Can't Suit Everyone.
 The printing press has made presidents, killed poets, furnished bustles for beautiful women, run down horse thieves, transformed towns into cities, built schools and colleges, educated the minds of those who would otherwise have been ignorant and drones in society, punished genius with criticism; it has curtailed the power of kings, converted paupers into bankers, and graced pantry shelves, says one of our exchanges. It has made paupers out of college presidents; it has educated the homeless and robbed the philosopher of his reason; it smiles and turns its toes to the daises, but it cannot be run to suit everybody and the man who tries it will find himself in a lunatic asylum.

Buffalo's New Theatre.

Of all the theatrical attractions that have been offered in Buffalo this season, there is one that stands out with special prominence on account of its gorgeous mounting and the remarkable strength of its cast, it being a pictorial reflex of the Pan-American Exposition. It is the bright musical comedy "A Trip to Buffalo," now being presented nightly at the handsome new Academy to large and enthusiastic audiences. This new playhouse is a splendid example of what a modern theatre should be, and, in addition to all its other up-to-date features, is absolutely fire-proof in every particular. "A Trip to Buffalo" belongs to that class of production in which music and comedy are happily combined. The music was composed by William Loraine, whose name is well known in the musical world through his "Salome," "Zamona," and other characteristic compositions, and is worthy of great praise. From beginning to end the score is filled with a succession of catchy airs which have now become highly popular in and about Buffalo. Harry B. Marshall is the librettist and he has provided a book in which fun and laughter run riot. There is a plot, too, more or less robust, and the story of the piece will give something more than a suggestion of its many ludicrous situations. The scene of the first act is laid in Turkey. Three envoys from Buffalo call upon the Sultan and invite him to attend the great Pan-American Exposition. The Sultan, who has grown tired of the faded favorites in his harem and is cast in about for some new diversion, readily accepts the invitation. In honor of the envoys and to make his departure memorable, His Majesty gives a gorgeous Oriental entertainment, with which the first act closes. The second act takes place aboard the Sultan's flagship in mid-ocean. Here many complications develop, brought about by a discarded harem favorite and two conceiving court officials, who have secured passage in disguise. This trio, when unmasked, are thrown overboard and the act ends with a grand finale, "Land Ho!" just as New York Harbor is sighted. The scenes of the third act are laid at the Pan-American Exposition and illustrate the adventures of the Sultan on the Midway. The most interesting features of this lane of pleasure are reproduced and the entire act abounds with local color. Herein are special opportunities for costuming and comedy situations, of which the author and composer have taken advantage.
 The principal Oriental character of "A Trip to Buffalo" are Abdul Damiit XXX, an erratic Sultan who longs for a new harem; Heiney Bey, his confidential advisor; Muley Rafferty, chief of the Sultan's secret service; Ameta, the flower of the harem; Kelesha, another flower, but, alas, a faded one; Sallie, the Sultan's American protege, and Capt. Searf of the Turkish navy. Jack Dall, showman and tourist from the Pan-American Exposition, is the leading American character and his breezy manner provokes many a hearty laugh. The other characters are Willie Sport, another envoy from the Exposition, Bessie Bussell, an American newspaper correspondent, Vanity Vassar, a London society belle, and Mrs. Vassar, her mother.
 "A trip to Buffalo" is presented by a company of sixty people, all of them clever performers, the chorus alone numbering forty-five persons who both sing and act well. No expense has been spared in staging this production, and the stage settings and costumes are extremely handsome.
 The music in "A Trip to Buffalo" is made doubly entertaining by a specially augmented orchestra, most of the musicians having been brought from leading New York theatres for this production. French horns, bassoons, oboes, and other instruments usually employed only in the largest metropolitan theatres are required for this piece, and the orchestral effects are inspiring throughout. Mr. Loraine, the composer of the music, personally directs the orchestra at every performance.
 Special accommodations may be reserved at the Academy for theatre parties, and seats are on sale a month in advance.

ADMIT DANGER IS OVER

The wouldbe assassin and the authorities of Erie county will, for county, state and national pride, make a vigorous prosecution. Unless Governor Odell is asked to interfere I see no need of his calling an extra term or deputizing an assistant attorney general to prosecute."
Cannot Find Reason For Assault.
 Asked as to the enacting of legislation against anarchists he said: "I have not thought much on the matter. What has disturbed me has been to find a reason for even anarchists to attack a man like President McKinley. Here is the one country where they are allowed perfect freedom of speech. Here as the ruler is a man descended from farmer stock. Here is a man who has no fortune or no means other than that which he may manage to save out of his salary as president. Probably many a workingman in the United States today has as large an amount of real estate as Mr. McKinley. In addition he is a kindly-disposed, christian gentleman and in every great emergency in which he could act he has been a friend of the common people. Why should he be shot at then, even by anarchists?"
 The vice president declined with some little vehemence an invitation to see the Exposition. He said: "I do not believe, even though I am assured of the president's convalescence, that it would be entirely proper for me to take part in any of the festivities. I came here absolutely as a matter of duty, both to the president and to the people, and not for pleasure."
