Narrow Escape.

John Furl and his father went to Mix Run last week and purchased a horse, which John undertook to ride through Bennetts Branch Creek at Rancy. When about the middle of the stream, the horse fell down and rolled over John, who had a terrible experience before he reached shore. The horse drifted down stream and lodged against a rock, from where it was rescued by Newton Mix.

A Few of Them Here.

The Sharon correspondent of the Pittsburg Leader, in speaking of the failure of a number of firms who were attracted to that city by the supposed boom, says: "None of them did any advertising in the papers, and aside from the people along State street who passed their stores almost daily but few people knew of their whereabouts or what sort of business, if any, they happened to be trying to do." There are a few stores here just like that.

The New Trains Popular.

The new schedule on the P. & E. R. R., and Buffalo branch went into effect on Monday and gives universal satisfaction. The new trains are solid vestibule and consist of two sleepers, dining cars and two day coaches, one of which is a smoker. Many of our citizens witnessed the arrival of the 11:25 a. m. train on Monday. Both of the through trains are well patronized.

The arrival and departure of W. N. Y. & P. local passenger trains at Emporium depot is a great convenience to the public.

The Electric Light Question.

J. H. Vail, of Philadelphia, an electrical engineer of prominence and highly endorsed by men of high standing, came to Emporium last Friday, upon invitation, and consulted with Burgess E. O. Bardwell and Councilmen C. G. Catlin, G. F. Balcorn and S. E. Murry, appointed by the Borough Council to negotiate plans and specifications. The gentlemen viewed the town and located the lights. Mr. Vail contracted with the committee for full plans and specifications and also to supervise or inspect the work as it progresses. The Council will shortly advertise for bids.

Maro the Magician.

The citizens of Cameron county will, for the first time, have an opportunity of witnessing one of the most clever magicians appearing before an American public. Maro, the refined Magician, Musical Artist and Shadowgrapher, will appear at the opera house, Emporium, Friday evening, March 29th. He is O. S. Metzler, who enjoyed the services of this talented gentleman while he served as President of the Ashland Star Course, endorses the entertainment in the following flattering card:

ASHLAND, PA., March 24, 1899.
We gave Maro the biggest audience of the season and he gave us the best entertainment of an exceptionally brilliant Star Course. A polished gentleman and princely entertainer. He captivated ALL by his clever feats of magic and rare powers as a musician.
O. S. METZLER,
Pastor M. E. Church.
President Citizens' Star Course.

Marriott Brosius Dead.

Lancaster, March 17.—Congressman Marriott Brosius, chairman of the committee on Banking and Currency, died at 3 o'clock yesterday morning from a stroke of apoplexy.

He was stricken at 5 o'clock Friday afternoon and at once became unconscious and remained in that condition until he died. At no time was there any hope entertained for his recovery. Mr. Brosius was in good health up to noon of that day. In the afternoon he assisted to carry a trunk to the attic and bumped his head against a rafter.

Although the accident caused him considerable pain it was not regarded seriously. This, however, is not believed to have been mainly responsible for the stroke.

Mr. Brosius' first appearance as a Congressional candidate was in 1882, when he was nominated as a Congressman-at-Large, but was defeated with the balance of the Republican state ticket. In 1888 he was elected to Congress from the Lancaster District, and has represented it continuously since then. Since 1890 he has had no opposition for the nomination, and last November was re-elected for his seventh term.

James Nefcy Killed.

B. Nefcy received the sad intelligence Friday that his son James had been killed at 8 o'clock that morning while at work on a P. and L. E. freight train near Pittsburg.

A special dispatch to the Philadelphia North American, dated McKeesport, March 15, says: "W. D. Brisbin, while collecting mail in the P. and L. E. railroad yards this morning, discovered a dead man sitting on top of a box car, pinned to the upright brake. Brisbin signaled the trainmen who stopped the engine. The victim had been struck by a beam of a bridge fifteen miles below this city. He was James B. Nefcy, of Driftwood, Pa., a brakeman, who was making his first trip over the line." The top of his head was knocked off.

His remains arrived here Monday afternoon and were viewed by many of his old friends. Rev. Father O'Hern conducted the funeral services Wednesday morning in St. James' R. C. church. Interment was made in St. James' cemetery.—Driftwood Gazette.

MARRIED.

MITCHELL—LOGUE.—At Warner House, Emporium, Pa., March 14th, 1901, by Rev. O. S. Metzler, pastor of M. E. Church, Mr. Randolph T. Mitchell, of Williamsport, Pa., and Miss Desbie Logue, of Driftwood, Pa.

$100.00 Reward.

Emporium, Pa., March 20, 1901.

Editor Cameron County Press:

Dear Sir:—For several years in succession several gentlemen in Cameron county have sent requisitions to the Fish Commissioners for trout fry, and have brought every influence to bear they knew how, to get the young trout. They have done nobly, and have put into our streams for several years, at least thirty cans per year, at a great inconvenience to themselves, and loss of time; in some instances out at night, always lugging cans to small streams or springs most suitable for trout fry, sometimes through snow and over logs. The writer has pulled his team through snow and mud, with cans of trout fry, to get to some choice spot, until the team was white with foam, and then lugged the cans over snow and ice.

All this and more has been done for years, not by one alone but by many. All for the public good, that all might enjoy a season of pleasure in due and proper time. What is the result of all our labors? There are less trout in our streams now than last year, less last year than the year before. At present there is not a stream in the district where we can get a good day's fishing. The reason is not hard to find. Any sportsman will tell you that on the 15th of April, when he starts out expecting to enjoy a good day's sport, he finds beaten paths along the streams, where parties have been up and down illegally fishing.

It would not be so bad if parties fished for a mess of trout for their families. I am sorry to say most of this fishing is done to get trout to sell, and some of our supposed best citizens buy the trout. These people are no better than the pot-hunters. Then some parties dynamite the streams, but the most dastardly act of all, so far as I know, was the putting in of a fish-basket at "Indian Run," on the main stream above Mr. Peasley's. Our Sheriff told me he pulled out the basket, and stated he judged there was at least 1,000 little trout not as long as his finger, caught by the gills, dead, not being able to get between the slots, and also stated that one side of the bank, on a sand-bar, was covered with little trout thrown out by these vandals. Some of us think this is one of the greatest outrages ever committed in this community.

With such proceedings as above stated, we feel that it is no use to try to stock our streams, or do anything with them except try to catch some of the parties who are committing these illegal acts. To this end I will personally pay $50.00 for information that will lead to the conviction of the parties who put a fish-basket in above referred to, and $25.00 for information that will lead to the conviction of parties fishing out of season, selling trout out of season or buying trout out of season. I will also pay $25.00 for information that will lead to the conviction of parties dynamiting our streams. I will agree to have the detective work done, hunting up proofs, etc. All I ask parties to do is to put me on the track of law-breakers, and I will do the rest.

I do not propose to sit quietly and have this dastardly work go on, and nullify the hard work so many of us have done for so many years.

Yours respectfully,
FRED JULIAN.

Some Advantages of Poverty.

Some disadvantages of plenty, Cornelius Vanderbilt used to say, he had one advantage over his boys; he was born poor. This may seem a strange remark for such a man to make, but analyze it and you will find more truth and wisdom in it than at first appears. Man does little except some force be applied, especially in this true in childhood. Sometimes this force is from within, and sometimes from without. An inward feeling of something higher and nobler induces youth to put forth exertion, or the gnawings of hunger or the chill of winter forces it; in either case there is a kind of compulsion used. Conscience compels, duty compels, want compels. But what disadvantages can plenty have? There are two points from which to rise, are attended with great difficulty and require unusual qualities. The children of a long line of wealthy and refined ancestors, which from some course has been reduced to extreme poverty, have a very steep hill to climb which is rendered rough by the obstacles thrown in their way and which their past lives have rendered them very poorly qualified to overcome. By heredity they take the tastes and prejudices of a long line of ancestors, and if they do not take more or less of lethargy, especially from the female side of the house, they are fortunate. They have been accustomed to look upon their position in life as secure. They lack the inward promptings of the laboring class for something higher, and they know not, as the poor do, how to get their daily bread, and having lived at the top have no inward promptings up. The children of the liberal salaried man who has lived up to the full extent of his salary, having laid up nothing for an emergency, are in many respects in the same position as the wealthier, reduced to poverty. Their children have mingled freely with those of their employers and on equal terms, their apartments are as tastefully and expensively furnished as theirs, and they have not been taught to rely upon themselves. All their wants have been supplied and the future to them seems one of pleasure. The head of the home is taken and they are compelled to face the world with no idea what to do or how to do it, and to make their condition more difficult they are met with the cold shoulder from their previous associates, and the sneers and gibes of those whom heretofore they have looked upon as beneath them. Every boy and every girl should learn some business or occupation that will enable them to live independently and support any who may rightfully look to them for sustenance and should cultivate such a spirit as will induce them to do it with pleasure. * * *

Letter From California.

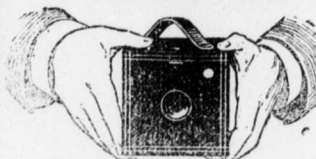

Los Angeles, Cal., March 13, 1901.
Mr. H. H. MULLIN,
Emporium, Pa.,

My Dear Sir:—In order to "stab" several persons with one "pen," and possibly kill an editor with grief, I would like to use a little space in your estimable paper to communicate with old friends back there in the land of the "ground-hog's winter." While I had had designs on southern California's climate for some time, they were not very serious, until the ground-hog acted as he did on the day set apart for his exclusive use, in February; that settled it as for me, and I forthwith decided to part company with the ground-hog and his operations for this year, and within a week I had packed my "grip," and together with what I had of the "same commodity" stored away in my system, was on my way to the land of sunshine and oranges, which I reached within a week after leaving Oregon.

Upon my arrival here I was reminded of the words of the song, "If you want to get to heaven o'er the Nickle Plate Route," etc., which route, sure enough, I had taken as far as Chicago, the transition was so great, the change so marked. At Chicago I had become desperate and made a dash for a milder climate which I "fetched up" with at St. Louis that same evening, but as the article I was looking for was not quite of the right consistency yet, I only continued my sojourn in the future Exposition City (no charge for this advertising) about twenty-four hours, and hid me on to El Paso, where I found it more congenial, after a continuous ride of fifty hours. Here I made a somewhat longer stay, going over into Old Mexico and taking in some sights in the quaint old city of Juarez (Hoo-ar-ee) originally called El Pasa del Norte, but changed to Juarez in honor of the President of the Republic of that name during his administration. While in this city I visited the old Church of the Crucifixion, a temple of historical interest reputed to be 354 years old, thus taking rank with some of the oldest buildings dedicated to the worship of God, on this continent. This church is richly ornamented in hand carved
