Thanksgiving Fantasticals

Fifty years ago the children of New York city upon Thanksgiving day pa-raded with toy guns, swords and drums, while the young men formed themeolices into which the themselves into clubs which dressed in fantastic fashion, parading on horse-back from a rendezvous to some park, country resort or turkey shoot. Their favorite guise was that of the redskin The civil war gave an increased mili-tary character to the Thanksgiving actors, and target companies became numerous. Later bonfires and potato and corn roasts came to be features of the celebrations. The mounted bands became ragamuffins pure and simple, and the hideous fish horn took the place of drums and guns.

bet we'd have taken it out on them all right, but there wasn't nothin' doin' except to sit around and think about our old Kentucky homes or wherever our homes happened to be. "There was a hot line of excitement, I can tell you, when a couple of days before Thanksgivin' a wagon came out from Manila with some extra grub the 'old man' had thought of sendin' to us poor guys out there on the firin' line and a box from God's country for one of the boys who used to live in Vermont before he run away to fight. His old ma must have roasted that turkey along about the Fourth of July to get it to him by Thanksgivin', and it was drier 'n a burnt bone. But, just the same, Bill was the popular gazabo all right, and there wasn't a man in the company that wasn't shinin' up to him to get a bid to chew on that dried up turk. The captain dropped a few hints about how the officers' mess would like a little piece of the bird, but Bill wouldn't take a hint if a house fell on him.

"Well, Thanksgivin' day come, and a few of the fellows in Bill's platoon was just sittin' down to the festive board when we heard a shot, and some one when we heard a shot, and some one yells 'Gugu!' We all jumps for our guns and gets out in a hurry jus: as the captain is detailin' a gang to reconnoiter. It was kind of funny that every man in our party was in the scoutin' squad, but we was that excited we didn't think nothin' about it at the time. We didn't get a smell of any gugu, and, thinkin' about that turk, we hiked back to camp. As soon as we'd reported we made for Bill's as we'd reported we made for Bill's tent, but the turk had flew the coop. I don't know where it flew to, but I did see a wishbone hangin' up in the captain's tent the next time I was on orderly service." WARRINGTON WAYNE.
