Dress Goods.

We assert that our showing of Dress Goods for Autumn wear is without a peer in the matter of variety and refined selection—a claim that is supported by a volume of business which is wholly unprecedented and is still rapidly growing. Not only are these offerings superior, but the prices are most favorable. These novelties must be seen to be appreciated.

Fall Capes and Jackets

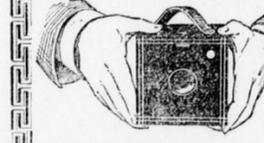

This department is unusually active, and purchasers are reaping the benefit of the forehanded methods which gave us a large stock of Jackets and Capes for this season's trade, at prices extremely low for first-class garments. Fashion has been kind in her plans this fall. Her decree seldom bends with economy; but for once the two are yoke mates. The latest Fall Styles are here at the LOW prices that have made this department so well known.

BE SURE AND COME IN EARLY.

M. C. TULIS.

BRIEF MENTION.

Court adjourned yesterday afternoon.

The attendance at court this week was quite large.

W. W. Taylor, of this place, has opened a dancing school in Schlect's hall, on E. Fourth street and is teaching a large class of young people in that graceful art.

Harry Lloyd intends that all lovers of a good pipe shall be supplied. On Tuesday he received a whole satchel full of cheap, yet handsome, briar pipes. They are all bargains.

Patrick Kane, of Renovo, well known in this county, died suddenly last Friday morning of apoplexy. He had fallen from a door into the back yard at his residence, where he was found two hours after death.

Edward M. Bates went to Emporium yesterday to erect his illuminated Bible story for an entertainment in the M. E. church. Many of our citizens saw the illustration in position at the residence of Mr. Bates on East Third street last Christmas and pronounced it a very interesting and instructive arrangement.—Williamsport Bulletin. This will be on exhibition at the opera house this Thursday evening for the last. Our people should all see it.

An Authoritative Etiquette Work.

The publication of what has been planned to be the most complete and up-to-date authority on etiquette begins in the November Ladies' Home Journal in a series of articles called "Good Form for All Occasions." The series will run in the magazine for a year. The authorship belongs to Mrs. Burton Kingsland, which is really the non de plume for one of the most prominent women in New York society.

MARRIED.

LEASURE-McCREDDIE.—At the Presbyterian marriage, Oct. 18, 1899, by Rev. R. McCaslin, Mr. JOHN H. LEASURE, of Williamsburg, Iowa, and Mrs. MARY J. McCREDDIE, of Freedom, Beaver county, Pa. The contracting parties have gone to the husband's home in Iowa, and the best wishes of all go with them.

Champion Sportsmen.

Last Friday, Wm. McDonald and Ed. Yeagle were exceedingly fortunate while out hunting. They came home with fourteen birds, the work of seven hours' hunting.

New Hours at Post Office.

P. M. Chas. Seger announces new hours of business at Emporium post-office. The office will open at 7:00 in the morning and remain open until 8:10 in the evening, in order to allow patrons to receive the Buffalo mail. Mr. Seger looks to the interest of his patrons.

Pleasant Hop.

Some twelve or fifteen couples of our popular young people, participated in one of those enjoyable private "hops," that are getting to be such a fad in Emporium, last Friday evening. Among those present we noticed Messrs. Harry George, Liberty; B. G. Woodward, Driftwood; George Gerg, St. Marys, and Miss Barclay, Sinnemahoning.

Obituary.

Mrs. Edna (Rendt) Hillman, aged 24 years, wife of Verne Hillman, of Galeton, died last Saturday of typhoid pneumonia, after a short illness. The funeral took place at Galeton on Tuesday. The deceased was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Rendt, of Emporium, and her death will be sorrowing news to her many Emporium friends. Mrs. Hillman has resided at Galeton some two years, but was only married about one year ago and her death, when all looked bright and promising for the future is indeed sad. The bereaved parents and sisters have the sympathy of the Press as well as our citizens in general.

John D. Swope, our nominee for sheriff, has resided in Cameron county for very many years and has always been a hard working man. Mr. Swope after years of toil, desires a rest and his fellow laborers will see that he is elected Sheriff. Vote for "Jack" Swope.

A Wonderful Hypnotist.

Sevengala, the great hypnotist, mind reader and telepathist will play a return date here at the opera house, for one week, commencing Monday, Oct. 30th. The Scranton Republican says: Sevengala, who is a wonderful hypnotist, delighted his audience at the Academy last night. Besides the regular feats accomplished by all hypnotists. Sevengala has original work which borders upon the sensational. His telegraphy work is a marvel and amazed his audience. As an instance he caused a young man, who was under the influence, to carry out a most intricate test planned by Rev. Dr. Chapman and which was done to perfection. Every precaution was adopted to prevent any collusion. Fourteen young men fairly well known in the city were placed under the influence and gave exhibitions which were intensely comical, that of the cake walk being one of the best features. Admission: Reserved Seats, 30 cents; general admission 20 cents, children 10 cents. Reserved seats on sale at Lloyd's.

William H. Logue, of Gibson, another of our nominees for County Auditor is a farmer. He has faithfully filled the office for three years and should be re-elected, which he will be. Vote for Logue.

False Report.

The daily papers, on Wednesday reported great destruction of property from forest fires in this section and stated that Emporium had called on Williamsport for fire hose to aid in defending our town from the flames. This was all news to our people. We know that fires are raging in the woods, yet no fears are entertained for Emporium, neither have we called for aid and what is more we don't see where we need aid. The fires in the slashings are doing no damage to logs or bark, so far as we can learn.

E. W. Gaskill and Chas. Gleason, our candidates for County Commissioner, have proven that they are safe, economical and just the men to manage our county affairs. We are sure the people, regardless of party, will see that they are elected.

Chas. L. Butler, one of the candidates for County Auditor has resided in Emporium for many years and is one of our most intelligent and capable citizens; a gentleman in every way fitted for the responsible position. A vote for Chas. L. Butler will never be regretted.

Every laboring man in Cameron county can consistently support the Republican county ticket. The nominees for Sheriff and County Auditors are hard working industrious citizens and will ably represent your interests.

The Teachers' Institute.

The Institute of the teachers of Cameron county was held at Emporium Oct. 16, 17, 18, 19 and 20, 1899. The first session was called to order by the County Superintendent, Miss Collins, promptly at 1:30, Monday afternoon.

After a prayer by the Rev. Mr. Shriner, and a session by the Institute, Miss Margaret McCloskey, of the Edinboro Normal, spoke on the "Choice and Use of Pictures." With all our modern branches of study, there are but four fundamental subjects, science, literature, art and religion. Children love to study pictures, and this fondness can easily be gratified at the present day, when pictures of famous artists can be obtained at such small price. Raphael's Madonnas, Landseer's animals, Millet's scenes of peasant life, Carot's landscapes, all may be brought in the school-room and studied in detail. A knowledge of literature comes naturally in connection with this study of art, as well as a knowledge of religion.

When a child has been taught to appreciate a good picture, his ability to recognize the beautiful has been increased, and therefore, his culture and refinement. "In the midst of light is the beautiful; in the midst of the beautiful is good; in the midst of the good, is God."

Superintendent T. L. Gibson, of Ebensburg, Pa., then discussed "The Aim of the Reading Lesson."

(1) Each reading lesson should be studied and referred by children, until it is thoroughly understood, until it becomes a part of their mental equipment. (2) To see the beauty and force of language. (3) To enlarge the individual vocabulary. (4) To help express thought easily.

Dr. Lightner Witmer, of the University of Pennsylvania, was introduced, who addressed the teachers on "Imagination and Association." When we look at an object, we form an image of that object. An image formed by the senses is called a sensory image. Other images, named according to the way in which they are formed, are the memory image, the concept image, the auditory image, the auditory concept image, the motor or kinesic image. Most of our impressions come under one of the three classes: visual, auditory or kinesthetic. It is as much of a problem why we ever forget as why we ever remember, as it is natural to repeat a series of visual, auditory or kinesthetic impressions as they occur.

After another song by the Institute, the meeting was adjourned.

On Monday evening, Hon. Emerson Collins delivered a brilliant and inspiring lecture on "Grant, the Soldier," his magnificent eloquence illuminating the glorious life of the silent hero. It is shown in the hearts of his hearers that animation. His historical anecdotes of the military, political and social achievements of the young subaltern who had come out of the west to fight his way half across the continent and lead the armies of the north to victory at Appomattox, held his audience in rapt attention. The session on Tuesday afternoon, at nine o'clock, with song by the teachers followed with prayer, by the Rev. Mr. Robertson. Superintendent Gibson delivered a most interesting and instructive address on "The Value of the Child's First Impression." Miss McCloskey spoke on "Literature in the Primary Grades." Dr. Brumbaugh was quoted, "Whatever you do, however you begin, take the child's first impression glorious." Miss McCloskey urged the importance of interesting children in good literature, and that the teacher should endeavor to know something of the kind of literature children are perusing when out of school.

Prof. H. F. Stauffer discussed "The Reading Habit of Children." Reading may be divided into three stages: (1) Learning to read, and not to learn. To teach children to read, and not to teach them what to read, may be a positive injury. If we wish to inculcate a love for reading, we must begin with the child's first impression in literature, we must begin its study in the first grade. One important way to increase the interest in this study is by teaching children to memorize literary prose and poetry.

Dr. Witmer continued his talk on Psychology, tracing the Mental and Bodily Movements. A fixed thought is inevitably accompanied by some bodily movement, however slight, and lack of thought, or mental inactivity produces physical passivity. Dr. Witmer explained scientifically the so-called supernatural power of mind-reading and hypnotic influence. The meaning was the adjourned until 1:30 p. m.

The "Value of Memory Work," presented by Superintendent Gibson, opened the afternoon session of the Institute. Memorizing some good material has a great moral influence, and adds something to the mind of a child which is never lost sight of, never forgotten. Quotations from the classics should be taught and studied in a systematic way.

Miss McCloskey then gave a talk on "The Study of Mythology." The ancient myths and legends should be studied in childhood, and not the time when they will be most enjoyed. As one grows older and becomes interested in other legends, the capacity for enjoyment is in a measure lost. Myths have a practical value. They teach the religion, art, and literature, of the ancient peoples.

The talk on "Emotions and Feelings," by Dr. Witmer, was a continuation of the morning's address. By diagrams of the brain was shown the location of the seats of motor sensations. Dr. Witmer discussed the emotions of fear, hate, etc., and showed how each emotional feeling is produced by the development of the association, physiological association, on the possibility of inherited emotional and intellectual association.

The Institute adjourned at four o'clock. Tuesday evening Gen. Gordon lectured in the Opera House. His lecture on "The Last Days of the Confederacy," had a national reputation, and Gen. Gordon spoke to a large and appreciative audience.

Dr. Witmer spoke on "Instinct." Instinctive knowledge is an inherent knowledge which is passed on by our forefathers, which has been developed by us to a particularly great extent. Dr. Witmer quoted the familiar passage from Wordsworth's "Immortality," giving the author's explanation of our intuitive knowledge a consequence of pre-existence.

Dr. Hullely of Bucknell University, was next on the programme but as Dr. Hullely was unable to attend the Institute his place was filled by Prof. Greene, of West Chester, who spoke on "Literature." The secret of enjoying good literature is in getting the thought of an author and putting that thought into our own hearts. While it may not be possible to entirely eradicate poor literature, it may be possible to instill such a love for the good, that the bad will naturally sink into oblivion. "Be not overcome of evil but overcome evil with good." The following suggestions were given: (1) Teach literature in the schools. (2) Give the best, (3) Vary the kind. Institute was adjourned at 12 o'clock, M.

Stewart, Deputy State Superintendent, who addressed the teachers, said some of the requisites of good schools. The cooperation of parents is indispensable. The tendency to over-educate the schools should be guarded against and the schools should be well supplied with text books. It is not a matter of economy to limit the number of books, and is a positive violation of the school law, to suggest that our schools might be improved by having a longer school term, by keeping school buildings in good repair, by paying better salaries.

After intermission Miss Grace Walker rendered a violin solo in her usual masterly style.

Prof. Greene opened his discussion of American literature by asking the teachers to accompany him on a literary ramble to the homes of our greatest American authors. Prof. Greene told, in his usual pleasing style, of his personal experiences in visiting the homes of James Russell Lowell and Oliver Wendell Holmes, carrying his heartiest remembrance and leaving them in the study of Dr. Holmes, to continue the journey in his next address. Institute was adjourned at 1:15.

The Apollo Male Quartette, assisted by Miss Mary Hollingshead, Reader, and Miss Edith Sprout, Soprano and accompanist, gave a concert in the Court House, Wednesday evening. The house was filled to capacity, and the entertainment thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The devotional exercises on Thursday morning were conducted by the Rev. Mr. Shriner. Dr. Witmer delivered the "Consciousness—Attention and Apperception." Dr. Witmer described the structure of the nervous system in the motor column of the spinal chord, and also the structure of the sensory nerve-cells. A portion of the spinal chord which connects the motor and sensory cells is called a reflex nerve-center, because the action performed as the response to a stimulus referred to one of these nerve centers, is done without the aid of the will. The medulla oblongata and cerebellum are the next higher nerve-centers, both of which send out an immense number of fine branches of the sensory nerve-cells in the cerebrum, which does not develop until three or four months after birth. These sensory nerve-cells, cerebellum and cerebrum, are called the areas of sensation or of memorial images. The fourth center developed from these three, is called the area of association. The higher part of the brain is situated just behind the forehead and is called the frontal lobes. This is the reason a high forehead is indicative of a sloping forehead, and is indicative of a low type of mind or, in a great degree, of idioty. The frontal lobes are called the seat of apperception, and control the most complex acts. Nervous activity controlled by parts below the cerebrum are not conscious acts. Mind acts directly with the more complex parts, therefore cerebrum, cerebellum and medulla is located in the higher portion of the brain. An external object causes a stimulus which brings up the perception of the object perceived, and by association, other things concerning this object. This fusing of perceptions is called apperception.

Prof. Greene then proceeded on his literary ramble, starting in the study of Dr. Holmes. The great lesson learned from this visit to great minds was the simplicity and the greatness of the greatness of simplicity. True greatness is approachable. Prof. Greene then gave more suggestions for the study of literature, and the line of his previous talk. (4) Adopt to the child's capacity and interest. (5) Study American literature, because we have an American literature. Our declaration of independence in our literary work has been made in 1837, and since that time we have been independent of England in our literary work. (6) Take the full name of the selection. In the letter, lose not the spirit. (7) Prefer intensity to extensivity. Prof. Greene's talk closed the morning session.

Superintendent Gibson, the first speaker of the afternoon, talked on "Controlling Forces," giving many useful suggestions on school room management.

"What is Modern Psychology and What May it be Expected to do for the Teacher?" was discussed by Dr. Witmer. We can expect to study when the mind acts, but cannot, after all, tell its ultimate nature, whether it is immortal, where it comes from or whither it goes. The relation between psychology tells how the mind may be influenced for good, how diverted from the bad. Modern psychology is simply the old physiological science developed in a new way. The relation between the mental and physical processes of the body. It is a science based on introspection, while the other sciences are based on observation. Psychology does not give the remedy but aids the teacher by studying the variations of the human mind.

After an intermission Superintendent Sweeney, of Elk County addressed the teachers. This address was followed with a talk by Prof. Greene on "How to Study." He gave the following study three warnings were given: Avoid biography, avoid philology, avoid studying dates. (1) Know something of the full name of the author, for a two-fold reason: to distinguish and to suggest. (2) Get the exact and correctly spelled name. (3) Look into the parentage of the author, his education, his character, and the influence of his love or loves. (4) His character. (5) His influence on the times in which he lived, and on later times. (6) The influence of the sherman lecture, "Uncrowned Kings," by W. T. Heringman Culp, was given at the Court House. The house was well filled and the lecture universally applauded.

Prof. H. F. Stauffer was the first speaker on Friday morning, discussing the "Co-operation of Mothers with Teachers." Co-operation of the working together of two or more forces to produce a common result. Education has a three-fold purpose: (1) Development of the physical and mental nature. Any system which fails to co-relate these three is erroneous. We are wont to think that the brain is the place for the development of the physical, mental and moral nature. This is our scheme of education. Froeley's system which combines these three, is a nearly perfect system, should be universally adopted.

The report of the committee on resolutions, read by Mr. Woodward, was approved and accepted, as was also the report of the committee on Educational Reunions, read by Prof. H. F. Stauffer.

Dr. Witmer, the last speaker, closed the institute with a talk on "Practical Studies in Child Psychology," by Mary Collins, who gave a most interesting and instructive address. Dr. Witmer which had come within his personal knowledge, where an apparent weakness in intellect had been caused by an operation performed in the dispensary in connection with the University of Pennsylvania.

After a song, the Institute was adjourned at twelve o'clock.

The instructors secured by Miss Collins were among the ablest of the country. The week was unusually pleasant and profitable.

WHEREAS, The existing conditions of our schools are such that we can, with pardonable pride, call the attention of the teachers, school officials and the public in general to the present efficiency, and constantly increasing tendency toward a high plane of excellence, and recognizing the fact that the present system is a positive factor that has accomplished these enviable results, therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the teachers of Cameron county, here assembled in annual session of our County Institute, thus pay our tribute of honor and respect to Miss Collins, who has given us the ennobling of our minds and our souls and constant thought for our welfare has won our regard, and whose ability in intellectual and instructive confidence. Furthermore, feeling that the individual interest manifested by the teachers in the different movements toward the awakening of public interest in the cause of education has much to do with the rate of progress, and believing that the district institute has won its place as a helpful agent, be it

Resolved, That we insist that each teacher attend two or more of these educational meetings during the year. Be it further

Resolved, That we voice our thanks (1) to the noble corps of instructors who have so ably labored toward the broadening of our minds and the ennobling of our souls, and (2) to Miss Myrtle Wyckoff and Miss Myrtle Olmsted for their valuable services. (3) To Miss Grace Walker for the beautiful music rendered for our enjoyment. (4) To our County Commissioners for the use of the court room, and for all assistance so kindly given. (5) To the people of Emporium, and their kind hospitality, and encouragement shown by their attendance upon our day and evening sessions, and to all who have in any way contributed to the success of the Institute.

LLOYD'S LONG RANGE FORECAST OF THE WEATHER AND EASTMAN'S KODAK.

Wind! Wind!! Wind!!! That is what the people of two continents have been looking for, for the past two weeks. Now they are getting it and how the Columbia sails. This store with her main-sail, club-top-sail and jib-sailset, has caught the first fresh trade breeze of the Autumn season, and like the victorious yacht, sweeping ahead of all our competitors on the starboard port tack. We are leading the way in kodaks, bicycles, stationery, wall paper, guns, and ammunition that will bring your game across the finish line. We extend you a cordial invitation to try our guns and ammunition that will stop the birds from beating the wind, wind, wind.
