Resolutions.

At a special meeting of W. C. No. 136, P. O. S. of A., of Sinnamahoning, Pa., Sept. 17th, 1901, a committee was appointed and the following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, We, the members of Washington Camp, No. 136, Patriotic Order Sons of America, of Sinnamahoning, Pa., being a body composed of American born men, lovers of free speech and free press as given to us by our sires as a sacred heritage and

WHEREAS, Our late President, William McKinley, has been taken from us by the foul act of an assassin, at the height of his career, after a spotless life, beloved by all his people to whom he had given a patriotic and successful administration, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of W. C. No. 136, P. O. S. of A., extend our sincere sympathy to the beloved wife of the late President William McKinley and trust that God, in his infinite goodness and mercy will guard and protect her.

Resolved, That we desire to record our abhorrence of the greatest and foulest of crimes in the annals of history and firmly believe that the monster of anarchy has no place in this free country of ours and that every effort should be taken to stamp it out completely.

Resolved, That we heartily endorse the actions of the Honorable state officials in endeavoring to rid our American cities of this curse to civilization, and that we hereby extend our earnest and hearty support to every effort that may be made with such an object in view.

Resolved, That we pledge our loyal support to President Roosevelt, in the great responsibilities that have been so unexpectedly thrust upon him and will welcome the time when the strong arm of the law will banish from our shores anarchy and all it implies.

Resolved, That our charter be draped for the space of thirty days, that a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes of this Camp and a copy be sent to the county press.

Advertising.

Robert C. Ozden, managing partner of John Waanemaker's New York store, gave an address last Wednesday evening at the Sphinx Club, New York, on the subject of advertising, in which he declared that the two essentials to business success in this age were, first, to know how to merchandise, and second, to know how to advertise.

Attract attention. Get people to your place of business. Study their wants and tastes, and then cater to them. Let them know that you appreciate their trade.

Enlighten them. Tell them all about what you have to sell. When you have a bargain for them let them know it. Do not hide your bargains under a bushel, but announce them with tinkling cymbals and sounding brass.

A street fakir can come to town and sell a car load of stuff on the Public Square that could be purchased cheaper in one of our own stores. Why? Simply because he has studied the art of attracting attention. He first gets the people around him, then he tells them what he has and how cheap he will sell it. The merchant wonders why they don't buy this stuff of him. They don't know he has it. They have never thought about it. They have not been invited.

Be honest. Do not make any statements that are untrue. Do not practice deception, but establish yourself in the confidence of the people.

Advertising is the basis of growth. Systematic, persistent and intelligent advertising is the first requisite of success.

The merchant who thinks that a little money spent in advertising is simply a little money wasted, is too narrow-minded and too penny-pinching to take delight in giving his customers a bargain when he has it. The up-to-date merchant knows that his advertisement is as important as his stock, and he gives it just as much attention.

There is not a great merchant in America to-day who, if asked the secret of his success, cannot answer in one word—Advertising.

Attract attention. Let the people know of your existence. Tell them what you have and how cheap you can sell it. Don't let the cobwebs gather on your brain as well as on your goods, and expect the people to come around with a search warrant to find out what you have and how much you ask for it. When you have something nice, something new, something cheap, tell the people about it. And the more conspicuous you make it the better. Make your name a household word. When your competitor quits, take advantage of the opportunity and advertise stronger.

Western Rebuke to Yellow Journalism and its Hypocrites.

The Chicago Tribune prints the following bitter rebuke of yellow Journalism:

AY, turn your column rules, ye hypocrites!

Smear the dead president with your praise!

Tell of his courage and his manliness, His gentleness, his unobtrusive ways, His high and noble qualities! 'Tis he Who late with coarse abuse and vile cartoon

And ribald jest to public execration

Ye held up what hath wrought a change so soon?

Go, take a front seat among the mourners,

You who of his latest breath Made merchandise. Weep for him now, ye knaves

Who hounded him to death.

President McKinley's Insurance.

Last week the New York Life Insurance Company paid to the estate of the late President McKinley, a check for fifty thousand dollars in payment of a policy for that amount issued to the President in 1896. Previous to this $50,000 policy, Mr. McKinley had taken out with the New York Life, years before, one policy for $10,000, which matured, and on which the cash surrender value was paid April 25th, 1893. Another for $3,000 matured, on which the surrender value was paid May 16, 1895.

It is twenty-two years since Mr. McKinley first connected himself with the New York Life as a policy holder. The New York Life has also paid the following insurances carried by some of the Nation's chief executives: Ex-President James A. Garfield, $25,000; ex-President Chester A. Arthur, $20,000; ex-President Benjamin Harrison, $20,000 and ex-Vice President Garret A. Hobart, two policies for $55,000.

The Laws of the Presidential Succession.

The number of inquiries upon the subject which have reached this office suggests the utility of an article conveying some information on the subject of the law of the Presidential succession. At the time Garfield was shot and for some years later the Presidential office passed to the Vice President and from him to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and further than that no provision had been made. This was recognized to be a dangerous condition of affairs and in 1886, at the first session of the Forty-ninth Congress, a law was enacted which provided that the succession should be from the Vice President to the members of the Cabinet in the following order:

Secretary of State.
Secretary of the Treasury.
Secretary of War.
Attorney General.
Postmaster General.
Secretary of the Navy.
Secretary of the Interior.

At the time this law was passed there was no such officer as Secretary of Agriculture, and whether the succession would extend to him by construction is a moot point. So far, however, as Secretary Wilson is concerned, it is immaterial as he having been born an alien, would be ineligible any how. It has been asked what becomes of the office of Vice President when its incumbent succeeds to the Presidency? The answer is that it falls temporarily into abeyance. There ceases to be any Vice President. His only active function is to preside over the deliberation of the Senate and that function devolves upon the president of that body pro tem, who at this time is Senator William F. Frye, of Maine—Philadelphia Inquirer.

McDonald-Kautz.

Mr. Daniel McDonald of Emporium, and Miss Ethel M. Kautz of Beechwood were joined in marriage at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Ferguson on East Fifth street, Monday afternoon last, by the Rev. O. S. Metzler minister of the First Methodist Episcopal church. Mr. McDonald is in the employ of the Emporium Iron Company and is a highly respected young man, while Miss Kautz is one of Beechwood's most estimable young ladies. Mr. and Mrs. McDonald left on the flyer Tuesday morning for Buffalo and Niagara Falls, and will enjoy the beauties of the Pan-American. On their return they will reside in Emporium.

Free Mail Delivery in the Country.

"Bradstreets" (Ind.).

Free mail delivery in the rural districts is one of the postal branch of the Government now, and, judging from some remarks made by the Postmaster General a day or two ago, the service will receive a notable extension in the near future. At a meeting of the State Fair Association, at Concord, N. H., Mr. Smith said that the post office had been carried to the doors of 31,000,000 of population who live in the cities and large towns of the United States, but that the large problem remains of carrying the mails to the doors of 21,000,000 Americans who live on the farms. He recalled the fact that within the last two years the service had been extended over a territory larger than that of all England. Before the fiscal year is closed the service will have been carried over 8000 routes, bringing the post office to the doors of more than 6,000,000 people, and reaching one-third of the population it is intended to furnish with the improved postal facilities. This is making progress with celerity, for, of course, the amount of territory to be covered by the extension of free delivery in the rural districts is a weighty factor in the problem. It is much easier to reach a million people in thickly populated centers than a tenth of that number in sparsely settled districts.

BRIEF MENTION.

The Ladies of the Presbyterian church will serve the first oyster supper of the season, Friday evening, Oct. 11th, 1901.

The Sterling Run tannery will soon be a thing of the past, a few days more being required to complete the work.

The Thompson House, at Kane, has been closed by the proprietors. That's bad, and will be deeply deplored by the public.

The Clearfield Rafsman's Journal has discovered the fact that every subscriber on its books by the name of "Johnston" pays cash promptly, and concludes from this that the Johnston family has a distinguishing trait of character called honesty. The Journal further says: A newspaper office is a barometer to the integrity of man. Show me a man who pays his subscription to his family paper promptly and I will show you a man who can secure a certificate of honesty from his neighbors without any trouble. Show me a man who will receive statement after statement from the publisher of the paper, receive it, read it and never pay up his dues for the same and I will show you a man whose neighbors hesitate to sell him flour or feed on his promise to pay.

An up-to-date scizors grinder has struck town. He came in on a bicycle and the bicycle is his motive power for his scizors grinder. The emory wheel which does the work of sharpening is fixed to the top of the diamond frame and it connects by a belt to a wheel attached to the axle on the side opposite the small sprocket wheel. When the grinder wants to get to work on a dull pair of scizors or a knife, he places an inverted V-shaped pair of iron rods under the saddle support, thus raising the rear wheel from the ground, and straddling the seat he proceeds to grind away. The job done he removes the supports, attaches them to the side of the bicycle and rides on to find another customer.—Bradford Star.

"God's Will Be Done."

With deepest founts of Love to drain
They could not stay the fleeting breath
The bolts of science hurled in vain,
Fell harmless at the fest of Death.
A million prayers rose on high—
Yet hoped downward with the sun
As faintly came that farewell sigh:
"It is God's way—
His will be done!"
So passed a soldier brave and true;
So passed a clean and loyal soul.
The right he ever kept in view,
And pressed breast forward to the goal
This was a man—so loved, so wise!
And when his splendid race was run
In simple faith he closed his eyes:
"It is God's way—
His will be done!"

Don'ts For Fathers.

Do not expect your son to keep perfectly quit for any length of time. You could not do it when you were a boy.

Do not expect your son to confide and trust in you if you do not meet him half way.

Remember there is no one on earth who has a keener sense of right and wrong than your boy. Remember also that naughty, mischievous boys are usually very clever and have the making of smart, reliable men.

Always keep your promises. If you threaten to punish a boy the next time he offends or disobeys, be sure to do it.

Remember your wife has had the care of the children all day. Few men realize the responsibility and unceasing labor in the care of children, the long, weary hours with the babies, the constant attention, the everlasting patience necessary. Help her in the evening with the boys.

"I am a firm believer in 'early to bed,' for children," writes Mrs. M. E. R. Alger, in "Good Housekeeping" for August.

Do not spoil your children with luxuries. Plain food, plain clothes, are what they should have. Silk dresses, diamond rings, trips to the theater and opera in the evening, take the zest away from your daughters when they become young women.

Visits to your club, and the keeping of late hours, do not tend to make your sons either healthy or wise. They will know all about life before they are grown up. Keep both your daughters and sons amused and interested in childish things as long as possible; time enough for the care of life later on.—Ex.

Letter to A. F. Vogt.

Emporium, Pa.

Dear Sir: There's a little bit of a state down east—a Rhode Island man was fined $100 the other day for selling potatoes—his bushel was like his state; short measure.

It isn't fair to punish a man for short-bushel potatoes, and not for short-gallon paint.

There is short-gallon paint in many stores in your section.

If you get sent to the legislature, will you get the law fixed?

Devoe lead and zinc don't measure short; and don't last short. It's full-measure both ways.

Yours truly,

"LEAD, KINDLY LIGHT."

The Favorite Hymn of the Late President McKinley.

Lead, Kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom.
Lead Thou me on;
The night is dark and I am far from home,
Lead Thou me on,
Keep Thou my feet; I do not ask to see
The distant scene; one step enough for me.
I was not ever thus, nor prayed that Thou
Shouldst lead me on,
I loved to choose and see my path;
but now
Lead Thou me on;
I loved the garish day and, spite of fears,
Pride ruled my way; remember not
past years,
So long Thy power has blessed me,
sure it still
Will lead me on.
O'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent till
The night is gone,
And with the morn those angel faces smile,
Which I have loved long since, and lost awhile.
—Cardinal John Newman.

Parents, the subjects Child Study and Literature should have a vital interest for you. Have you planned to attend the Institute sessions? You ought. Court House, Oct. 14th-18th, 1901.

The Ladies' Home Journal for October is, perhaps, the best number of this magazine ever issued. The literary features include "How the Leopard Got His Spots," by Rudyard Kipling; "A Fifth Avenue Troubadour," by Ernest Seaton-Thompson; the first installment of "A Gentleman of the Blue Grass," by Laura Spencer Porter; the last of "Miss Alcott's Letters to Her 'Laurie,'" and the closing chapters of "Alleen." "Some Things the President Does Not Do," a collection of anecdotes about Whistler, the artist, and Mr. Bok's advice to a young man about to marry are important features. The regular editorial departments are supplemented by nine new ones of great interest, among which Professor Edward Howard Griggs's talks on "The Education of a Child from Eleven to Eighteen," Professor Schmucker's "Seeing Things Outdoors," and Miss Withey's "Writing and Speaking Correctly" are noteworthy. The illustrations and art features are superb. By The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia. One dollar a year; ten cents a number.
