Foreign "Undesirables."

Not a few Britons will read with envy the official statistics just published at Washington showing the manner in which foreign undesirables are dealt with in the United States, comments a London paper of recent date. Last year very nearly 8,000 of these unwelcome guests were shut out from American hospitality, while 779 others who had previously gained admission were returned to their native countries as unfit for American citizenship. The rejected included paupers, physically diseased persons (there were 1.560 of these incompetents), convicts, the insane and imbeciles—in short, an exceedingly miscellaneous assortment of human rubbish, which, if allowed to land, must have, as in England, proved an intolerable burden to the indigenous population. But there is far more room in the United States than in our cramped and overcrowded isles for continental riffraff. Last year the great republic accepted and digested over three-quarters of a million of desirable immigrants from Europe-an utter impossibility, of course, for the United Kingdom. But with all this readiness to receive really valuable labor from the old world, Washington most rightly draws the line sharply against importations of detrimental additions to the industrial population. At the present moment there would not be nearly so much distress in London were it not for the continuous inflowing of the poor, needy wretches who lower the standard of living-and the wage market in the unskilled labor

America's Greatness.

To my view, what makes the greatness of the United States among the nations is less its tremendous economic development than its political institutions and its consciousness of liberty in every field of action and life. This comes back to saying that what has made its greatness is less the country itself than the men who inhabit it, writes M. Anatole Leroy-Beaulieu in the World's Work. In this sense one might say that it is the American who has made America, although between the Atlantic and the Pacific, as elsewhere, there was a mutual influence of men on the land, and land on men. But as great as this last was, the first seems to have been even more powerful, and this is one of the causes, which, from my point of view, bring about the originality and the superiority of the United States. The causes of its success and of its greatness are not merely material causes due to the generosity of nature toward it. They are, above all others, moral causes, due to the character, the education, the energy and the spirit of enterprise of Americans.

Seed Adulteration.

The department of agriculture is continuing its good work of warring against the adulterators of food and other articles. Its latest foray is intended to bring about the suppression of the business of selling adulterated seeds. It is found that many seeds supposed to be of firstclass grasses, grains, etc., are largely mixed with something else of an inferior character. While it seems difficult to design a law by which the persons or imprisonment, the act of congress under which the department is pursuing its investigations permits the publication of the names of the offenders. These shiver of apprehension to run through the department announces, together the republican party.—Brooklyn Eagle. with a statement as to the extent and nature of the adulteration in each case. This may not be as zevere a penalty as should be inflicted, but it is a fair warning to the people against deception.

Old Diogenes can cease his weary rounds in the hunt for an honest man. Kinney, of the Rocky Ford Gazette, has found him in the person of a western Kansas citizen who revealed himself under these circumstances: He went from his own village one day to the county seat. He recurred in the evening with two bottles of whisky, one purchased for himself and the other purchased at the request of a friend. As he alighted from the train one of the bottles dropped from his pocket and was smashed to fragments. Without a moment's hesitation he handed the unbroken bottle to the "It was my bottle which broke," he said. "I remember putting mine in my right hand pocket and yours in my left hand pocket."

PARTIES AND POSITIONS.

Difference Between the Standing of the Republicans and the Democrats.

The other day we said what, though obvious enough, may be worth repeat-ing, since so many persons are the dupes of names and traditions and slow to comprehend their actual pole-tics:

"Mr. Roosevelt is stronger at present than the republican party. Mr. Bryan is strong enough in the democratic party, largely radical, to prevent its success when it plays conservative. Yet there must be and will be a conservative party, a party not disposed to strain the constitution. It is the truth to say that, save by lip service, the democrats, be they Parkerites or Bryanites, have ceased to worship or regard the constitution. There are, in fact, two federalist parties, and Mr. Bryan is a federalist without knowing it."

The Macon Telegraph reprints and

The Macon Telegraph reprints and approves, says the New York Sun. It sees "Bryan, and some of his more extreme followers, sidling up to Roosevelt;" and it sees "unmistakable indications of a breaking up of party lines and alignment." And it holds with us, "that there must be a conservative

Can anybody tell where that conservative party is at present? It may be in the bowels of time. It is not

Mr. Bryan went to Washington and resumed his seat on the democratic throne. Democratic members of congress crowded about him and hung reverently on his lips. He was again the leader, the boss, the god of democratic idolatry.

And David's lips are locked. Hill, the conservative of 1896, the radical of 1902, the conservative convert of 1904, is dead. Bryan "buried" so many times, and the last time at St. Louis, is in command of the majority of the democratic party. He is pretty young and wholly healthy. The conservative democratic party doesn't look

As to the sincerity of the admiration of Mr. Bryan and his followers for Mr. Roosevelt, some doubts are permissible. But Mr. Bryan seems to have the sense to perceive that Mr. Roosevelt is the only party in sight. He is more than the republican party. He is a good deal of the democratic party. Even a large part of the south has found that he is a pretty good fellow.

Can there be any new "alignment" of political parties so long as Mr. Roosevelt retains his personal preeminence and popularity? Can the real strength of the republicans or the democrats be known while he magnetizes and processes bethe tizes and masters both? As to a conservative party, a reaction is sure; but when we see Col. Bryan, still the one democrat in the world for most democrats-in so far as there are any democrats save in a dormant state-why the job of "reorganization" looks apt to take some time.

RECIPROCITY NOT WANTED.

There Is No Desire in Canada for a Closer Trade Relationship.

According to the principal organ of the Canadian government, there is no desire in the dominion, except on the part of a very few of the people, for trade reciprocity with the United States. That paper says that to a maxmum and minimum tariff with the United States Canadians would offer no widespread or strong objection, but to a reciprocity treaty their objection would be insuperable. "They are willing to trade more freely, but are not willing to tick their hands in the development." willing to tie their hands in the devel-opment of their own fiscal system. While it is not necessary to do so, it certainly would be embarrassing and probably disadvantageous."

This is said by the paper representing the liberal government in Canada in response to the agitation in New England in favor of a reciprocity treaty with the dominion, and it would seem that it should be sufficient to si-lence agitation in this country on behalf of Canadian reciprocity. It is manifestly useless, says the Omaha Bee, to talk of establishing closer trade relations with a country which absolutely has no interest in the matter and probably would not consider any proposition that the United States might make looking to such relations As to a maximum and minimum tariff that is manifestly a matter that rests entirely with the dominion. United States cannot adopt such policy applicable only to Canada. That being the case the suggestion is of no value, and is not at all likely to recan be prosecuted and punished by fine ceive any consideration from our government.

EFMr. Bryan has been praising the republicans. Which may cause a wild

The world last year produced $350,-000,000 worth of gold, or $100,000,000 in excess of the output in 1902, when mining began to recover from the effects of the war in South Africa. The United States furnished $84,000,000 in 1904, or $2,000,000, more than in 1902. The figures help to explain the stability and security of the gold standard, which was irrevocably established without the advice or consent of Mr. Bryan or any other silver man.—Troy Times. The results of the democratic sena-torial caucus at Albany prove that David B. Hill has refused to stay buried, and that Mr. Murphy and Mr. McCarren are still engaged in the benevolent business of cutting each other's throats.-N. Y.

World (Ind. Dem.). DObviously it is the disposition of the administration to "stand pat" and consider no changes in the tariff except such as are absolutely dictated by commercial conditions. Its license to adopt this course is found in the overwhelming vote at the national election confirmatory of established republican policy .-Pittsburg Leader.

THINGS ARE NOT THE SAME

Tariff Revision May Have Been Needed in 1897, But It Is Not Now.

To argue that the situation which confronted Mr. McKinley in 1896 is analogous to the one confronting President Roosevelt at the present time is certainly rising to a sublime height of absurdity, says the Des Moines Capi-

President McKinley and a republican congress were elected in 1896 immediately after the democratic party had nearly bankrupted the government by the enacting of tariff legislation. The Wilson-Gorman tariff bill was a failure, both as a revenue producer and as a protection measure. The nation had had its fill of tariff ripping. The republicans came into power and gave the country the Dingley tariff law which is still on the national statute

Where is there any parallel between the situation existing then and the one at the present time?

President Roosevelt's election last fall simply marked the termination of one grandly successful national administration and the inauguration of another.

The tariff ripper declares that "the tariff is the mother of trusts." face of President Roosevelt's clear-cut declaration that the doctrine is not true he has been given the largest majority of the popular vote ever cast for a president of the United States.

was vox populi declaring-"Let well enough alone!"

Thousands of people voted for President Roosevelt because they believed that one of the purposes of his administration will be to do everything that the enforcement of law can do to solve the trust question, which to so many people is the archmenace in the industrial and commercial world. They do not believe, however, or expect that the business of trust-smashing is to be brought about through a general programme of tariff-smashing.

The precedent of 1896 is no precedent at all. "They that are whole need not a physician, but they that are sick." The nation was sick—mighty sick—in 1896. At the present time it is the person-ification of robust health. It needed the services of a tariff doctor then—several of them. It needs none now.

FREE TRADERS OBSTINATE.

The Ones Who Are Making All the Noise About Tariff Revision.

The question will never be settled, and as the Dingley act contains as few errors as any tariff act that is likely to succeed it, it should be let alone Any tariff will encounter a demand for revision so long as it is not absolutely a free-trade measure. Nothing else will ever suit a free-trader, and it is he who is making all this noise about tariff revision, says the American Economist.

Public sentiment throughout the country is largely manufactured by the newspapers. Many very worthy people who have not time to investigate be-lieve what they read as they run. They are caught by such plausible expressions that tariff is a tax, just as though any people enjoying the protection of a government should escape the taxation necessary to support such govern-

The enormous majority cast for President Roosevelt is an expression of the American people to the effect that they disbelieve any such catchy sentences as "tariff-fed trusts" and "the tariff is at the expense of the many for the benefit of the few" but that, on the other hand, they are convinced that a protective tariff works for the greatest good of the greatest number.

The writer had a hand in the making of three tariff laws, and knows how difficult it is to keep out of the schedules features that will prove to be unwise and harmful. If the tariff ripped open, and there may be injected into it schedules that will require revision soon afterward.

Whenever the duties of the Dingley act are too high the act becomes a dead letter.

LATE POLITICAL OPINION

III does not appear, however, that President Roosevelt indorsed the views of William Jennings Bryan on the leading issues of the day.-Chicago Inter

The national demand is that protection be maintained, and maintenance of protection is really more important than revision, which is only a detail .-Pittsburg Chronicle.

The Dingley tariff is identified with the greatest era of American prosperity, but there are some uneasy folks who hope for better things by ripping it up.— St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Mr. Bryan's remark in New Haven that the democratic party should forget itself for a time was uncalled for. It did that very thing when it took him up as a leader and prophet.—Chicago Chronicle

The tariff question is settled and will remain so for some time to come. The business people of the United States do not want any tariff tinkering at this The country is prosperous under a high protective tariff and the people are satisfied. "Let well enough alone."— Waltham Times.

We think it an undeniable proposition that a great majority of the people are protectionists. And while few of them are satisfied with the tariff as i stands to-day, they would rather let it stand with all its iniquities than to have it revised on free trade or "tariff for revenue only" lines.—Washington Post.
