Discovered by a Woman.

Discovered by a Woman.

Another great discovery has been made, and that, too, by a lady in this country. "Disease fastened its clutches upon her and for several years she withstood its severest tests, but her vital organs were undermined and death seemed imminent. For three months she coughed incessantly, and could not sleep. She finally discovered a way to recovery, by purchasing of us a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was so much relieved on taking first dose that she slept all night; and with two bottles has been absolutely cured. Her name is Mrs. Luther Luther Lutt." Thus writes W. C. Hamnick & Co., of Shelby, N. C. Trial bottles free at L. Taggart's drug store. Regular size 50c. and $1. Every bottle guaranteed.

Blacksnake Big as a Log.

"The most wonderful den of of old Steuben, in a big stretch of deep, dark woods in Potter county. Pa., known as the Black Forest It is a black snake den. A year never goes by that one or two immense blacksnakes are not overpowered by superior numbers of lumbermen, or bark peelers over there, as they are always prowling and unsuspecting persons afoot. I don't suppose there is another spot on the continent where such mon-strous blacksnakes can be found. I don't known what it is that makes them grow so big, but my opinion is that the locality is so wild and hard to get at that the snakes have undisturbed opportunity to reach a patriarchial age and taken on size with their years, I I believe that blacksnakes w uld that some of those Black Forest serpents were born long ' fore this country was first settled I have them with their faces wrinkled as a walnut, and with greatly prizes the medal. long, gray hair on their upper lips. brother-in-law, Squire Hollis, of Woodhull, tells about one that he killed down there once that had a funny looking lump on its head. He cut down into the lump six inches or so and found a flint arrow head at the bottom of it. There could be but one explanation of the presence of that arrow head there. there. The snake had been shot by an Indian some time. As there hadn't been any Indians hunting with bows and arrows in that country for about three generations, of course the snake must have been a lively native before the days of the white man thereabout, and nobody knows how many years before that, either. Squire Hollis is willing to bet that snake was a good deal more than a hundred years old, and it was as hale and hearty as a serpent could be. "I say Squire Hollis killed that snake, but that is hardly a correct statement. He was lumbering over in that region, and had a lot of logs banked for rolling down the steep slope into the creek. Accidentally a log got loose, and away it went down hill. It had gone maybe half way down, and had taken on tremendous momentum, when this snake came tearing out from some place where it had been hiding, and rushed out in the path of that flying log. There is no telling what the snake thought the log was, but he was evidently in a state of supreme fury at it. for he stopped and raised his head up and waited the coming of the log. The log kept right on and struck the snake with all the force it had accumulated. The crash was terrific and log stopped as if it had brought up against a rock. The Squire went down the hill and found the log canted up against the snake, and he declares yet that if he hadn't seen the collision he wouldn't have known which was the snake and which was the log, they were so near of a size. The snake was dead from the shock, though, and Squire Hollis has never ceased to regret his foolishness in rolling it into the creek after he had cut the lump and found the arrow-head, and letting it float away without measuring it, because he never could tell how long the ser-Blacksnakes have made their appearance in this section. A few days ago that if the snake could have been sixteen-foot boards a foot and a half wide as any one ever bought. That snake, of course, was an exception to the ordinary run of Black Forest snakes, and from what the Squire says, there isn't any doubt at all in my mind that it was the founder of the blacksnake family in that country. There wasn't a gray hair on him, though, and his teeth were as sound as a pebble."—New York

Says Admiral Dewey. At Hong Kong, Admiral Dewey id: "I have the greatest enthusiasm in the future of the Philippines. I hope to see America's possessions the key to Oriental commerce and civilization.

"The brains of our great country will develop the untold agricultural and mineral richness of the islands.

"We must never sell them. Such an action would bring on another great war. We will never part with the Philippines, I am sure, and in future years the idea that anybody should have seriously suggested it will be one of the curiosities of history. "The insurrection is broken. There will be no more hard battles and the new era for the islands that was temporarily delayed by the rising will soon begin. Aguinaldo and his generals must be captured, and then the very semblance of an insurrection will cease.
