Buy a Dog.

The swift set in New York has a new fad. It is so far-reaching in its capacity for burning up money that it promises to become popular with the class whose hours are all idle hours, and whose heaviest labor is the clipping of coupons, says the Cincinnati Post. If you are not the possessor of a Pomeranian dog, you might as well bid farewell to any idea of butting into the Four Hundred. A pup about the size of a rat, that can readily be carried in a shopping bag, has become the hall-mark of aristocracy in New York. The smaller the dog the more important the owner. Pomeranians have been sold for as high as $10,000. Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish paid $100 an ounce for initiative and referendum; governhers, and the total cost of the animal was about $5,000. That society darling, Harry Lehr, has equipped his spaniel with a pair of emerald earrings and a ruby bracelet clasps one of the aristocratic hind legs of the brute. It was necessary for Mr. Lehr to do something pretty strenuous, else society might remember that a few years ago he was a peddler of wine and worked for a living. It is only a fad. It is simply a means by which a certain element in the so-called smart set can secure advertising and notoriety. And notoriety to those people is as the breath of life. It is more to them than the applause that greets the successful actor. They court publicity. They want to get into the newspapers, and so feverish is that desire that they do things that disgust saner folks, and they find a thrill in shocking the public. It is foolish, of course, but what are they to do? They have money; they do not have to work, and so they will not work. Ordinary methods of securing pleasure have lost their savor, and so we have the great American vaudeville, in which men and women caper and cut up, throw vast sums to the birds, and are really so simple-minded as to call it pleasure. If you like that sort of thing, you can get a place on the stage if you are the owner of a high-priced Pomeranian.

The man who would be successful must let the world know that he wants to succeed. In this day and time the gum shoe seldom treads the path to victory of one kind or another. Who is not familiar with the mustached face and unusually high forehead of the man who is to be the next governor of Mass-achusetts? All of us have seen it in name will stick, and many of those who who is to be the next governor of Massprint practically every day for a long time, and the west knew it as well as the east, says the Indianapolis News. When the democrats of Massachusetts nominated William L. Douglas as their candidate for governor, there was no who he asked, because every one knew. And when Mr. Douglas entered his new sphere of activity he did not fall into put up. the ways of those who were already there. He had methods of his own which he had tried and found effective. Printers' ink and paste were among his most able lieutenants, and the people of Massachusetts knew from the advertising columns of the public prints, which were freely used, and from the billboards all over the state that the man who had been successful in one way was determined to be successful in another. Mere political schemes were not depended on; statements, interviews and the like, which so often fall short of the multitude, were supplanted by the means which never fail to reach

It is a year of big crops, including that of republican votes, says the Troy Times. The returns from Europe show that the grain yield in most countries of the continent has been exceptional. This is conspicuously true of Russia in some parts of which the grain is so abundant that the peasant farmers have difficulty in finding storage room for it. It is a notable coincidence that Japan, which relies chiefly on rice for food, also has a big showing for its staple, the output being 20 per cent. above the average. This abundance means that both countries will have sufficient food, even if the war and its waste continues for many months longer. Yet it also accentuates the fact that such strife is costly. But for the war there might be a profitable sale of creed will the republican party have to fight in 1908? These are queries of some interest to democrats, populists, socialists, republicans and all other political elements. It is generally assumed that the radicals of the democracy will be in the ascendant in that party by the time the campaign of 1908 opens, and that these are to be the force which the republican party will be called upon to combat. Mr. Debs, on the other hand, says that the democratic party will disintegrate, as a result of its crushing defeat last week, and that the socialist party will take its place. As Debs was the presidential candidate of the social democratic party in the two latest national elections, and as he polled a considerable vote, his words on this point will have some weight. Debs had 88,000 votes in 1900. He got at least 600,000 in 1904, and the total, when all the returns are in, may go above that figure.

THE COMING OPPOSITION.

Probable Coalition and Creed of the Democracy for the Next Campaign.

But the rest of the radicals are not in agreement with Mr. Debs. Thomas E. Watson, who probably received in the neighborhood of 500,000 votes as the standard bearer of the populist party in the canvass just closed, says, too, that the democratic party must now go to pieces, and that a reorganiza-tion will take place on lines similar to those on which the populists made their recent fight. He derides the idea that his old friend Bryan will be able to galvanize any new life into the democratic party. The populist creed includes these tenets, among others: The national ownership of the railways, the telegraphs and the telephones; an income tax; postal savings banks; the mental control of all money issues, depriving the national banks of the privilege of emitting currency; local option on the liquor question throughout the country; the election of the president, United States senators and federal judges by direct vote of the people; reduction in the army and navy, and, of course, the free coinage of silver at the 16 to 1 ratio. This is the programme which the populists want to set up for the coalition which it to fight the republican party in 1908, although neither the populists nor the socialists care much about free silver, preferring greenbacks to coin of any sort Messrs. Bryan, Hearst and the other radicals who are in good standing in the democratic party are the men who will shape the creed of the republicans' opponent four years hence and put up the candidates. Most of the things that the populists put forward could be accorded by the the presented by the pre cepted by the Bryanite section of the democratic party. Bryan himself has come out in favor of ownership of the railways by the individual states, which would be a more drastic and demoralizing move than the ownership of the national government, for 45 masters for the railways would introduce a chaos in the management of these big and important interests which would dislocate all industry and threaten the foundations of society. Nevertheless, the democratic party is the organization which will make the fight against the republicans four years hence. Debs' and Watson's assertions that the democracy is dead for good this time will not be accepted by many persons who have followed the history of that organization. The democracy has met many staggering defeats, though the last was a little more sweeping and humiliating than any of its previous disasters. Still. that party will keep up its organization. It will alter its creed and its leadervoted for Parker recently will support the man who is to be put up in the next national convention. It will be the democratic party that the republicans will meet in 1908, but it will be a Bryanized and Hearstized party, in which the fighting ingredient will be at the front, and which will be able to make a more picturesque and stirring campaign than that which Parker and his followers

The spectacle is now presented of two disreputable factions of the democratic party flying at each other's throats in rage over the result of last Tuesday's election. The Hearst papers are scoring the Parker-Belmont-Tammany gang as "enemies of the common people," while the New York Daily News, the Tammany democratic organ. is reading the Hearst crowd out of the party as traitors to the cause. When such elements fall out the decent sec-tion has its just dues. An entire elimi-nation of the whole disreputable outfit would be a godsend to the democratic party.-Burlington Hawkeye.

GOOD FEELING NOW ASSURED

Beneficient Conditions Will Undoubtedly Result from Roosevelt's Election.

What sort of a reorganization and realignment will take place in the democratic party in the next four years? What kind of a coalition and a ification of the American public, says the Indianapolis Star. A dispatch to the Indianapolis Star. the Star thus interprets the president's mind:

"During his incumbency in office he will mingle with the masses, visiting the great citles and learning for himself what the people need, what policy they favor, what business changes must be brought about by legislation; in fine, what can be done to increase the happiness, prosperity and contentment of the masses. He will ignore the recommendations of politicians and the behests of party organizations. He will appoint to federal office only such men as are acceptable to the people, and in his selections for office he will not be influenced by senators, representatives or by any senators, representatives or by any ters. Mr. Roosevelt will invade the th with arms wide open. He will dere that he has never sought to establish e equality. He does not consider this sible or desirable. He will assert that i only idea is to recognize manhood server it is found, either in black or lite, and that he seeks to clevate manjord in the negro. He believes that such the control of th gued that the unanimity that characterized his late election warrants him in making a departure. He realizes that the enormous and flattering vote given him was not confined to the republican party, but came from all par-He is warranted in the belief that he is, for the coming four years, to be the president of the whole pe in fact and name, because the latter have so willed it.

It is a beautiful idea, and carried to logical conclusion cannot fail of being of great benefit to the country. If it is possible for the president, in the midst of pressing official duties, to go among the people and study their affairs and conditions with a purpose of bettering them, Abraham Lincoln's desire—the desire born of Gettysburg and Appomattox—will be nearer realized than ever. Then, indeed, will it be impossible for "a government of the people, by the people and for the peoto perish from the earth.

And a constitutional blessing falls benignly upon the president's plan.
The "welfare of the people" was was vouchsafed the residents of the United States by that great instrument, and one important purpose of the visits and studies of the executive will be to make happy the countrymen who have so splendidly their confidence in him.

NO SENSATIONAL AFFAIR.

Subject of Tariff Revision Will Not Be Allowed to Disturb National Tranquility.

sensible men know and admit that the Dingley tariff schedules are not sacred. In due time it will be in order doubtless to consider the revision of them in cases that show inequity or oppression.

However, the current suggestion, said to emanate from Washington, that it is necessary to take up tariff revision right after the inauguration-that it is necessary to tear up the industrial earth and rend the business heavens by calling an extra session of congress expressly to revise the tariff—is un-worthy of sensible Americans and especially sensible republicans, says the Chicago Inter Ocean.

The incoming congress was elected with no special mandate to revise the tariff. Neither was it elected with a special mandate against tariff revision. campaign. The policy of protection was approved merely as one of the many republican policies passed upon at the polls on November 8. The schedules therefore are open, as ever, to review.

The Fifty-ninth congress will be unusually free to deal with the tariff calmly and rationally and objectively. It was chosen under no special pressure for or against tariff changes. It their oilskin hats. Capt. Lewis states that he could not possibly have surunder which the nation has prospered, vived two days longer. and to improve those policies where-ever possible. It has no call whatever to act with breakneck speed and in special session.

A national administration is not a three-ring circus. It is not bound to present a sensational novelty every season. Its duty is rather to avoid sensationalism.

Therefore, let us all be calm. Let us not endanger the beneficient result of the election by hysterics or panics. Let us be sober-minded, and, when we take up tariff revision, do so in the regular orler of business.

As the harvest fields are yielding up their riches the men of the city are busy erecting new buildings. Along country lanes and city pavements the nation is busy. Prosperity is general. The sound of the hammer and saw echoes the sound of the reaper. And this activity, in addition to being general, is natural. Better still, it promises to continue. The statistical reports of the various trades and occupations of the nation are poor campaign documents for the calamity howlers this year.—Des Moines Register.

Man Who Stole Nearly $30,000 from His Employer Hunted Down.

New York, Nov. 25.—James Wallace who is charged with the theft of stock certificates valued at nearly $30,000 from Edward M. Breitung, a Marquette, Mich., banker, by whom he was employed as confidential secretary, has been arrested in Liverpool. Nearly $25,000 of the sum alleged to have been stellar from Form Parities, was have been stolen from Breitung was recovered. Arrangements are now being made looking to the extradition of Wallace to this country.

Wallace fled from Marquette on October 30, leaving word with his employer that he was going to an Illinois institution for the cure of inebriety. When he did not return Mr. Breitung began an investigation with the result that 850 shares of Michigan copper mining stock and 200 shares of United States Steel preferr found to be missing.
