Against the Time of Need.
The Clearfield Raftsmen Journal, in a leading editorial on the benefits of life insurance says:

Yet, in the face of all the benefits derived by Life Insurance, we see young men spending their earnings on base ball, foot ball, or other trivial things, without a thought of investing a small portion in something that cannot help but benefit them far beyond any other investment. A small saving of the monthly earnings of a young man will pay the premium on a Life policy and if not thus applied would probably be spent without any return whatever.

The fixed payment Life Insurance policy is as sure of a return as a Government bond, and can be matured in such a period as the holder may desire, and in case of accident or inability to pay any premium due, it does not lapse but provision is made for return of the money paid for carrying such policy. Every young man, every young married man, and every business man, should carry some Life Insurance even if he deny himself of some of the luxuries of life to do so. It is the best investment a poor man can make and we only need inquire of the widows living in Clearfield for the proof of this claim.

Writers for the advertising periodicals evidently regard the preparation of advertisement as one of the most difficult of arts, says the Philadelphia Record. Yet the business man who knows all about his own establishment need have no trouble about making his announcements effective. It is only necessary that he should speak through the newspaper as he would speak to a prospective customer in person. An advertisement cannot fail of its purpose if it shall set forth in simple words and readable type the fact which it is intended to make known.

An exchange says: Man born of woman is small potatoes and few in a hill. In infancy he is full of colic and God-fry's cordial, in age he is full of cuss words and rheumatism. In youth his mother takes him across her knee and sweetens his life with her slipper, and when a man grows the sheriff pursues him through the alleys all the days of his life. He spreadeth like a green bay tree. He getteth into office, and his friends cling to him like flies to a sugar barrel. He swelleth with vanity. He cutteth ice for a short time but is hewn down at the next convention and cast in salt box and his name is Dennis. Out of office and out of friends, he goeth busted and lieth down in a new pasture. He dieth out of the world and goeth where it is warm enough without clothes, and the last end of man is worse than the first.
