which came a familliar "how are you now" as they passed. The commerce of the interior has heretofore been conducted altogether on pack mules, but the Americans, in this, as in other matters, are effecting a revolution, which is rendered easy from the large amount of articles sold in the country when our army loft. Those ominous letters U. S., are rolling over Mexico in every direction. We met a lot of our wagons driven and man- 24 P. M. aged by Mexican soldiers'-a Government train. The Indians have recently been killing the people and sending off mules and horses, and the natives are terribly scared. One evening a follow came to our camp and begged to be permitted to travel with us to Parras. We were a little sore over loosing our pistols and confessed to our friends a dislike to the fellow's countenance, but the poor devil seemed quite humble and very cowardly. and through pitty he was permitted to stay. The third day afterwards, our nankeen colored friend decamped, bearing with him $65 in cash, and bleading me to the amount of a coat, in the pocket of which was my last agency by Carter & Brother, No. 6, Reed House. ume in manuscript on the moral and religious law addapted to the latitude of Mexico, enough notes of travel to make this story twice as long as it is, and ----- no money. Lord save the scoundrels, they do nothing with honost intentions and always fall before temptation. The Hacionda from which my last was dated is sword by Don Manuel Alvaro, a gentleman well known to the officers of Gen. Wool's division. He was educated in the United States, is the proprietor of this fine leagues about, and has innumerable flocks of sheep, goats, cows, mules, hogs and horses, and is, in short, a bloom. The very atmosphere was ladened with their odor and that of the peech blossom. Every spot of ground, not in public occupation, was planted with the grape. They make a fine article of wine here. Brandy is extracted from the root of the magay plant, and we tasted a sweet article of cheese produced from a species of the cactus. The town contains about five thousand inhabitants, and on the whole l'arras is a very fine place. It is 105 miles from Saltillo.

CUNCUME, January 24. Leaving the Hacienda we bers out wastward through a rough rocky valley quite sparsely timbered, and winding our way among the hills for some thirty eight miles encamped at a task, high up in the gap of a mountain. The Camanches had been in here within a few days, and of course every body was badly scared. But the first idea a Mexican has is money, and we were here, for the first time, charged for water-since then we've paid such bills three times.

From this place a very fair view opens; mountains all about us, the bod of a vast salt lake, now shrunk to one sourth its former size before us. Upon the further side was just descernable the little town Alamo Do Parras, eighteen miles distant. The bed of the lake is as level as a parlor floor, save two rocky islands near the centre .--The little town just montioned is rather handsonte, and I judge, surrounded by a great mineral region. They are building a foundry to smolt silver oar. It is called fortytwo miles from here to the next camp, and the road winds through narrow valleys,' passes, and over great hills. We are traveling over a region of country beyond the advance of our army-a wild unsettled desert, where every travelor is eyed with suspicion. Robbers are a great bugaboo all over Mexico. We camped a night in these hills, far from house or water: even the lonely Shepherd was missed-the wolves were monarchs there. It might have been midnight, and we lay comfortably snoozing in our blankets, discussing in our dreaming mind some knotty point in the archetecture of a great diry castle, when we were startled by a hearty "quiou viva," and before we could lay hands upon our guns "amegos" came upon the breeze, and directly along came a couple of rumbling carts. Poor devils, they travel in the night as a precaution against the Indians. Three days ago we debouched from our rocky path into a syss tem of grassy valleys, for miles running through a mounthin defile, and then for miles passing over a lovely lawn; the traveler can find nothing but water to buy on the whole route. Wooden crosses which are always placed at the spot a person is supposed to be killed at, and which along the whole route appear every half mile, were several of them freshly put up. We were told the Indians. had a few days previous killed three christians, and kindly warned to be on our guard, as they had but litthe doubt the Camache would feel as little respect for the doubt the Camache would feel as little respect for "Americanes." This place is nestled down on a little stream in a valley surrounded by mountains, whose bar-ren sides have the appearance of being pitched and jamed together very carelessly. There is about five hundred inhabitauts, and with two or three exceptions, the poor-cest, raggedest, cut-threat looking creatures I ever say.— There are two or three smelting establishments here, and we were told a very rich silver ear is easily obtained from a mountain in sight. We know ourselves to be in the centre of a great mining region, yet the masses about us are staened in powerty. This was somewhat about us are steeped in poverty. This was somewhat explained when we found that the laborers, who worked in the amelting establishment, breathing their deathly vapors, received for twelve hours labor, night or day, thirty secon and a half cents. We are about ninety-four miles cal and nautical survey of the Great Salt and Utah Lakes, and the surrounding country, lying in the northern portion of Upper California, is now being fitted out in this city. It has been organized by Col. J. J. Abert, of the Topographical Bureau, and Occasionally on this high road wo'd meet immense droves of pack mules, called "Takes," or a native dart-assisted by Lieut J. W. Gunnison, of the Topo-

It les upon some hills and is again overshadowed by hills in the rear, and in the distance is almost hidden by green foliage. We entered the town by an unfrequented struct, and at first were under the impression that we were infininging upon some gentleman's private enclosure. Mr Sloan-Dear wir: For a considerible tength of time 1 was terrously afflicted with the Rheumatic complaint, and ap-plied freely the various limments, pain-killers, &c., without ob-taining any relief. DEMOCRATIC COUNTY CONVENTION .- The call for a rounty sonvention, to appoint delegates to the State Convention at Pittsburgh, was handed in too late last week to call attention to it. It, however, was soarcely neceseary, as the importance of the Democracy of Erio county being represented in that hody is so manifest to all that the bare call, we are sure, will secure an attendance of a full representation of delegates from the several towns, wards and boroughs. We know it is a busy time of the year to attend political meetings, but the Domocracy of Erie are famed, the State over, for being on hand whenever and wherever whiggery shows its head. Good nominations are absolutely necessary to secure the success of any party, and such nominatious cannot be made unless the people themselves take the matter in hand, and see that the mere political trader, who looks only to personal agrandizement as the reward of political action, does not find a place among their representatives. We would like to see Erie county represented at Pittsburgh, and trust we shall have a full convention.

TAt the time the American Army left Mexico, in July last, not a single citizen's house existed in Brownsville, (the site of Fort Brown) opposite Matamoras, where now stands a town of 2000 inhabitants.

MISTERIOUS .- We learn from the Franklin Spectator that the hones of a man in an advanced state of decay were lately discovered a few miles above that town, near the river." Portious of clothing wore also found near the bones. Who the man was, or how he came to his death is unknown.

We may have a little to say hereafter on an artithe in the last Gazelle, honded "Democratic Dusc."
