The third entertainment of the Y. M. C. A., held the boards at the Opera House last Wednesday evening. It was a concert given by the famous Chicago Glee Club. The Courier uses the word "famous" for it now appreciates the fact the Club is entitled to such a distinction. The Chicago Glee Club is without doubt the best Male Quartet that has visited Coldwater in years.—Coldwater, (Mich.) Courier.

Peoples Course, Court House Saturday evening Jan. 31st.

Men have various ways of carrying money. Butchers, millers and bakers carry it in a crumpled wad. Bankers in nice clean bills laid full length in a morocco pocket book. Brokers always fold there bills once, doubling the money as it were. The young business man carries it in his vest pocket while the sporting man carries it in his trouser's pocket. Farmers and drovers carry theirs in their inside pockets, whether it be fifteen dollars or fifteen cents. Editors usually carry theirs in other people's pockets.

Pat Huxley Once More in Trouble.

Pat Huxley broke loose again Thursday night. Pat has been keeping pretty quiet lately but it seems that periodically the police must look after him.

Huxley has been annoying a woman who resides on State street by attentions which were unwelcome to her. On Thursday night she appealed to the police and several of them went on his trail. He saw them coming and made himself scarce.

In the early morning hours Huxley returned and again the police were called. Officer Thompson, who responded, found the woman in the street and the doors locked. The officer could hear Huxley on the inside and forced a window to secure entrance.

Taking a lamp he made a search of the house but failed to find him. In one spot he found an entrance to an attic but it was closed. The house is one of a row and all are connected in this attic.

Thompson drew himself up through the trap door taking the lamp with him. He heard Huxley at the other end of the long open space and started after him. He found that the fugitive had taken advantage of the hole opening down into the adjoining house, and descending into a bedroom, where several persons were sleeping. Of course he aroused the slumberers and their fears were not allayed in the least when they saw the long legs of the stalwart officer come dangling through the opening in the ceiling a few seconds afterward.

Huxley ran down stairs and effected his escape through a front door. When the officer reached the street, his man had disappeared from sight. So far as is known he may be running yet.—Williamsport Bulletin.

Advertising and Combination.

"The cessation of advertising killed the bicycle business," says Colonel A. A. Pope, "and the way to revive it is to resume that same important matter. You can see how I feel in the matter when I tell you that I spent $500,000 in one year in that sort of publicity, and that it is my idea for the future to advertise." The Bicycle Trust stopped competition, and it supposed it did not need publicity. It saved a great deal of money—and went into the hands of a receiver. Colonel Pope knows the bicycle business better than any one else does and he says there must be a return to advertising. When the bicycle manufacturers ceased to advertise the public abandoned cycling and turned to other amusements.

ALL SORTS.

With something over 7,200 pages of testimony transcribed, the anthracite strike commission is fast nearing the end of its labors, and it is thought that all evidence will be in by the last of this week.

A Canton girl is lucky enough to have become head nurse at $50 weekly in the service of a New York multi millionaire, who is a partial paralytic. She is also, to have a bonus of $1,000 yearly as long as she continues in her rich patient's service.

The following from the German is equally true in English: At 10, a boy thinks he knows more than his father. When he is 15 he thinks, "Well, I know just about as much." At 20 he thinks he knows again as much. When he comes to be 30 years old he thinks that he ought to ask his father's advice sometimes. At 40 he thinks that his father does know a little more. At 50 he looks for his father's advice. At 60, when his father is dead, he comes to the conclusion that there was not a smarter man on God's earth than his father was.

The Pennsylvania Railroad will pay full wages, for the time lost, to all of its employees who, as members of the National Guards, were called away from work by the coal strike. These employees of course were paid by the state also for the time they were in active service, and so they will get double pay for that period. This action by the railroad company is a practical counter-move to the action of labor union in declaring against membership in the guard. The company's policy will do much to increase the attractiveness of service in the National Guard.

A western editor writes as follows: The editor sat in his easy chair, lighting his pipe on his arburn hair. A halo shown over his face so fair, but his knees were out and his feet were bare. And he sang a song both sad and sweet while the flies died all around his feet, for he had no grub in his shop to eat, and the ground was covered with sleet. Now, what in the world was the cuss to do? He had eaten the paste and swallowed the glue; he hadn't a drink, he hadn't a chew, and while he stared his whiskers grew.—And the band played on.

When the frost is on the window and the kitchen pan is froze, when the little icy needles come from every breath that blows, when chilblains make us sick and faint, and cold feet give us pain; it's safe to bet that we all wish for summer days again. For while we sit and fume around in gauzy summer clothes, it's easy enough to get cooled everybody knows; but it's different in the winter when the world is full of ice; and the weather is as hard as a pair o loaded dice. We may talk about our climate, and about our spring and fall, but the balmy days of summer are the days that suit us all.—Ex.

The happiest man in the world is the common every day chap who makes his own living, pays his own bills and has the respect of his neighbors. He saves a little money as he goes along, but he doesn't try to get a corner on the local output, and he is a slave to neither ambition or society. He never expects to wear out the seat of his pants in the senate, and when he slides into his clothes in the morning he never wastes anytime trying to pick out the right tint of socks, suspenders, and neckties that will blend with the general effect. He wears a "biled" shirt when he feels like it, and when his pet corn begins to jump he whips out his jack knife and cuts a four inch gash in the side of his boot and nothing is said about it in the papers. He has an appetite like a cyclone and he never has to sit up nights to poultice his conscience. He believes in the doctrine live and let live, and when he encounters one of the needy doesn't stutter with his pocket book. The plain plug of a man is happy because he is satisfied and doesn't spend the best part of his life in yearning for something about four sizes to large for him.—Ex.

Tariff or no tariff, reciprocity or no reciprocity, both countries seem to be doing pretty well as things are. Canada sells millions' worth abroad, and with these millions buys American goods, because they are better and cheaper than she can make or get elsewhere. We buy a little of Canada, too, and the duty paid thereon goes to support the general government. Even should Canada become twice as prosperous she would still be our best customer.—Detroit Journal.

The Proposed Lee Statue.

The Harrisburg Telegraph very properly says: It is not likely that the proposition to place a statue of General Lee on the battlefield of Gettysburg will be adopted. The chances are that a storm of protest will sweep the proposition into oblivion.

In this matter it is neither necessary nor advisable to resurrect sectional differences nor even to mention, much less wave, the bloody shirt. The scheme is distasteful to many Pennsylvanians. As a soldier General Lee had few peers. In the strict military sense his career was a glorious one. As a soldier his statue would be desirable anywhere.

But Lee the soldier can never be dissociated from Lee the traitor. It's a pity but it's true. The animosity between the two sections that were engaged in the great struggle forty years ago has died. The Blue and the Gray fraternize whenever they meet. The aspirations of the North and the South are now similar. Yet in the manifestation of fraternal spirit there is a line which cannot be passed in safety.

To honor Lee would be to glorify treason. In sentiment this may not be true; in the real and practical side of human life it is nothing but truth. There are many Pennsylvanians who to-day see a monument to Lee in every shaft to soldiers slain at Gettysburg and in every orphan's school that was erected as a consequence and effect of that general's military genius. It is not possible that any convincing reason can be advanced for honoring the memory of the dead rebel. It is advisable that the proposition be dropped.

Wonderful Nerves.

Is displayed by many a man enduring pains of accidental Cuts, Wounds, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Sore feet or stiff joints. But there's no need for it. Bucklen's Arnica Salve will kill the pain and cure the trouble. It's the best Salve on earth for Piles, too. 25c. at L. Taggart's Druggist.

Great Story of Standard Oil

"Miss Tarbell's work is of unequalled importance as a 'document' of the day. Her story has liv' men in it; they suffer and work and win and lose their battles with the verisimilitude that removes the tale from the dry statement and clothes it with the color of human interest and the vivid rainbow garment of human sympathy. The results of her work are likely to be far-reaching; she is writing unfinished history."—Boston Globe.
