RATIFIED.
The U. S. Senate on the 6th day of February ratified the treaty of peace with Spain. This week the people of this town ratified at the polls, the selections of Mr. Zero Price to supervise the marking of the price on our goods that are arriving daily, as you witnessed last week, the phenomenally low price he put on things you wanted. If our ammunition arrives in time, next week will celebrate the ratification of the treaty of peace, and the selection of Mr. Zero Price as our supervisor. It will cost every one that helps to do the celebrating a few pennies, but it will be the largest celebration for the money that was ever given in this town. Jolly sliding time is not over yet, out of a half car load of sleds, we have three iron sleds that we sold for $1.50; they go now at your choosing for 75 cents; also one jumper that sold readily for $1.00, will go in a jiffy at half of the former price. We also have a dozen or two of funny valentines left over, the small boys and girls can have five of them for a penny, as long as they last, we won't keep any holdovers of that class of goods in our store; they must go. We have brought the largest and finest line of Easter goods that was ever brought to this town. Sunday schools will have no trouble in supplying their schools at our store.

Snow Bound.
Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Schriever, of this place, experienced a severe time of it while enroute to Wilkes-Barre, last week, to attend the Photographers' Convention. Mr. Schriever was chosen President of the Association for 1899, a great compliment to the Emporium artist's ability. The Wilkes-Barre leader, while speaking of the snow-bound party, says:

Messrs. Seavey and Schriever are not at all superstitious, for if they would be they would have packed their grips long ere this and headed for home. The unlucky number "thirteen" figured very extensively in their trip to Wilkes-Barre. They started on the "13th" of the month, the train was "No. 13" that left then at Fern Glen, there were "thirteen" people in the snow-bound party, they were snowed up for "thirteen" hours, one of the members of the party was born on the "13th" day of the month, another member was the father of "thirteen" children, still another had been married "thirteen" years, Mr. Schriever's room was "No. 13" at the Nuremberg Hotel, one of the engines of the rescue train was "No. 13," the caboose was "No. 13," the improvised train hauled them "thirteen" miles, it took them "thirteen" hours to then reach Wilkes-Barre, and Mr. Schriever demanded to have "room 13" on getting to the Wyoming Valley House, and the clerk was only too willing as most people have a dread of that apartment. There is no telling what the train will experience on their homeward journey.

From DeLand (Fla.) Record.

We are sorry to note the serious illness of Dr. W. H. DeLong, and trust his recovery may be speedy and complete.

Mrs. M. M. Miner and daughter Mae, who have been spending some time in Jacksonville, returned last week and are comfortably settled in their home at this place.
The stock of goods from the Keystone store left on Monday last to be shipped to Easley, Ala., where its proprietress, Mrs. L. Morgan, will open a general merchandise store, of which Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Day will have charge.

A very pleasant evening was spent by young and old last Thursday at the home of Mrs. J. P. Felt. Mr. D. L. Baldwin, of New York, was present, and with his stereoscopic entertained the guests with an illustrated lecture, showing many fine views in the Old World, and a number of scenes at home. The picture which was voted by one and all to be the best was that of our genial and well-loved Dr. W. H. DeLong, whose kindly face as it appeared pictured on the canvas elicited a hearty round of applause in which all joined. After the lecture a pleasant social was had until a late hour.

What Should be Done in This Case.

Editor Cameron County Press:
There is a case of destitution in the borough which is a source of great embarrassment and perplexity to the officers of the poor and to the philanthropic people of Emporium. What should be done in the case? It is a serious public problem and demands earnest and careful study from our citizens. The facts are these: Some three or four years ago, a family came to Emporium from Williamsport. It consisted of a young father and mother and two small children, the youngest only a few months old at that time. Persons who have known something of the man's history say that he has been a shiftless beggar from his youth. His history since coming to Emporium certainly justifies the assertion. It has also been intimated by some, that the Williamsport poor authorities were not wholly without responsibility for the migration of this family to Emporium. With the exception of a few weeks in the spring and summer of 1896 when he was employed in Howard's lumber yard and in the bottling works, he has done practically nothing. His only ostensible means of support has been in peddling small notions throughout this and adjoining counties, failing, however, to pay for his goods (if the experience of one merchant in Emporium is a sample of the way he dealt with others) and also failing to apply his gains to the support of his family. The latter has been kept from starving the past four winters (including this) partly by obtaining goods from stores on credit and never paying for them and partly by assistance from the town and from generously disposed individuals. Meanwhile the number of children has been swelled to four, each newcomer meaning another charge to the community and, unless something is done, another piece of humanity to grow up in ignorance, vice, and beggary. What should be done in this case?

The community must make some disposition of it without unnecessary delay. What courses seem to be open? One person will suggest that they be sent back to the community whence they came out, accompanied by an intimation expressed, or (more probably) quietly implied, that that community keep its paupers at home and provide for them itself. Can this step be taken at this late day, however? The family has been with us for more than three years, and we have tacitly acknowledged a responsibility for them by giving them some assistance from the public funds. Another possible course is to keep on as we have been doing, letting them find their subsistence, no one knows how, during the summer, and providing them with food and fuel out of the public purse during the rigors of winter, the family meanwhile increasing in number and growing more and more confirmed in habits of shiftless dependence, a constant source of menace and contamination to the community. Another course is to withhold all assistance, public or private from them, and let them starve—or steal—or depart, to be as badly off, and to be as much of a curse elsewhere as they have been here. This treatment would be severe, also selfish, and would bless neither the community which inflicted nor the persons who received it. Is there not some mode of handling the case that will be wholesomely severe yet unselfish and which may prove helpful to some, at least, of the subjects of it? The person whose outlook is limited to a zeal for souls, will say what this man needs is conversion. Convert him and he will be steady and industrious. Very true, but there are some kinds of devils which go not forth save by prayer and fasting; and we strongly suspect that in a case of this kind the devils of inherited shiftlessness and beggary go not forth save by the help of rigorous course of discipline in a reformatory institution. If there were some institution of that character into which this man could be put, he certainly ought to go there. If the jail or the Smethport poor house were such institutions he ought to be placed in one or other of them; but neither of these institutions profess to be reformatory. He would come out of jail a worse man than he went in.

Unfortunately there is no institution of a reformatory character in the state to which he might be committed, and so, alas, we must frankly say, that his case under existing conditions seems to be hopeless. We can do nothing that will prove helpful for him. His family, though, may be helped. The wife is not wholly without elements of capability, and separated from her husband, would probably be able to make an honest living for herself. Not, however, if she is burdened with the support of her four children. These should be provided for in some way, and this we suggest should be managed by the Children's Aid Society. We therefore suggest that this man, Frank Hall, be arrested on complaint of the poor masters for non-support of his family and committed to jail for a few days; and that on the ground of this proceeding, the Children's Aid Society, with the mother's consent, secure the legal control of the three older children, and place them where they will be well provided for and be well brought up. It may be objected that all this means trouble and expense. Well, what of that? What are we in the world for, if not to be spent for wise objects? Watch dogs are very necessary animals to have around a treasury when thieves are abroad, but we must protest against the very common and very short sighted disposition of tax-payers to choose always the course which involves the smallest immediate outlay. The question for instance, whether the poor should receive assistance in their homes from public funds or be placed in public institutions of charity is not determined by any considerations as to which is the best policy for really alleviating the evils of poverty, but as to which involves the smallest immediate outlay.

We are not criticising the poor officers. They seem to be honestly trying to do their duty according to their best judgment, but they are handicapped by the popular demand that the course which seems to be cheapest shall always be followed, and not what is best. The mere fact that one course costs more than another is sufficient to condemn it at once with many people. The course which we recommend in Frank Hall's case, we think, the best that can be followed under existing conditions; nor are we sure that it will add very much to the tax-payers burden.

Valuable Tract Sold.
B & F. H. Goodyear, we are reliably informed, have closed the contract for the purchase of the large body of timber land, several thousand acres, owned by the Pennsylvania Joint Land and Lumber Co., and located in Portage township, this county. No doubt this timber will be manufactured at Austin—a great loss to this county. We have not learned the price paid.

Sudden Death.
Mrs. Jacob Miller, of First Fork, aged 60 years, dropped dead last Friday morning, while attending to her household duties. Mrs. Miller was born in Cameron county, near Driftwood, her maiden name being Roxey Dent. The deceased was universally respected. Funeral was held at the family residence last Sunday, Rev. Piper conducting the services. Interment was made at Miller school house.

Forty Hour Devotion.
Forty Hour Devotional services were concluded at St. Mark's church Tuesday morning. Rev. Father Meagher, of Ridgway, assisted Father Downey, Monday, and at the evening services talked to his old parishioners, who were present in great numbers. The church altar was beautifully illuminated for the occasion and the great building was filled to the doors—many of Father Meagher's friends from other denominations being present.

Incendiary Fire.
Yesterday morning, a few minutes before six o'clock, Asa Murray while getting up to go to his work at the Mankey Furniture Company's plant, discovered flames issuing from Jos. Kay's cow stable. The alarm was quickly given and a few pails of water soon put out the fire. Mr. Kay is satisfied it was the work of an incendiary. For some months past some person, at intervals, has entered his barn and milked one of the cows. He is prepared for him hereafter.
