On motion by Mr. POTTER, the rules were suspended, and the House resolved itself into a committee of the Whole on the state of the Union, [Mr.

Burt in the Chair, on the special order.

The CHAIRMAN stated that the business in order was the bill to reduce and modify the rates of postage, upon which the gentleman from Pennsylvaria [Mr. Thompson] was entitled to the floor.
Mr. THOMPSON of Pennsylvania, said:

consideration of the committee on the subject of propose to amend the bill of the committee, in substance as follows: That newspapers may be circulated free of postage within the counties in which they are printed; out of the county, but within the State, at one-half cent postage-equaling twentysix cents a year for a weekly paper; when printed out of the State, one cent, and transient papers two cents each. This is in substance the proposition I shall have the honor to present for the consideration of the committee, and this amendment involves the entire question in regard to low postage.

It will be perceived, I think, that the contest here will be between letter and newspaper reduction .-On the subject of letter postage, I am in favor of a reduction to a uniform rate of five cents for all distances on single letters. . At present it is raive cents under three hundred miles, and ten cents for all distances beyond that, excepting when sent to Oregon and California. This is a great reduction in the present rates, but it is believed that the increased amount of matter that will be sent through the mails good any immediate reduction of the revenue. This has been the result of reductions heretofore made. For the present, I think this amount of reduction would be a safe experiment, and with the refluction on newspapers, as I propose, would leave the Department still able, without any injurious curtailment of its facilities, to rely on its own revenues, without calling on the general Treasury for newspapers diopped in any post office, to be delivand to sustain it. This, I think, should be steadily kent in view. The reduction on letter pestage ton the old saystem of from six cents to twenty-five couts, and should be for the present satisfactory, and

You will recollect, Mr. Chairman, in 1845-and I be leve you were a member of that Congressqed. The reason of this repeal, I well remember, originated more in the circumstance of the greatlyreduced compensation to postmisters than on account of revenue. General complaints were made by these officers, and when they were provided for in the law of 1847 the system of free circulation was abolished. I thought then, and I think now, that this was a great error. The result of experience has demonstrated this, in my judgment. The Postmaster General's report shows, that the surplus revenue of the Department for the year ending June 1550, the excess of revenue above expenditures, is $319,018 05. Sir, the circulation of newspapers within thirty miles of their place of publication, I am satisfied, dol not make up that amount of revethat the increased compensation of postmasters might have been arranged as it was in 1847, and the newspaper postage continued as fixed by the act of 1845, to wite free within thirty mile-, and bered, too, that this surplus in 1850 is not consehave been greatly extended, both in the number of hew offices created and routes extended. But, son if we reduce the letter postage to three

The time will come, and very soon, I think herses but such scenes are of hourly occurrence in when this reduction may take place, but I do not Funchal, and the eye soon becomes accustomed to believe it can now, without the consequences I have them. affected by My progration, I think, may be slowed without the production of either of these server, that it is now a settled thing, that a plank provided without the production of either of these server, that it is now a settled thing, that a plank provided with house roughlets. VINABLE] gave us yesterday his views in regard to destructive effect that the present system would, dintinued, have on the country press. I did not of treely agree with him in regard to the character of the cuty press. Most of them are entitled to the admiration and commendation of all; but it is very certain that, if the newspaper reader must pay as much postage when his paper is sent to him but a few miles within the county in which it is printed, as when sent from any place within the whole country, he will prefer taking one larger in size, where the facilities for printing it, makes its price no greater-from some of the great commercial or metropolitian cities. Thus, in time, the tastes, ideas, and sentiments of all will be established by a press, in fact, foreign to the pursuits and occupations of the for keepers, and some hundreds of spectators. masses in the country. say, by aiming at the much we may get nothing satisfactory. The argument against extending it to the counties is the burden it occasions to the mails and loss of revenue. This argument will have increased force by the increase of the privilege. I would rejoice iffit would be so; but at present I think it, would be impolitic to attempt too much, lest, like the experiment of 1815, it may have to be abandoned. It will be easy in the future to reduce postage rates, if practicable; and this will be much better

Mr. Charman: When my friend, the Hon. member from Ohio, [Mr. Carres,] moved yesterday that the committee rise, after I had obtained the floor, [Mr. Sackett] submitted a proposition to reduce the posthad intended merely to aubmit a proposition for the age on newspapers in the county to two mills per paper. I am very free to say, that should my proplow postage. I shall do but little more now. I ositian not succeed, I will shearfully vote to fix some annual amount to be paid by subscribers for papers, within the county, say from ten to fifteen cents per annum. But the proposition of the gentleman would amount to ten cents and four mills per year for weekly newspapers. The four mills would generilly, of course, be last, as we have no denomination of coin to pay it. But the imposition of even ten cents per annum would be of little advantage, in my adgment, as it would be consumed to a great extent, if not entirely, in the vast number of accounts to be kept in the collection of it. The friends, then, of free newspaper circulation, can, in my opinion, only accomplish their object by the reduction of the etter postage to a uniform standard of five cents. would rejoice to see it reduced still more if it it would not have the effect to prevent newspapers from girculation.

The following is my amendment, which I will offer at the proper time: "Strike out all after the enacting clause, to and including the word "cent" in the seventh line, and under this standard of rates, will very soon make insert as fellows: "That newspapers of no greater size than nineteen hundred square inches, may be transmitted through the mails in the county where printed, free of postage.
