"Young woman," said a seaman, standing by, "it may be death to do that—the ship may part any minute."

Before a half hour had passed, a loud crash was heard, and a mountain wave swept away the whole of the forward part of the vessel.

"The angels have called hence thy mother, and thou hast indeed known the grief of griefs; but if still unconvinced to him who would thy bereavement, rethink thee of one whose own hands laid to rest her best beloved."

The unfortunate met sympathy and kindness in the fisherman's house, which she reached at last, and the next day Mary Conway and her nephew proceeded to the nearest town.

Rest, then, old saint, with thy cross upon thy breast! Though thou liest not deep in the doer's bosom of thy native land.

At length the mother seemed to arouse herself, and opening her faded blue eyes, those eyes which Mary had so often looked for hope and encouragement, she said: "I will try my darling—for my child's sake, the good God may give me strength to pass through the troubled waters."

She was awakened by a rush of feet on deck, and the cry of "Let go the anchors!" succeeded by the rattle of chains—a heavy plunge—another—a silence as of death.

Mary found a neat and comfortable home awaiting her, and soon life seemed not so cold around her—a few sunbeams fell upon her path, and the crushed flower, happiness, took root in her heart again.

"I'm glad to see you," said the old man, who came to establish himself in the city of Gotham, and as he did not know exactly what "fine" would be the most desirable.

"I'm glad to see you," said the old man, who came to establish himself in the city of Gotham, and as he did not know exactly what "fine" would be the most desirable.

"I'm glad to see you," said the old man, who came to establish himself in the city of Gotham, and as he did not know exactly what "fine" would be the most desirable.

"I'm glad to see you," said the old man, who came to establish himself in the city of Gotham, and as he did not know exactly what "fine" would be the most desirable.

"I'm glad to see you," said the old man, who came to establish himself in the city of Gotham, and as he did not know exactly what "fine" would be the most desirable.

his work, with a heavy eye, and the favored blood rushing through his veins like lava, flung himself upon his bed, and never rose again.

On the day of the burial, little Allick was taken ill, with a milder form of the same disease, and there was none of kindred, save his, broken-hearted sister, to follow Willie Conway to the grave.

My dear reader, I have not been playing upon your sympathies by fables. I have not been beguiling you with a fiction.

"The angels have called hence thy mother, and thou hast indeed known the grief of griefs; but if still unconvinced to him who would thy bereavement, rethink thee of one whose own hands laid to rest her best beloved."

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

ESTABLISHING A SCIENCE. BY J. M. FIELD.

The persecution of the Mesmerists will one day make a curious volume, for they will be written, of course. The disciples of Galileo Harvey, Jenner, &c., have been exalted in their struggles and suffering.

On the day of the burial, little Allick was taken ill, with a milder form of the same disease, and there was none of kindred, save his, broken-hearted sister, to follow Willie Conway to the grave.

My dear reader, I have not been playing upon your sympathies by fables. I have not been beguiling you with a fiction.

"The angels have called hence thy mother, and thou hast indeed known the grief of griefs; but if still unconvinced to him who would thy bereavement, rethink thee of one whose own hands laid to rest her best beloved."

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

after me they cum, an perhaps there wasn't the fullest stampee down three pairs of stars that ever occurred in Michigan!

On the day of the burial, little Allick was taken ill, with a milder form of the same disease, and there was none of kindred, save his, broken-hearted sister, to follow Willie Conway to the grave.

My dear reader, I have not been playing upon your sympathies by fables. I have not been beguiling you with a fiction.

"The angels have called hence thy mother, and thou hast indeed known the grief of griefs; but if still unconvinced to him who would thy bereavement, rethink thee of one whose own hands laid to rest her best beloved."

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

HOW TO LEAD MANKIND. If masters fully understood the influence which even the slightest personal attention produces on the minds of their workmen, they would be more lavish than they are of a simple act of justice which can cost them so little, and would profit them so much.

On the day of the burial, little Allick was taken ill, with a milder form of the same disease, and there was none of kindred, save his, broken-hearted sister, to follow Willie Conway to the grave.

My dear reader, I have not been playing upon your sympathies by fables. I have not been beguiling you with a fiction.

"The angels have called hence thy mother, and thou hast indeed known the grief of griefs; but if still unconvinced to him who would thy bereavement, rethink thee of one whose own hands laid to rest her best beloved."

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.

The professor begged to appoint a more proper place and hour, &c., according to the apprehensions of "the crowd," evincing respect to their feelings.