Trox Fulton, of Sinnamahoning, was in town Monday.

O. B. Barnes and family are visiting relatives and friends at Williamsport.

W. S. Walker, of Austin, was shaking hands with friends in town this morning.

Miss Mazie Reed, of Beechwood, was the guest of Miss Christie McDonald last week.

Mr. John Gallagher, wife, and two daughters are guests of Thos. Gallagher and family.

John J. Hinkle and wife visited the former's brother and family at Wilcox over Sunday.

Mrs. S. C. Parks, of Whittemore Hill, visited her son and family at Johnsonburg over Sunday.

Mr. H. B. Lightner, one of Sinnamahoning's progressive merchants, made our town a short visit last week.

Mr. Stahlke, the consularist, is visiting his family in Buffalo and enjoying a well earned vacation of ten days.

Miss Gaudie Lyons left last Saturday for York, Pa., where she will spend some days at the guest of Rev. E. E. A. Deavor and family.

Mrs. W. L. Thomas and sister Mrs. Kate M. Byre, of Whittemore Hill, have been visiting the former's son and wife at Johnsonburg.

Mrs. Griswold is in town looking after property interests, but will soon return to Olean, where she now makes her home with relatives.

Mrs. Fred Sage, of Chicago, and Miss Josephine Sage, of Red Rock, are visiting the former's son, J. M. Reed, of Clarion Heights.—Johnsonburg Press.

G. S. Hill and daughters, Misses Gertrude and Audrey, of Gibson, visited in Emporium last Saturday and incidentally did some shopping.

Chas. Rishell returned home Monday morning on Flyer, from Clintondale, Clinton county, Pa., where he was called to attend the funeral of his mother last week.

Mrs. Fred Julian and her sister Miss Gussie Voshage left town last Monday noon, the former going to Atlantic City and the latter to Ashland, Pa. Mrs. Julian will also visit Ashland before her return.

Mr. John Weissman came over from Olean Monday noon, bringing with him his two children, who are now guests of Patrick Burke and family. Mr. Weissman returned home on the 1.50 p. m. train owing to the serious illness of his wife.

Lee Moore, who was injured some days ago in Elk county, and confined in Thursday Hospital, came home on Tuesday evening. Mr. Moore met with a painful accident, a tree striking him in the face. Fortunately that he escaped fatal injuries.

As to Books

The man who guards his book-shelves as a sanctum, who has a "fit" when the baby grabs some one of his precious editions and cracks the covers, and hangs over their illustrations with almost maternal fondness, is a book lover. The man who gathers "first editions," refuses to cut the pages, and keeps them under lock and key, is a "crank." We cannot all be book lovers, I suppose. We would not wish to be "cranks." There are certainly some people with whom books, like olives, are an acquired taste, or, if liked, are reserved for rare and desperate occasions. These vast are unfortunate, because they do miss a vast amount of pleasure, to say nothing of instruction.

Next to the world of out-of-doors, where we can study Mother Nature, I can conceive of nothing more satisfying than the world of books. There we may seek and find anything we crave. If we fail to accomplish, we may read of men and women who have accomplished, and we may steel their thills and resolutions and adapt them to our own use. If wage-resolutions shuts us up, away from the woods and mountains, in a stupid, dingy, noisy city office, where green things are embodied solely in the office boy, we can yet read trees. Of course, we must have imagination. That is the soul of the book world. It is hard to see the heroic in our neighbors, so much does the pettiness of life get in between them and us. But give us the book, and by comparison with its heroism we may see such similarity as to make our friends living heroes and heroines. We learn to appreciate them by having their unexcusable good qualities brought before us. Pleasure, and knowledge, and ethical good, are not all the joys of the book world. There the mind can stretch itself and shake off limitations. Everybody can possess at least one shelf of favorite books nowadays. Books are "dirt" cheap, and the most delightful books in the world. It is the worn-out historical novel of 1902-3 which costs $1.00. Good old-fashioned novels, like "Cranford," or "The Little Minister," or "Lorna Doone," cost no more than the sacrifice of a necktie or two pocket handkerchiefs. Attractive, up-to-date editions, too, with Remington or Gilson, or Peter Newell illustrations. And after all these are the stories that stay with us.

Who of us can forget "Babbie," or the delicate tribute of Barrie to his mother, in Margaret Ogilvy? We can smile a day long over the four deacons and their interchanged looks of horror at finding that what they had taken to be their little minister's sermon was instead a very ardent love poem; or over the old lady in the village who "doted" on funerals; or over the little old maid in Cranford who put her cow into red and ruffled flannel drawers lest she take cold. All these are quaint, and lovely, and dear. They are the plainest everyday doings, told with a delicacy which raises them above the common-place.

It is a pity that so many of us content ourselves with summaries of great books when we may read the books themselves. When we read about Adam Bede, we are missing the personal contact with George Eliot, that extraordinary woman whose understanding of human nature was so deep. Reading about Hamlet and not the drama itself, we lose the simple dignity and the dramatic strength which established Shakespeare in the top niche of English dramatists.

Emporium has a start toward an excellent library. It has standard histories of the European states, England and America, and a good lot of fiction, comprising Dickens, Kipling, Crawford, Wallace, and others. It does need biography—not of the dry sort—but the kind that fascinates the ambitious small boy. Bowdell's "Life of Johnson," for instance, which is far more interesting, with its merry anecdotes, than that learned gentleman could have been himself.

Lewis' Life of Goethe is bound to interest any set of girls, and the recently published letters of that gifted woman, Jane Carlyle, in one of which she relates her trials with an Amazon of a servant girl would be fun to any housewife. Barrie, George Eliot, Thackeray, Scott, Hawthorne, Holmes, Lytton, Maupassant, Meredith, Stockton—all of these and more, we shall hail with delight when they appear on the reading room shelves. As for the children, Kate Douglas Wiggin is the mother of them all. Her "Patsy," with his big brown eyes, his freckled nose, his big heart, bigger far than his little crippled body and his sad story, must win everybody's heart.

One thing we have, and that is Mr. Dooley, about the only true wit we can boast of.

KNOWS MI-O-NA WILL DO GOOD.

L. Taggart has Such Faith in T. J. Remarkable Flesh-Forming Food, That he Sells It Under Guarantees.

It is an unusual thing for a druggist to sell a medicine under a guarantee to refund the money if it does not give satisfaction, yet this is the way L. Taggart whose word is as good as his bond is selling Mi-o-na, the remarkable flesh-forming food and cure for dyspepsia.

Never before has he had so large a number of customers tell him that a medicine has cured, as since he began selling Mi-o-na.

There is no longer any need of anyone's suffering or making their friends suffer because of stomach trouble or distressing thinness.

Mi-o-na can be relied upon to regulate and strengthen the digestive organs and to build up good, solid, beautiful flesh.

L. Taggart takes all the risk by selling this preparation under a guarantee to return the money, if it does not give satisfaction. He will sign an agreement to this effect, and take your word as to whether Mi-o-na cures or not.

Headaches, all forms of indigestion, specks before the eyes, dizzy feeling, ringing in the ears, all forms of liver troubles, emaciation, and general run-down conditions are cured by Mi-o-na. A few days treatment shows a considerable gain in health, and a cure speedily follows.

Now is the best time in the whole year for the enjoyment of good health. Use Mi-o-na and you will soon be in such perfect condition that you can enjoy every minute.

"The Veil of Solana" should be in the hands of every reader in Emporium.

Have you included "The Veil of Solana" in your summer reading? If not, why not?
