A Fast Lotherio.

Some weeks ago, says the New Orleans Delta, our cotton and fushionable circles were greatly edied, illuminated and electrified, by the dashing opegentleman who came to bur city with numerous letters, and testimousle to his "high standings" "distinguished fami y, "reducential connections, etc. His name was "B. J. Hayne," or "Dr. Hayne," as he styled himseif, and was recently from Philadelphia, though related to the distinguished Hayre family of South Carolina: His manners and anpearance were certainly those of a gentleman, and might well have imposed upon the most prujent and beering. Without bong velgarly detentations, his large resources and designs justified a generous and liberal display of his means. Accordingly, he
