The Bradford Herald in an article telling of a "graft" overlooked by the constables in McKean county, says: The law provides that any owner of land who is convicted of allowing Canadian thistles to grow on his premises shall pay a fine of $15 to the treasury of the school district where such land is located. It further provides that it is the duty of the constable or supervisor to notify all persons to remove Canadian thistles and if the owner fails to do so within five days from the notice the constable shall cut them down and charge the owner of the land $2.50 per day. There is not a township in the county where these thistles do not grow in abundance and a number of them may be found growing in the city. A constable could make good money cutting them down as it would only take a constable a few minutes to do the job and the law knows no part of a day and pays a full day's wages for any part of a day's service. DEATH'S DOINGS. WILLIAMS. Mrs. Lelo Williams, only daughter of C. L. and Addae Williams, aged nineteen years, four months and one day, died at the Williamsport hospital, Feb. 28th. LaBar, of this place, had charge of the remains. Daughter you was mild and lovely, Gentle as the summer breeze, Pleasant as the air of evening, When it floats among the trees. XX WIGGER. Mr. Ebenezer Wigger, who came to Howard's Siding the 16th of last April and occupied the house owned by Mr. Hopkins, his brother-in-law, died at his home last Friday evening, at 6:30 o'clock. He was born at Cincinnati, Cortland Co., N. Y., March, 2d 1827, and was therefore 76 years and four days old. He was married Oct. 10th 1875. His wife, two daughters and one son survive him. The relatives have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement. STONE. DANIEL STONE, aged 76 years, died at the residence of N. J. Swartz, last Sunday morning. His remains were taken to Port Allegany on Monday evening for interment. Mr. Stone has been in poor health for several years, the result of an accident that befel him, falling on a defective sidewalk and breaking a leg for which the borough had to pay several hundred dollars. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Pugsley, of Baptist church. It saved His Leg. P. A. Danforth of LaGrange, Ga., suffered for six months with a frightful running sore on his leg; but writes that Bucklen's Arnica Salve wholly cured it in five days. For Ulcers, Wounds, Piles, it's the best salve in the world. Cure guaranteed. Only 25cts. Sold by L. Taggart, druggist. Two young hearts, intended as infinities, are to be kept apart by the hatred of their fathers, one for the other. But love is stronger than hate, and love triumphs. The battle is an interesting one. We see it going on around us every day. Shakespeare saw it, and he gave us such a picture of the struggle as appears at once to the imagination and the understanding. The story needs no key—no commentary. No one fails to understand "Romeo and Juliet." Emporium Opera House, Thursday, March 12.

Thomas a Becket. In 1538, when Henry VIII. rooted up Thomas a Becket's grave and erased his name from the scroll of saints, he also ordered that all pictures, stained glass windows and frescoes bearing upon the life of this saint should be destroyed. In some churches where St. Thomas was held in special honor the law was evaded by superimposing another picture over the forbidden one. On the north wall of the church at South Newington, near Banbury, England, there is a crudely executed fresco of Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem. From the effects of age and damp this fresco is gradually disappearing, and now through the colossal donkey on which our Lord is represented riding can be seen the figure of the murdered archbishop prone on the chancel steps. Gradually, possibly, the whole underlying fresco of the murder of St. Thomas at Canterbury will come into view, and it is evidently of far higher artistic merit than the hastily executed covering one. Not of Our Killing. When Senator Gallinger was practicing medicine in his New Hampshire home, he had a coachman who was a "character" worthy of the attention of any writer of fiction. On one occasion Dr. Gallinger was called professionally at a house next to a residence on which was displayed black crape as a sign of death. A passerby, noticing the crape and not knowing who had died there, supposed Dr. Gallinger was in the house and that his coachman could give the desired information. The coachman seemed to take the inquiry as a personal affront and bristled up in martial style. "I don't know," he retorted promptly. "It's not of our killin'—it's not of our killin'." Then he pulled his horse up so as to avoid any further suspicion that he was waiting for the doctor to come out of the house with the badge of mourning.—Washington Star. Trollope Disagreed. Although Anthony Trollope never smoked, he liked being with those who did. It soothed his nerves, he said, and sent him to sleep. On one occasion, when he had just returned to London from South Africa, he was talking at the Cosmopolitan club to Lord Carnarvon, Lord Derby, Froude, the historian, Lord Wolsey and one or two others equally famous on the future of that country. In the midst of the discussion Trollope fell asleep, and after a quarter of an hour's doze he awoke, shaking himself together like the faithful, growling Newfoundland dog he so much resembled. Dissident even in his unconsciousness, he spluttered forth: "I utterly disagree with every one of you. What is it you said?" Rain and Plants. Many persons must have noticed that the most diligent sprinkling of lawns and flower beds fails to impart to the grass and plants a vital stimulus equal to that which comes from a good shower of rain. A correspondent reminds us of the reason for the difference. It is because rain, falling from a great height through the air, brings with it a considerable quantity of carbonic acid, of nitrogenous particles and of other elements nutritious to plants which it has washed out of the atmosphere. So a sprinkler used from the top of a tall building might be slightly more effective than when employed at the surface of the ground. How She Knew. Apropos of the servant maid difficulty I heard a good story the other day. The wife of a very well known Irish official was in want of an under nurse, and among those who applied for the position was a good natured looking girl of about seventeen. "You tell me," said the official's wife, "that you are very fond of children. That is all very well in its way, but do you understand anything about the duties of a nursery? Have you any experience of children?" "Yis, mum," was the reply. "Sure I used to be a child wanst meil!"—London Tatler. Where the Typewriter Blandered. Church—You know French, who keeps the restaurant? Gotham—Oh yes. "Well, he wants a new typewriter." "What's the matter with that good looking one he had?" "Oh, the other day he told her to write and get the price of frogs' legs, and she addressed the letter to the Hop Growers' association."—Exchange. On Principle. Bert (nervously)—I heard pa tell ma he was goin' to flog me on principle after prayers tonight. Where's principle, Billy? Billy—I think it's somewhere at the back, Bert. The last time he flogged me on principle I had to sit sideways for more'n a fortnight.—London Tit-Bits. The fire of genius is often unable to make the pot boil.

Wedding at a Wedding. A Chinese marriage is all ceremony—no talk, no levity and much crying. The solemnity of a funeral prevails. After the exchange of presents the bride is dressed with much care in a red gown, brocade or silk, if she can get it; her eyelashes are painted a deep black, and she wears a heavy red veil attached to a scarlet headdress, from which imitation pearls are pendent over the forehead. A feast is spread upon a table, to which the blushing bride is led by five of her best female friends. They are seated at the table, but no one eats. The utmost silence prevails, when, finally, the mother leads off in a cry, the maids follow and the bride echoes in the chorus. Then all the bridesmaids leave the table and the disconsolate mother takes a seat beside the chair of state where the bride sits. The bridegroom now enters, with four of his best men. The men pick up the throne on which the bride sits, and, preceded by the bridegroom, form in procession and walk around the room or into an adjoining parlor, signifying that he is carrying her away to his own home. The guests then throw rice at the happy couple, a custom we have borrowed from the heathen. Professional Pride. Newspaper men, from great editors down to rural correspondents, are proud of their profession, although not all sit as secure as John Black, for many years the chief of the London Chronicle. Black supported the Melbourne administration in his paper, yet he never asked a favor of any of the ministers. On one occasion Lord Melbourne said to him: "You are the only man in England who forgets that I am prime minister." "How so, my lord?" inquired Black, supposing that he had been inadvertently disrespectful. "Because," replied Melbourne, "you are the only man I know who never asks a favor of me." "I have no favor to ask," said Black quietly. "I have no favor to ask any one in the world! You are prime minister of England, but I am editor of the Morning Chronicle, and I would not change places with the proudest man in England—not even, my lord, with you." Every Church.
