Every report from the Philippines serves to confirm the wisdom and justice of American rule in the islands.

Why do the miserable slayers of women not commit the inevitable suicide first?

It is many years since White House hospitality has been conducted on as large a scale as it is this year.

Spiders in the stables are the horses best friends, they kill off the flies, gnats and mosquitoes.

Apparently no amount of demonstration will ever prove to some democrats that the protection policy has come to stay.

Cogs of paper are now inserted in the wheels of high speed machines. They are noiseless and very durable.

With Theodore Roosevelt in the White House the people need fear of no unrebuked violation of the Monroe Doctrine.

The old proverb, "It takes a thief to catch a thief," may explain the phenomenal wealth of some of the New York Policemen.

The negotiation of a reciprocity treaty with Cuba robs the democrats of another choice argument they loved to dwell on.

Senator Lodge does not hesitate to place the opposition to the educational clause in the Immigration bill where it belongs.

Even the appropriation for the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission could not get through the Senate without democratic objection.

The sincerity with which Senator Procter is carrying on the work of the Military Affairs Committee makes the absence of Senator Hawley less unfortunate.

Those representatives who clamor loudest about republican extravagance are the loudest shouters when their own towns want a new post office.

A Pacific cable, under the sole control of the United States, promises to constitute another monument to President Roosevelt's first term.

Hon. Bois Penrose.

It would be a misfortune indeed to the shipping interests of the United States if there should be any wavering upon the part of the legislation of the State of Pennsylvania in the return to the United States Senate of Hon. Bois Penrose.

Senator Penrose has proven himself a pronounced friend of all the leading maritime interests of the nation, and his vote has always been found upon the side that aims to build up and firmly establish the merchant marine of the country. Particularly has he been strenuous and advanced upon the question of the improvement and modernization of rivers and harbors, not alone especially along the Eastern coast, but along the Gulf and Pacific coasts.

He is one of the broad-gauged men who can be relied upon at all times and in every emergency to do that which the maritime interests of the country demand. He has made a study of the Skipper, the sailor, the river and the harbor, and there is not a statesman in the United State Senate to-day who is so well versed in the knotty problems that from time presents themselves for solution. We note there is some talk of his being the candidate for the mayoralty of the city of Philadelphia. It is sincerely to be hoped that Senator Penrose will not accept such nomination. He is wanted now in Senate of United States, and he cannot be spared. There are burning questions to come up shortly in that body most materially affecting the maritime interests, and the time calls for brave men with stout, manly hearts to meet these questions. Pennsylvania must send back to the Senate the Hon. Bois Penrose. It would not be advisable to make a local office-holder of a man built upon the lines of this Senator. Pennsylvania in more than one generation has not had so strong a man to care for her interests in Washington as she has in him, and it would be a misfortune to the entire nation to substitute an untried man in his position. We know where he stands and where he has always stood upon great national questions, and we also know that he is as true as the needle to the pole in matters of vast public import. Let Senator Bois Penrose, the friend of maritime interests, remain where he is. Business exigency demand it in this case most particularly.—The Maritime News.

LOOKING FOR SANTA CLAUS

The snow was falling on the mountains, hiding their tops in a misty veil, and the air was full of whirling flakes, which were rapidly covering the brown earth with a carpet of white and obliterating the trail up the mountain side where trudged, or, rather, stumbled, along a grotesque childish figure in a man's rough jacket, the sleeves rolled over and over to let out the small brown hands, while the edge of the coat, on a line with her heels, left a trail in the snow. A red hood covered the child's head, dark curls peeping out around her face, and in the fearless, wistful eyes shone a new light, for Dorothy was going to find Santa Claus. When her mother had gone to heaven a short time before, they had carried her up the mountain, and God and Santa Claus were always associated together in the child's mind. So, if God lived up there, Santa Claus could not be far away. Thus reasoned little Dorothy in the hours when her father was off working in the mine and she was left alone with her rag doll in the little brown hut which served as shelter and home.

Dorothy was going to find Santa Claus.

"Santa Claus may not come here now mother has gone," the little girl said, "and it must be near Christmas, so I will find him, and perhaps he will take me in his reindeer sleigh to see mother and God." Little Dorothy paused in her task of sweeping the one room of their home, and, putting some potatoes in the ashes to bake, that her father's supper might be ready for him, she had wrapped herself in his old coat, donned her red hood and started out to find Santa Claus.

It chanced that day that one of the mine owners was down from the city on a tour of inspection, and, having seen Dorothy on a previous trip, he had, remembering another little girl who was very happy on Christmas eve, brought down a Christmas box for Dorothy and so strolled along with her father as he started homeward, that he might give it into the hands of the little maiden herself. But when they reached the brown hut Dorothy was not there, and when repeated calls brought no answer the two men, alarmed, started in opposite directions to seek her. Mr. Golden following the almost obliterated path up the mountain side, where, a mile beyond, he found the little one almost buried in the falling snow, and as he stooped to lift her in his arms she murmured drowsily, seeing the kind face bending over her: "Dear, good Mr. Santa Claus, I want—"

CALLIE BONNEY MARBLE.
The Geisha. "Geisha," the professional girl entertainer of Japan, is by no means to be confounded with "geinin," says Japan and America. The word geisha really means actor, "get" meaning a play or entertainment of any sort, and "sha" means a person. For instance, I-sha means physician, and so on. The word really means what "actor" does in English, but it has come to mean only those girls in Japan who are trained to entertain by dancing and singing to the shamisen and koto, the usual musical instruments for light entertainments, and they also are trained to converse agreeably on topics of the day. "Geinin," on the other hand, while it really means the same thing as geisha, has now come to be applied to artists, in a higher sense.

The Merry Wag.
Butkins—I don't know that you ever met my wife?
Wisbin—Can't say that I ever met her, but I have seen her many times. By the way, saw her kissing a man on your back stoop 't'other evening.
Butkins—Saw my wife kissing a man? What do you mean by such a story as that?
Wisbin—Just what I say, that's all.
Butkins—You actually mean it? If I only knew who the rascal was, I'd—Wisbin—Don't get excited. It was you, of course. Supposed you'd know that at once.—Boston Transcript.

What He Sold.
One of the witnesses in a case in a Dublin court was asked, "Did you sell Major Studdert a horse?" "No, sor."
"Did your father sell Major Studdert a horse?" "No, sor."
"Did your grandfather sell him a horse?" "No, sor."
"Well, then, did any member of your family sell Major Studdert anything?" "Yes, sor." "Who did, then?" "I did, sor." "And what did you sell Major Studdert?" "I sold him a mare, sor." The counsel sat down, and the court roared.
