The Cabinet Again.

The selection of these who are to administer under th coming administration the various executive depart ments. and to constitute the council of that administration, is a business which deeply excites the public interest and fixes its attention.

The wings and sectious, the local interests, perse attachments, and individual hopes, which are comprised in every great party, necessarily struggle for representation and influence in the organization of the government which that party has appointed to power. As the clamer of all these influences was hushed and colmed by the national voice which welco ned the nomination of the convention, and which has since confirmed that nomination west, which had arrived a few minments previous, was by so triumphant a verdict, it is little probable that the put in motion and with flage flying, the beeming of can. political angacity of Franklin Pierce, which has borne him to his present position, will permit him to surround himself by the embarrasements of recuscitated sectional influences. His established character offers a guarantes that his cabinet will be in harmony with the union which has called for freshness of energy and vigor. and freedom from sectional traminels to meet the new siresmatances of this progressive, republic; and there is ne probability that he will be importuned or head-winked into a sacrifice of his present high position.

The shadows of coming events are bread; the P of this nation has now world-wide relations; and not only strong men are required but a strong party .. to .straggle with those events and to direct that policy.

Fortunately the intellectual riches of the democratic party are equal to the demand made upon them. They are not limited to some half a dozen individuals who stand out in isolated greatness, and boldly claim a demigod worship.

It has become general to look upon the State Department as abserbing or controlling the rest of the administration, and from the nature of existing and threatened relations there never has been a time when it would rehave no doubt, if the present law in regard to guages is guire more ability or exact a more sleepless energy.ouly requisite where the interests of a nation are in the MELANCHOLF SUICIDE .- We are pained to learn that hands of a weak and incompetent ruler, be he sovereign or President: but as Franklin Pierce is eminently adewith the window of his council, and not committed ex-

The policy of Pennsylvania in regard to this question of a change of gauge may be hard to understand and appreciate, especially by those whose interests are adverse o ours, nevertheless it is a very plain one; and one, too, which our New York friends innet sooner or later succamb to, even though the "stockheiders" of the road from here to the New York live, should "come to their senses" in the way indicated by the paragraph above.

The mistake of our Buffalo cotemporary in the paragraph we quote, is a very natural one we admit, especially in one of the latitudinarian school of politics; nevertheless it is a mistake to suppose that because a State grants certain individuals certain privileges they can grants cortain individuals contain privileges and privileges moving all free negroes from the state. All the roads west of Penus, ivania are of a different guage from those East of her, hence there must be a shange somewhere, either at Buffalo and Dunkirk, or at Erie. Now is Pennsylvania or is Erie claiming anything out of the way in a serving that such mecassary change shall take place here? It strikes us that she is not.
