How They Hurt Them.

Didn't the Democrats hit the trusts hard when they were in power? Didn't they hit the Whiskey Trust when they extended the time for paying the ninety million dollars taxes due the Govern-ment? Didn't they lam it to the Sugar Trust when they dallied with the Tariff bill until the trust had scraped the earth for raw sugar and brought it in free under the McKinley bill? Didn't they sock it to the trusts again when they repealed the anti-trust provision of the McKinley bill which imposed a fine not exceeding $5,000 on persons convicted of entering into a trust, and then enacted an anti-trust law that prescribed no penalty against trusts, except among importers, who are not organized and never have been? Don't they make the trusts tremble when they assert that only the Protective Tariff fosters them, while it is known that trusts are organized and flourished in Free-Trade England? Don't they land another staggering blow to the trust octopus is known that ther national chairman, James K. Jones, belongs to one of the biggest trusts in America? Didn't they hit the Ohio trusts hard when they dehit the Ohio trusts hard when they denounced them in their platform in 1899 and then went to Washington, D. C., and picked out the rankest monopolist and trust stock owner to run for Governor? Didn't the New York Democracy present a fine spectacle as a trust fighter with a ringleader of the whole pack crimminally connected with the American Ice Trust? Didn't Chairman Jones land another broadside into the octopus when he offered an amendman Jones land another broadside into the octopus when he offered an amend-ment to the Porto Rican Tariff bill to return the duties on sugar imported from that island to the person from whom they were collected, which would have put over $600,000 back into the hands of the Sugar Trust?—Bridgeton (N. J.) "Pioneer."

Letter to H. C. Olmsted.

Emporium, Pa.

Dear Sir: There are a thousand ways to cheat in our business; and whether our neighbors suspect us of cheating or not, depends on ourselves, our talk, our face, our eye, our walk, our standing straight up or crooked—our neighbors know all about us without being straight up or crooked—our neighbors know all about us without being toid!

We are pretty well known. We are no infant—146 years old—began business on this little island (New York) in 1754. * Have been making paint and a noise in the world ever since.

And there isn't a man, alive or dead, that wouldn't testify for us, if you should stir him up.

We grind lead and zinc in linseed oil by machinery, all together. That's our business. We live on the profit—machinery over hand-work. Painters mix their paint by hand—they imagine they do—they half mix it. We grind together: whole-mix. Better and costs less money.

We are the very best friend the painters has if he knows it.

whether he we are the very best friend the painter has, if he knows it—yes, whether he knows it or not. He can't afford not to know it. We are the painter's customer's friend. We save them both money.

Yours truly,

F. W. DEVOE & Co.

Mr. G. A Stillman, a merchant of Tampico, Ill., writes: "Foley's Kidney Cure is meeting with wonderful success. It has cured some cases here that physicians pronounced incurable. I myself am able to testify to its merits. to-day is a living picture of health, and Eoley's Kidney Cure has made it such."

Professor Shaler of Harvard Univer sity, in his recent book, "The Individual, makes a considerate, but much needed protest against the prevalent custom of spending money in costly monuments to mark the final resting place of the dead. Life is nothing without sentiment, but sentiment should be enlightened and directed by rational considerations, and we contend that this way of honoring the departed does not commend itself to the most enlightened judgment. Granting that it is desirable, from the individual's own point of view, that his memory should not be forgotten, it is possible in any real way to save from oblivion the memories of the vast majority of men? President Eliot of Harvard has expressed the opinion that only about one person in ten million is destined to achieve lasting fame; oblivion more or less complete will be the sure portion of the rest. memory of an ordinary person will not out-live the lives of those who knew him personally. Only a limited circle of these, made up of his nearest relatives and closest friends, will really cherish his memory, and they will do it for love, and without the aid of an imposing shaft. When this circle shall have passed away, the memory of his personality will also have perished utterly. His name may be preserved, but it will be but a name. And what is in a mere name? I am speaking, remember, of the ordinary, undistinguished person. His grandchildren will remember him, but to his great grandchildren he will be utterly unknown, and if one is forgotten by his own des-cendants, how vain to think that he will be remembered by others. How many of us know the names of our great grandparents, or have ever seen their last resting places? What does the slab in memory of somebody else's forgotten great grandfather signify to us? The sample fact of the matter is that the attempt to perpetuate one's memory to future generations by means of a monument over his remains is most utterly futile. Erecting monuments to attract the attention of posterity is so much vain whistling to the wind.

whisting to the wind.

However sad it is to think that one day we shall be utterly forgotten, it would be demanding too much of posterity to expect anything else. The stagnation of China is a warning against the stagnation of China is a warning against the stagnation of the stagnat the undue demands of ancestors to be remembered by posterity. The duty which one owes to an ancestor of a century ago is infinitesimal as compared with his present duty to the life of the race and to humanity. We belong to the race far more immediately and completely than we do to our individual ancestors. In the future life of the race, the only thing about us that can live. or that ought to live, is the consequences of our actions. The imprint of our lives upon the life of the race will always abide, though even our names shall be utterly forgotten. Our place in the life of the race will be that of the small fragments of stone that go to fill the interior crevices of a wall, out of sight and out of mind. Comfort enough there should be in the reflection that a thoughtful posterity will recognize in a general way their connection with the past and their indebtedness to those who lived before them.

The attempt to perpetuate the memory of one departed will be justifiable and will be effective if it take the form of some active service rendered to the community in his name. A memorial church staggering blow to the trust octopus or school, or professorship, or library, or drinking fountain, or even a humble wayside seat overlooking some beautiful scene, will keep one's memory green and fragrant far beyond what can be done to that end through a monument in a ceme-tery costing hundreds of dollars. Except for the institutions which perpetuate their names, Stephen Girard and Johns Hop-kins would have been utterly forgotten in two generations after their deaths. Who knows or honors the name of the young man over whose body in Forest Lawn Cemetery, Buffalo, stands a monumental pile costing thirty thousand dol-

The assertion has been hazarded that more money has been expended upon monuments in our cemeteries than upon the entire educational system of our country. It is possibly the fact. What a futile waste of hard-earned money. What an impoverishment this means of the life of the community. Why could not this money have been given for the support of Christian missions, or to our schools that the teachers might be paid the salaries they ought to receive, or to the equipment of hospital wards? Why should poor families who have barely enough for the necessaries of life, under the tyranny of a misguided sentiment, deny themselves those necessaries, or involve themselves in debt, in order to erect monuments of stone to tueir dead? Such monuments are futile as memorials. A simple slab or marker would serve as well to indicate for a century or so the exact resting place of the departed. After that it will be a matter of entire indfference whether the spot can be identified

We have been speaking of the ordinary, undistinguished individual.
