A SONG FOR GLADNESS.

Oh be thou glad in sorrow, and be thou calm in pain;

There's quiet in the sunshine, there's melody in rain;
For when the heart is joyous all ways lead on to light,
And merely thy well-wishing will make the future bright.

Then weep no more for sorrow,
Turn all remorse to gain,
And welcome the good spirit
Where love doth ever reign.

Oh vait no more on worry, companion not with care,

Ever the morning dawneth and dawneth everywhere,
And when the heart is open to loveliness and truth,

From every wind of heaven comes the world's eternal youth.

Then work, but do not worry,
And wait, but not with care;
For in the never-ending

"Tis moring now, and fair!

Be glad, thou! do not murmur; smile as the moments die!

Forever and forever life's troubles fade and fly;

Down in the doom of passage fate seals the deeds to rest;

Forever and forever life is and will be blest.

blest.
Behold how glad is nature,
The hills do greet the sky—
The clouds may brood above them,
But the river flashes by!

Jack Stevens lost no time in acquainting Chalmers with what he had learned. They no longer had any doubt they were on the right track.

"But what did he do such a thing for?" asked Stevens. "It is all Greek to me. Talk about motives! What motive would a man like Hestor have in kidnapping such men as these? He has plenty of money. He would not demand a ransom. Most of these men have known him since he was a boy: so I am told. His father was big figure in Wall Street. What the devil was his motive?"

"I will never tell you," said Chal-mers. "He has always been more or less crazy about the newspaper business. That interview with the Czar turned his head. This is probably his coup de maitre. If so, it is a wonder!"

"How much better off are we now that we believe Hestor is the man?" asked Stevens. "Where is he? That is the question. How are we to find him?

"You may as well call off your men at Provincetown," said Chalmers, after a pause, in which both did some hard thinking. "They can find nothing there. If Hestor did this job, he probably brought the Shark' into Cape Cod bay and posted the letter from Provincetown. Then he dropped a man off at or near Boston and had him mail the various the other places. It requires no great reasoning to see through that. The last letter came from Philadelphia. Hestor may have made the trip himself. It would be just like him.

If so, the yacht probably picked him up at some point along the South Atlantic coast."

"It strikes me that the thing to do is to ascertain if Hestor loaded any building materials into that yacht," said Stevens. "If he did he is planning to build a house to put probably is built."

"I have reason to believe the house is already constructed," said Chal-mers. He told Stevens of Hestor's talk about his house, the night after the Waldorf-Astoria dinner. While they were considering this phase of the case the news editor entered with a telegram. It read as follows:

St. Louis, May 7.
To William Chalmers, Managing Editor

To William Chainers, Additional New York Record:
Have arrested L. Sylvester Vincent. He refuses to make confession. How much shall I send? Big story. Can wire 10,-000 words before midnight. Wire $200.

BERNARD SEYMOUR.

"Your man Seymour is a dream," said Chalmers, passing the telegram to Jack Stevens. "Wire him to send that he was obliged to take a sudden trip to Europe with Mr. Hestor. publication, and tell him to stick to Vincent and make him talk." Stevens sent the proper dispatch. Another telegram was received, an hour later, from St. Louis. It read:

St. Louis, May 7.
To Editor New York Record: Man arrested as L. Sylvester Vincent by your representative proves to be Rev. Hilton Wesley, of Chicago. Where can your representative be found?
P. SULLIVAN, Chief of Police.
"I don't believe he can be found," said Chalmers. "Wire the chief."

said Chalmers. "Wire the chief that the man who represented himself as Miss Ofive. our correspondent undoubtedly is an impostor. I wonder where Mr.

Bernard Seymour is?" He was not long in doubt. Shortly we will do: Your Wall street men have found out nothing. You notice I was right about the books of Street & Rogers. An examination was made to-day, and it panned out just as I predicted. The account is in the name of the firm. I am going to break into Hestor's desk to-night and see if I can learn anything. If his check books are there they may prove something. It is hardly likely that they are. What I was about to say is this: "You find out if any lumber went aboard the 'Shark.' In the meantime have your men interview every contractor, builder and archi tect in New York, and see if any work has been lone for Hestor in the

"That is a great scheme!" said Stevens

"Send men to Boston and Philadel phia on a like mission. I will wire Seymour at New Orleans and have him do the same thing there. Send four or five men to New Orleans and Galveston to-night. Instruct them to interview every man who may have had anything to do with building a residence of any kind for Walter B. Hestor. Swear them to absolute se crecy. I am going to have an in-terview with Miss Olive Hammond to-night, at the Carmody residence."

"Where does Sidney Hammond come in in this case?" asked Stevens. "He is supposed to have sailed with Hestor."

"I do not know. I am going to try and find out," said Chalmers. "It looks as if he was mixed up in it, too. I hope not. Sidney is too good a fellow."

Later in the evening Mr. Chalmers was at the Carmody mansion. Dur-ing the day he had arranged with Miss Carmody to invite Miss Olive Hammond to spend the evening at her house.

"Miss Carmody," said Chalmers, after the formal greetings were made, "I know you will excuse my apparent freedom, but I have some news of great importance, which I am going to tell you and Miss Hammond. We should have a room where we cannot be interrupted or overheard."

Miss Carmody rang for Smith.
"Unlock Mr. Carmody's private office," she said. "Put it in order and bring Mr. Chalmers some cigars. I know he smokes."

Mr. Chalmers bowed his thanks. They were soon seated in Mr. Carmody's library and private office. Nothing which taste could dictate or money furnish was lacking in this room. Chalmers took the big easy office chair, while the young ladies formed a charming picture on a near by divan.

"Miss Hammond, the news I have "Miss Hammond, the news pour obtained indirectly concerns your brother Sidney," said Chalmers. Miss Olive Hammond grew pale, and thought a half-exclamation. "You uttered a half-exclamation. "You need not be in the least alarmed. I have no reason to believe he is in I have no reason to believe he is in any degree to blame in this affair. I am going to relate the whole story, as far as I know it, and you may be able to throw new light on the mystery." For half an hour Chalmers explained the circumstances which had led him to suspect Hestor. As he talked the two girls clasped hands. Tears glistened in Miss Hammond's eyes when Chalmers told of the in-structions Hestor had left that a notice should be inserted in the Record, stating that Sidney Hammond would accompany him on a trip to the Mediterranean.

He stammered an apology.

mody. Her eyes flashed as she looked at Chalmers.

"I have said that I did not believe him guilty," said that gentleman, recovering himself. "You young la-dies jump at a conclusion too quickly. It is probable that Mr. Hammond was the victim of a plot like the others.

"Why, Sidney did not know he was going until a few hours before the yacht sailed for Europe," said Miss Olive. She had regained her self-possession. "He sent me a telegram just before he went away, saying that he was obliged to take a sudhe did not know a thing about it We had planned to go to the theater on the following evening, and he had secured the tickets. So how could he have known anything about it?

Sidney tells me everything." "That is splendid news," said Chalmers, his face lighting up with pleasure. "You need not worry about Sidney. I hope you kept that tele gram.

"I have it here in my reticule," said

Chalmers read it carefully. He lift. ed the receiver of the telephone at his elbow. "Give me the superintendent's ofbefore midnight this telegram was fice—the Postal Union Telegraph company," he said.

"You are sure that Hestor said nothing about going away the night he gave the opera and supper party?" asked Mr. Chalmers.

"I did not hear him say a word about it," said Miss Hammond. "Mr. Hestor and Sidney had a long talk about trusts. They were at the end of the table, and for a long time took no part in the general conversa-tion. I was not interested in what the others were saying and found myself listening to Sidney and Walter Hestor. Mr. Hestor said it would be a fine plan if they could induce the leading capitalists of the country to meet and discuss methods to regulate the abuses which have arisen under the trust control of industrial affairs. Now that I think of it, he mentioned such names as Rockwell,
Morton and Haven, and I am sure
Mr. Carmody's name was used. Sidney told him that these men could ten to her fears of failure. She Mr. Hestor said that he was going to gin at once a search for her father form a trust of his own. Sidney and his companions. laughed, but Walter seemed much in laughed, but water seemed much in earnest. Soon afterward the party dispersed and we went home. Sid-ney went to Chicago, and did not return until the following Saturday." The messenger boy arrived with the original copy of the telegram. Chalmers gave one glance at it.

"Just as I suspected," he said. He passed the telegram to Miss Hammond. It was written in pencil on a sheet of newspaper "copy" paper, with a telegraph head pasted above

"Is that Sidney's handwriting?" he

"Why, no!" exclaimed Miss Olive. "It is not a bit like it."

"Walter Hestor wrote that," said Chalmers. "I know his writing; having handled thousands of pages of it. You may rest assured, Miss Carmody, that we shall soon solve this mystery. Hestor has not covered his tracks. He either did not know how, or did not care. No shrewd criminal would send a forged telegram in his own handwriting. He would use a typewriter. Hestor sent this telegram so that you would not be alarmed at Sidney's absence. It is plain as day."

THREE CHECKBOOKS WERE FOUND IN THE DESK.

Chalmers enjoined the young ladies to secrecy and returned to his newspaper duties.

The following morning Jack Stevens called his staff into conference. He detailed four men to Boston, six to Philadelphia and four to New Orleans and Galveston. Twenty were assigned to work in New York, and six were held in reserve.

"Interview every architect and builder in these cities," were Stevens' instructions. "Introduce your-self as a writer who is preparing As he said this Miss Carmody re-leased Olive Hammond's hand and instinctively drew away from her. Olive burst into tears. designed the Walter B. my noble, honest brother; why are you not here to defend yourself?"

Miss Helen threw her arms around the weeping girl. Chalmers did not know what to say. His story had been cut off at its sensational point.

The recognition of the strength of their guidance. It was not necessary to entire the strength of their guidance. It was not necessary to entire the strength of their guidance. It was not necessary to entire the strength of their guidance. It was not necessary to entire the strength of their guidance. It was not necessary to entire the strength of their guidance. He stammered an apology.

"He is not guilty. I am sure he is not guilty!" exclaimed Miss Carcient to insure that caution. Each reporter was liberally supplied with money and they went to work with energy

That afternoon, the 8th of May, Chalmers opened Hestor's desk, and with Stevens, made a minute examination of its contents. Much to their surprise, three check books were found on the glass-covered surface of the desk. On dates from April 25 to May 1, inclusive, Hestor had drawn checks payable to himself aggregating $4,648,000. "How could he have amassed that amount of cash?" asked Stevens, as he footed up the aggregate.

"Here is a memorandum which explains that," said Chalmers. He plains that," said Chalmers. He pointed to the inside cover of one of the check books on which was tabulated sales of bonds and stocks amounting to $4,627,000.

"The Hestor estate was largely in securities," said Chalmers. "I remember Hestor told me at one time that he owned between $15,000,000 and $15,000,000 worth of gilt-edged

What did he do with the cash?" asked Stevens, with an air which in-dicated that he could answer his own question. "Street & Rogers might answer if they would," said Chalmers. "A man of Hestor's standing could margin 750,000 shares of stock with that amount of money. He was too wise to draw checks payable to anyone Chalmers was well acquainted with the routine of the telegraph office, and soon arranged that the original of the dispatch be forwarded by Special message to the Carmody residence. While waiting for this, they Orleans," said Chalmers. "We can take him there. New, I tell you what

"But how does he propose to get out of it?"

"Give it up," said Chalmers, "It is too deep for me. Hestor is not the kind to think of details like that. He goes ahead and lets consequence take care of themselves. He did not even take the precaution to destroy these check books. We can trace him like a rabbit in a new fall of snow."

Stevens now turned his attention to such cities as Baltimore, Washington and a number of western cities, in the faint hope that some clew might be found. Instructions were cabled to London, Paris, and other European cities, and a search made in these art centers, but nothing was learned.

not be induced to take the time to bother with such matters. Finally yacht, the "Helen Carmody," and be-idney and his companions.

"That is a good idea," said Mr.
Chalmers. "Go ahead and put the yacht in commission, and supply her with provisions for a month's cruise, but do not start until my was head a change to complete men have had a chance to complete their search. It is now the 11th their search. It is now the 11th of the month. Give me until Tuesday, the 16th, and if we have no news by that time we will send the 'Helen.' As you know, there are a score of boats scouring the ocean now. It is a good-sized globe, this old world of ours, and there are milions of please are more than the state of the search of the searc lions of places, any one of which Hes-tor may have selected. For all we know, he may be cruising in the boundless waters of the Pacific. On the 16th we will make public all the facts in our possession, in case we do not in the meantime find a definite clew. I do not feel justified in doing so, except as a last resort. Hestor may not be guilty. His actions, so far as we know, can all be explained. Our evidence against him is purely circumstantial. We will give Hestor time to reach some port in Europe. We have wired instructions to every foreign harbor, and will at once hear from him if he be innocent. This is an awful charge to make against an honest man, and we must give Hestor the benefit of every doubt."

"You are right, Mr. Chalmers," said Miss Helen. "I will have the yacht prepared for a long cruise. It does not seem possible that Mr. Hester could do make the property of the control of tor could do such a thing. He is so kind and generous. It would be awful to falsely accuse him."

It need not be supposed that these daily interviews between the journaland the charming heiress were entirely devoted to the solving of the mystery which was the cause of their acquaintance. Mr. Chalmers esteemed his duty to direct her thoughts to more pleasant topics, and he led the conversation into literature and to the discussion of current events. Chalmers was an entertaining talker, with an aptitude to perceive the grotesque side of things, and he possessed the rare art of the good story teller. A few odd facts were sufficient to form the theme of a mirthful tale, and Chalmers was by nature and training an adept in the art of narrative. He had an appreciative narrative. He had an appreciative listener in Miss Carmody, and unconsciously she found herself waiting for the hour when the self-possesseti and animated Chalmers would arrive, and with news or fancy lighten the monotony of the hours.

Merely a Pardonable Error.

The stories told in "the profession" of Mr. Brookfield's scathing repartee are endless. On one occasion a young actor who had lately made a hit in a small part was regaling a few friends at great length upon the "splendid notices" he had received and the various merits of his performance. At last Brookfield quietly remarked: "But, my dear sir. you are not really at all good in the part. I have never seen you do anvthing well, but in this part you are simply naughty."

"Indeed!" said the young man, bridling up. "I suppose so distinguished a critic as yourself would deny my being an actor at all!' certainly should," said Mr

Brookfield. "Then what would you call me?" asked the young man a little reck-

"Well," said Mr. Brookfield, with a sweet, smile, "I think I should de scribe you as a pardonable error." -Pall Mall Gazette.

What the Letter Stood For.

Rev. Dr. Swallow, late prohibition candidate for several offices, and not long since tried for slandering the President McKinley, is a bit of a joker in his way. He tells a story about the nome-de-plume "Gath," used by George Alfred Townsend.

"What does that name mean?" young lady parishioner asked of Dr. Swallow.
"The letters are the author's initials, G. A. Townsend," answered the clergyman. "But what does the 'h' stand for?

persisted the lady.
"That's where he's going to when he dies," said Dr. Swallow.
The lady was horrified, and asked timidly, "Is he really such a bad man as all that?" "Certainly not. You misapprehene me," answered Dr. Swallow.

'h' stands for heaven."
