STATE AND COUNTY POLITICAL NOTES.

The Republican primaries of Clearfield county, last Saturday, resulted in Hon. W. C. Arnold carrying off the Congressional prize. The remaining county, Center, will not elect for some Harrisburg Telgraph: Pattison is going to be thrown and thrown badly by the laboring men of the State, who are not to be caught by the chaff of the Erie convention. No politician with clear vision imagines for a moment that the former Governor has even a chance to win this year.

Harrisburg Telegraph: Little enthusiasm has been aroused in Philadelphia by the nomination of Pattison. and the Republican leaders, according to all accounts, are not worrying over the outcome of the campaign. It is said that the city organization, as well as the friends of Gordon, Ryan and Donnelly, will support him. It is claimed that Pattison is forty per cent weaker now than when he ran as a candidate for Mayor against Mayor Warwick in 1895 and was defeated by 61,000, and the claim is also made that Judge Pennypacker will carry Philadelpha by 125,000. Each ward organization in Philadelphia, whether dominated by a Quay or anti-Quay following at present, is for Judge Penny packer, and the Democratic workers at their best cannot hope to secure for Pattison a vote larger than the 58,000 cast for Bryan in 1900, which was 5,000 less than the Bryan vote of 1896, when the McKinley majority in Philadelphia was 115,000.

The Philadelphia Press thinks that Mr. Cleveland cannot help his party by taking it back to Samuel J. Tilden. It says: "If the democratic party is to be relieved form the burden of issues which have been killed by the decree of the American people' it must slough off not only Bryan's free silver but Cleveland's free trade. It may be well for parties to avoid searching for gaudy new issues while the old ones are unsolved, but when new issues arise a live party will face them and not be always looking backward. The evershrinking fortunes of the democratic party cannot be revived by the leaders 'whose days among the dead are passed,' and who have no opinion to express on the living, vital questions of the present.',

The Lewisburg News, Senator Benj. Focht's paper, has this to say about the Republican candidate for Governor

"The Independent element in the Republican party cannot oppose Judge Pennypacker unless it is for the fact that he repented and became a stalwart. In 1882 he was chairman of the Independent committee in Philadelphia. While he has since became a regular Republican he is nevertheless a man of his own mind. As a judge he has stood above reproach. past record is sufficient to indicate what his future will be. He will be his own boss and no one will dictate to him. If any one should attempt it will amount nothing.

The Man Who Knows it All.

"Why didn't you make that most excellent suggestion to him. If you had done so it might have saved him a lot of trouble." know it, but nevertheless I said nothing. You see he is one of those fellows who thinks he knows it all, and will never accept any advice from anyone, and so I kept silent." This conversation referred to a type of man with whom we are familiar, the man who apparently seems to consider himself endowed with heavenly wisdom, and who thinks no one else possesses any ideas worth heeding. Everyone, especially in youth, is apt to have a touch of this feeling. The less knowledge a man possesses and the less experience he has had the more sure he often is that he is infallible. The man who possesses common sense very soon learns to appreciate his own limitations and to value the counsel of other wellbalanced and experience minds. He perceives that it is impossible for one person to create a corner in knowledge, and that even the greatest of intellects is liable to err. He will not undervalue the virtue of self-reliance but he will perceive that to be worth anything it must be based upon a solid foundation of knowledge and experience, and that in rearing such the efforts of others may be of the greatest service. As all Scripture was written for our learning, so was all history. We can only accurately judge of the future by the past, and we can only become truly wise by availing ourselves of the facts brought out through the experince of others who have like feeling with ourselves.

The man who knows it all, however, proceeds upon a different theory. He takes for the guide of his actions his own inclinations and experiences, and regards himself as entirely competent to come to a correct conclusion without making use of wisdom of the ages or his cotemporaries. To such an extent does his self-confidence carry him that should another suggest a course of action which he really perceives to be correct, and which, perhaps, he would himself have chosen, he will nevertheless, to show his contempt for advice, adopt another. Persons who are aware of the failing of such a man sometimes neutralize it by either suggesting to him just opposite of what they want him to do, or else by making it appear that their own ideas really emanate from him. The wisdom of taking counsel has been shown by the actions of the greatest of nations. In such the chief ruler has surrounded himself with able men, to whom he looks for advice. Our own President has his Cabinet, to whose judgment all important matters are submitted. He may not act in all cases upon their advice, but he gets the benefit of their views before making up his mind. Constitutional monarchs also have their cabinet advisers. are a necessity in every country where there is freedon and progress. It is only in countries where the people have no voice and where ignorance and unenlightenment reign that the chief ruler is permitted to act the role of the man who knows it all. And even in such cases trouble follows if the ruler fails to consel with others.

The most successful business man is he who invites the advice and assistance of his employers upon such matters as they are competent to judge. In many instances they have a detailed knowledge of their particular work which is not possessed by the head of the house himself. It is but the part of selfinterest for him to avail himself of such knowledge. If, however, he refuses, to do so, and discourages any attempt on the part of his em-ployes to give him the benefit of their experience he will inevitably suffer in his business. The truly wise employer will make a practice of consulting his employes upon matters concerning which they have particular knowledge, and he will encourage them to make sugges-tions for the betterment of their He need not necessarily always accept these, but he can show this appreciation of the spirit that prompts them, and thus gain the good will and earnest co-operation of his men. If the latter, however, find that all their efforts to advance the interests of their employers are frowned upon they will soon come to lack interest, and will henceforth perform their work without spirit. They will do just what the strictest interpretation of their hiring calls for and no more, and their employers will lose the benefit of their advice and experience. The most notable business successes have been made by those who have had the hearty co-operation of their subordinates and who have thoroughly learned the lesson that no man can hold to the view that he knows it all without paying dearly for his infatuation.

Poisoning the System. It is through the bowels that the body is clensed of impurities, Constipation keeps these poisons in the system, causing headache, dulness and melancholia at first then unsightly eruptions and finally serious illness unless a remedy is applied. De Witt's Little Early Risers prevent this trouble by stimulating the liver and promote easy, healthy action of the bowels. These little pills do not act violently but by strenthening the bowels enable them to perform their own work. Never gripe or distress. R. C. Dodson.

Late Literary News.

What makes the happy relation between man and woman, is an eternally interesting question, and a clever discussion of why marriages fail, presented by Fafford Pyke in his article "The Woman's Side," is certain to receive the very wide consideration which has been given to that author's prayings the very when has been given to that author's previous articles on the discussion of woman versur man. The July Cosmopolitan seems to be almost equally divided in interest between men and women. "An interest between men and women. "An Experiment in Domestic Finance" is another entirely novel article which will appeal to women, while some twenty pages devoted to the "Captains of Industry" will receive the consideration of men in all classes of business. The Cosmopolitan has undertaken to present a series of brief sketches of the men who are leaders in finance, manufacturers, and commerce not presented. men who are leaders in finance, manufacturers, and commerce, not prepared in an off hand way, but by writers of the greatest ability who have an exact knowledge of their subjects. The series thus far produced has attracted the widest attention. The industrial changes which have of late been occurring with such rapidity have the widest possible interest for all classes. The knowledge of these men, their derivation, leading characteristics and weaknesses throws much light upon the news of the day in which their names constantly recur. constantly recur.

"The Hound of the Baskervilles" In The Philadelphia Press.—Sherlock Holmes' greatest piece of detective work is done in the new story by Dr. A. Conan Doyle "The Hound of the Baskervilles." Holmes himself says to Watson, his co-worker. "Here at last is a foeman worthy of our steel." The is a foeman worthy of our steel." The result is a story which, for thrilling interest, stands by itself. From the first discovery of the hound's trail, when the dried-up young doctor brings to Sherlock Holmes the ancient manuscript, to the final scene where the great detective is brought face to face with the monster of the moortand, there is not a centurice, that does not carry is not a centuric that does not carry tis not a sentence that does not carry the reader breathlessly forward. It is a great novel, with a great subject, by a master of the craft. This thrilling story begins in "The Philadelphia Press" Sunday, July 6. Be sure not to miss it. 19.4t. miss it.
