The Man Who Gets Tired.

his trials had exclaimed: "There ain't no good in nothin'." It was the despair of a childish pessimist, but in its way it reflected some of the modern thought. The man who tries and gets tired, and then, because of his weariness, upbraids all that therein is, figures rather largely in the literature of the day. The great trouble with him is that he mistakes his own tired feeling for the general condition of humanity. He is like a person with wrong eyes, who needs glasses in order to get a correct perspective, truly observes Webster Wallace, in the Saturday Evening Post. His distorted views he takes as real, and from them argues that the world is not what it should be and that it is in great need of the remedies which he would like to prescribe for its ailments. As a matter of fact, the world is all right, and the individual who thinks it all wrong will find, upon examining himself. or, better still, having a doctor do it for him, that his attitude of mind and body needs to be brought into adjustment with the rest of humanity. The man who enjoys life, who likes to meet his fellow-beings and to participate in the affairs of his district or his country, finds good in everything except positive sin. The whole tone of the successful life should be confidence. hope, effort, striving, and constant optimism. The man who believes he is going to succeed and keeps that conviction clearly before him almost always wins. It is true that occasional dreamers fall in attempting too great heights, but that no more disproves the value of effort than the few tragedies of mountain climbers show that there are no prosperous and happy villages along the montain sides. sibly the most famous advice that Emerson gave was to "hitch your wagon to a star." And the idea holds good to-day as well as it did 20 years ago. It to win in the face of all conditions and

The Chicago Tribune, which has, for several years, kept account of American benefactions to educational institutions, libraries, art museums and galleries, charities and churches by personal donations and bequests, reports those of 1900 at $60,264,030 as against $79,749,956 last year. However, as last year was a record breaker, be ing about $50,000,000 above the averfor the last decade, the falling off misunderstanding of President Methis year is not surprising. The figures indicate a degree of private donations to worthy objects vastly exceeding those in any other country.

NO CHANCE FOR THEM

Democrats Doomed to a Long Period of Exclusion from Power.

Extracting hope from defeat is the task to which many democrats are now devoting themselves. Some have the frankness to admit that the heresies of populism embodied in the Kansas City platform were, to a large ex-tent, responsible for the crushing second defeat of Bryan and Bryanism. The vagaries of the badly jointed rickety Kansas City platform contrib-uted, no doubt, to the overwhelming character of that democratic defeat, but no nominee and no platform which that party could have offered the peo ple had, in 1900, accomplished Mr. Mc-Kinley's defeat.

Mr. McKinley had, in his first term shown himself possessed, in an emi-nently high degree, of every quality of statesmanship demanded for the right discharge, at one of the most critical periods of our history, of the duties of the world's greatest office. He had suc-cessfully, brilliantly led the nation through the perils of a great foreign war, displaying in his taetful, firm, judicious and far-seeing control of men and events powers of government not inferior to those which made Washington, Jackson, Lincoln and Grant famous throughout the world. The American people likes a president who proves himself equal to the greatest emergencies which may confront him. They measure him by this method of meeting and solving the mightiest problems which call for solution at the hands of his statesmanship and patriotism.

Thus measured, President McKinley was, by the people, rightly adjudged one of the most successful of our chief tries. magistrates, and, as such, undeniably entitled to reelection. His victory was, of course, enhanced and emphasized of his opponents. But the democrats form or a better candidate they could have defeated Mr. McKinley. The latter was simply invincible.

The added duty must stand.

Unless Russia can produce the proof mentioned, it is the Russian minister of finance who made the proof mentioned in the result of the resu

Those democrats who see a silver lining to the huge, heavy, darksome cloud that obscures their party's sky, draw comparisons between the democratic situation after Greeley's defeat, ly hopes to profit through the ex in 1872, and the condition of the party to-day. They point with seeming satisfaction to the overwhelming democratic congressional victory achieved in 1874, just two years after the republican landslide which carried Gen. Grant into the white house for a second term. Conditions are, however, very differ ent now. The republican defeat of 1874 tened by unworthy men on the national administration. There are no such scandals now, and none likely to be.

Preeminent as a soldier, Gen. Grant lacked some qualities needed in an administration. He was too confiding.
Accustomed in war to place implicit reliance on those to whom he issued on. liance on those to whom he issued com-mands, he was equally trustful of men holding high civil office under the government at Washington. In the latter respect he was, in some instances, it is well known, woefully deceived.

President McKinley has all the cau-tion and reserve needed in the successful administration. He expects every man in office to do his duty or take the full consequences of neglect or mal-feasance. No abuse of his confidence will last through all eternity. The man who aims high and works hard and be-lieves in himself is the one who is going feasance. No abuse of his confidence unvisited by stern punishment shali give the democrats an opportunity for success in 1902 or in 1904. The unfortracted first in 1896 and reaffirmed in 1900, has doomed that party to long and deserved exclusion from power .-Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

DELUSION ABOUT HANNA.

Mistaken Impression Regarding His Influence Upon the President and His Policy.

Kinley more than the astounding de-lusion, entertained by some republicans as well as many democrats who do not know him, that he is, and has been ever since 1895, more or less under the influence of Senator Hanna. This sums up, in a way that Is as unjust as it is pieturesque, all the notions to the effect that Mr. Mc-Kinley is a yielding and unstable person, without convictions, or even opinions, that cannot be changed at the command of a stronger man. Newspaper cartoons, which now have influence than newspaper editorials, are largely responsible for these strange beliefs, but they have been fostered by uninformed editors and politicians misled by deceptive appearances and malice. It is interesting to see how ignorance alone misleads writers who are friendly to him about President McKinley, as when they speak of him as "stolid and solemn" because they have only seen his manner in public, when the fact is that Mr. McKinley is a man of humor, who enjoys even the car toons at his own expense, and is as fond of good jokes, and as as telling them, as Abraham Lincoln Remembering the fate of public men who have done otherwise, Mr. McKinlev has kept his wit and humor for private conversation, and thus, nat urally enough, has been accused of having none. These writers would probably be unwilling to believe that Mr. McKinley was a constant reader of "Mr. Dooley" during the Spanish war, just as Mr. Lincoln found recreation in the humorists of the civi war. In both cases this was impor-

sane and sweet-tempered under the most trying experiences.—Henry B. F. MacFarland, in Atlantic.

DUTY OF SECRETARY GAGE

Senseless Attacks of American Free Traders Upon That Efficient Official.

Opponents of the administration and of the republican protective tariff policy have eagerly seized upon Russia's unreasonable imposition of exorbitant duties upon steel and iron imports from the United States as an opportunity for attack upon Secretary Gage and upon the American protective tariff system. According to their ancient custom, the supporters of the free trade theory take sides with foreigners against their own country. It is made a grievous mistake when he imposed on Russian sugar additional duty equal in amount to the bounty which he believes the Russian govern ment indirectly pays to its producers. The secretary is accused of having discriminated against Russia, and he is blamed the more because the imports of Russian sugar are comparatively small.

In his statement, published recently, Secretary Gage makes it plain that when he had become convinced that Russia paid an indirect bounty to its sugar producers it became his duty to take the action which he took. The amount of Russian sugar imports had nothing to do with the case. The question was whether Russia should be treated as other sugar-producing countries that pay bounties to the sugar industry are treated. duty imposed is not a discriminating Neglect to impose it would have been discrimination in Russia's favor and against France, Germany, Bel-gium, the Netherlands and other sugar-producing, bounty-paying coun-

The electoral vote for president of the United States has just been announced in the joint assembly of ongress. This formality was all right, of course, as it was provided or by the statute, but nobody had interest in it. Not even William J. Bryan had any concern in the announcement. McKinley's total was 292 and Bryan's 155. Another Proof That It Pays.

What pays? Why, advertising in this paper. A letter from the makers of Cascarets calls attention to the fact that within five years the sales have grown from nothing to six million boxes last year. This goes to show if you have an article of real merit like Cascarets, advertise it properly and liberally and let all the people know about it, it is sure to bring big results. Readers who have never tried this famous remedy are urged to try it, because in this busy, every day life of ours, we all need something now and then to help nature and there is no better medicine in the world than Cascarets to stimulate the liver and bowels gently and naturally into healthy action.

How She Floored Him.

How She Floored Him.

A fresh young man had a large chunk of conceit removed from his cranium during the past week. The one who removed it was a pretty young Dublin girl who is in Albany for a few weeks' visit while awaiting the establishment of her father's home in the west. One evening last week she was visiting at a friend's house when the fresh young man dropped in. He was charmed with her ways and wit, and worked hard all evening to create an impression. He was flattering himself on his success until the end, which occurred as he left her at the door of her temporary home. Before saying good-night she thanked him heartily for his kindness in accompanying her home.

"Oh, don't mention it," gurgled the young man in his nicest way.

"Indeed, I won't. I'm as much ashamed of it as you are," was the startling reply.

WONDERFUL CURE OF PSORIASIS.

AS a sufferer for thirty years from the worst form of Psori-asis, finally cured by Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, I wish to tell you my experience, that others may benefit by it. I was so grievously afflicted that the matter that exuded from my pores after the scales had peeled off, would cause my underclothing to actually gum to my body. After remaining in one position, sitting or lying down, for an hour or two, the flesh on my elbows and knees would split, so thick and hard would the crusty scales become. The humiliation I experienced, to say nothing of physical agony, was something frightful. The detached scales would fairly rain from my coat sleeves. I have read none of your testimonials that appear to represent a case so bad as mine. But as to the cure. I commenced bathing in hot Cuticura Soap suds night and morning, applied the Cuticura Ointment, and then wrapped myself in a sheet. In two weeks my skin was almost blood red in color, but smooth and without scales. Patches of natural colored skin began to appear, and in less than a month I was cured. I am now passed forty years of age and have skin as soft and smooth as a baby's. Hoping that others may benefit by my experience, and regretting that sensitiveness forbids me from dis-closing my name, I am yours gratefully, J. H. M., Boston, Mass., Sept. 30, 1900.

Millions of People Use Cuticura Soap
