HENHOUSE WINDOWS.

Tian That Works Well Under All Circumstances Where Winters Are Not Too Cold.

The window here illustrated was recently described as in use by a noted poultry fancier. The method of con-struction is here pictured. The window is low, and has the sashes hinged, so that one may step out into the yard from the henhouse through the win-The upper sash is hinged at the top and swings out, being held up by an arm screwed to the casing. The lower sash is hinged at one side and swings out. This plan will work well under many circumstances where the winters are not too cold, and where the fowls are kept in pens side by side, with adjacent yards outside. In such a case it is often inconvenient to get into the yards unless one can go out into them from the pens. With this method of swinging the sashes the necessity for having a door in each pen, as well as a window, is done away with. In cold climates such a plan can be used for spring, fall and summer, closing the windows in the winter and putting on outside sashes. This device calls for a low window, and this is desirable on other accounts, as low windows let the sunshine quickly onto the floor on winter mornings .- N. Y. Tribune.

LOCATING AN APIARY.

Where Basswood and Clover Abound Is the Place Where Bees Lay Up Honey and Thrive.

If it is the intention to make bee keeping a business, for the dollars and that are in it, it is certainly great importance to consider well the location of the same. There are locali-ties, even in the radius of a few miles, that are much better than others. There are localities where white clover is very abundant, and where a crop is sure every season, whether it is long or short, while there are others that are not so, and occasional years only furnish a crop. Basswood is another principal honey resource, and where this and clover both abound is a desirable locality for an apiary. Bass-wood or linden is a good timber to cultivate. It is very hardy and makes a rapid growth, and might take the place of cottonwood, so extensively grown in the west. In a valley wher fall flowers are plentiful is a good point to seek for, as a late flow of honey is very desirable to place bees in good wintering shape. Alfalfa is one of the best honey-producing plants we have at present, and it would be a safe place to locate, even if no other honey plants are in reach, but it would be all the better if other honey plants are present. There is a long list of honey-bearing plants, but we will give but a few of the principal ones. Millet or sweet clover, crimson clover, alsike clover, mammoth or pea-vine clover, tulip tree or popular, black or sour gum, wild asters, golden-rod, willow maple, buckwheat, cleome or spider plant, all kinds of berries and all kinds of fruit trees, whether wild or domesti-cated.—A. H. Duff, in Prairie Farmer.

Could Change His Mind.

Prof. Hendershott is well known in Pittsburgh as a man of affable temper, and it is rare that he shows even impatience. One day while traveling on a suburban trolley car to call on a friend, he asked the conductor to transfer him to the city street cars at a certain point. Soon afterward the car stopped and he was surprised to see outside the very friend he was seeking. He started to leave the car, when the conductor accosted him. "You can't change for your car here," he said, brusquely. The professor passed him, taking no notice. "Can't change cars here, I tell you," snepoed the conductor again. The professor, deep in conversation with his friend, merely waved his hand to signify that the car might go on without him. "Here," cried the man in brass buttons, angrily, "don't I tell you that you can't change cars at this place?" Then the good old professor answered with severity: "But I can change my mind at this station, can't I?"—Golden Days.

A former commodore-captain of a famous trans-Atlantic line, while friendly and polite to his passengers when below, was very much the reverse if approached when on duty. As he happened to be on deck one fine afternoon, a lady, quite unaware of this peculiarity, accosting him with some trifling query as to the probable duration of the favorable weather, was both surprised and indignant to get curtly answered:

The lady, though taken somewhat aback, was quite equal to the occasion, and rejoined:
