EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The importations of hay into the United States in the first half year under the Dingley law, as shown by official figures of the Treasury Department, amounted to only $7,262 against $502,846 in the corresponding six months of the preceding year under the Wilson law.

The importations of wool in the law's operations were a little over half those of a single month's under the Wilson law. The total im-February 1, 1898, under the Dingley law were 51,781,070 pounds, while those of the single month of April, 1897, under the Wilson law, were 95,559,933 pounds.

The success of the farmers of the United States, coupled with the success of her manufacturers, has attracted the attention of those of other parts of the world, one of the results being that within the past fortnight a shipment of 6,000 tons of agricultural machinery was made to Russia in a single day followed by an announcement that another shipment of similar dimensions would follow shortly.

Exports from the United States to the fourteen different countries which protested against the enactment of the Dingley law have been $56,000,000 greater in the first half year of the Dingley law than in the period of the preceding year under the Wilson law, thus disproving the claim that the enactment of a protective tariff would result disadvantageously to our foreign commerce.

Medical authorities and boards of health are expressing great anxiety as to the certainty of the intro- the manufacturing i duction of yellow fever into the their employment is thus clearly country next summer in case of a war which would compel the presence of our troops in Cuba and close and constant communication the importation of manufactured with them, thus probably endangering more lives in the United States than exist in the Island of

The farmers have no occasion to complain of the new tariff law as exemplified in its first six months' operations, which show a decrease of 20 per cent. in the importations of articles of "food" and "live animals," as compared with the corresponding six months of last year under the Wilson law; while those interested in manufactures have equal cause for satisfaction in the fact that the reduction in importations of manufactures under the new law, as compared with the corresponding six months of last year under the Wilson law, has been at about the same rate.

The Democratic leaders are "working" the Populists with their usual success in those sections they have made a complete fusion by which they give the Populists the Governorship and some other State officers, shrewdly retain the members of Congress for themselves and their allies, who sail under the name of "Silver-Republicans." This is simply a part of the general scheme by which the Democrats hope to obtain the co-operation of the Populists and themselves get all the advantages from a national standpoint, leaving the Populists a few crumbs of State patronage and keeping them in a position where they can have no influence in national affairs.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, April 4, 1898.

The Dingley law in its first half year makes a good record as to its effect upon importations, as well as its earnings in the matter of revenue. The official figures of the Treasury Department covering the first six months of the Dingley law and comparing its operations with the corresponding six months of the preceding year under the Wilson law are now for the first time accessible. They show, to begin with, a falling off in the importation of articles produced by the farmer. In the classification of "articles of food and live animals," the importations during the first six months of the new law amounted in value to $81,106,723, while in the corresponding six months of the preceding year under the Wilson law the importations of that class of articles amounted to $104,623,300, thus showing a reduction of more than $23,000,000 in this class of articles, most if not not all of which are produced by Another class of citizens who first six months of the Dingley have been equally benefitted by the operations of the new law are those employed in manufacturing industries dependent upon manufactures. One evidence of this is found in portations from August 1, 1897, to the fact that the importation of manufactured articles fell from $90,450,655 under the Wilson law to $69,540,864 under the Dingley These figures relate, as do those quoted above, to the first half year's operations of the Dingley law compared with the corresponding six months of the preceding year under the Wilson

> Thus it will be seen that while the importation of articles of farm production fell off $23,000,000, the importation of manufactured articles fell off over $20,000,000, the percentage of reduction being in each case about the same and the two classes of citizens, the farmers and those dependent upon manufactures being thus benefitted in like proportion.

Another evidence of the increased activity which the new law has brought to our own manufacturers and their employes is evident in the increase in importation of raw material under the Dingley act. In its first six months the importations of raw materials for use in manufacturing amounted to $96,-723,625, while under the vaunted Wilson law, whose author and sup-porters were especial advocates of the "free raw material" idea, the importations of raw material amounted to only $79,583,617 in the corresponding months of the preceding year.

That the new law is operating especially in the interests of the farmers and those dependent upon shown; first, in the reduction in importation of articles of food and live animals, which fell off 20 per cent; second, in the reduction in articles which compete with home industries, the reduction in this case being about the same; third, in the evident increase in home industries by reason of the increased demand for raw material for their use in manufacturing; fourth, in the greater prosperity among the producers resulting from the increased activity among manufac-turers, and increased earnings among their employes, as is shown by the general advance in prices received by farmers for their pro-
