NO. 7.

The Observer.

A short time before Dr. Osler's name came to be on all our tongues as a result of his views regarding the forty-year and sixty-year way-marks in human life, there fell into the Observer's hands a little volume by this distinguished physician, entitled "Science and Immortality." Last year Dr. Osler delivered the lecture at Harvard on the George Goldthwaite Ingersoll foundation, and it is this lecture that forms the content of this little volume. Last summer when it was first announced that Dr. Osler was preparing a lecture on the subject of immortality, the Observer mentioned the fact to a local physician. The latter remarked in effect that a physician's sphere is medicine and surgery and that he had better leave the handling of theological and philosophical questions to those competent to deal with them. This is no doubt saying too much, but, Dr. Osler himself in his introductory remarks betrays similar misgivings, and the Observer is strongly tempted to conclude that the misgivings are justified by the result. Nevertheless it is instructive to learn the attitude towards the question of immortality of men whose habits of thought have been formed chiefly in the domain of physical sciences. It is instructive, but not very inspiring. One seems to read beween the lines that the intellectual atmosphere and associations in the midst of which Dr. Osler has been spending his life have been hostile or indifferent to a faith in immortality. Perhaps if the author were less than forty years of age, he might be aware of the fact that scientific thought is very far from being entirely materialistic and agnostic, and that it is becoming less so every year.

It must not be inferred from what has been said that Dr. Osler's personal attitude towards is moortality is hostile or even indifferent. It is indeed frankly agnostic, so far as the standjoint of mere reason is concerned; but the author recognizes a logic of the heat which for purposes of life possesses an authority greater than does the logic The Observer. A short time before Dr. Osler's name or even indifferent. It is indeed frankly agnostic, so far as the standpoint of mere reason is concerned; but the author recognizes a logic of the heart which for purposes of life possesses an authority greater than does the logic of the head. His personal attitude is expressed in his approving quotation of Cicero's remark that he would rather be mistaken with Plato than be in the right with those who deny altogether the life after death.

To sum up Dr. Osler's lecture in paragraph, he says that the vast majority of people, while outwardly professing to believe in the life after death, are really without much thought or concern for it. This class he calls the Laodiceans (Rev. 3:15). Another class frankly dismisses the subject as one about which we can know nothing and need to know nothing. These are the Gallionians (Acts 18:17). In presenting the position of the Gallionians, the author states the negative arguments of physical science affecting the question of immortality. Opposed to the two foregoing classes are the small and select few, the Teresians (named from St. Theresa), who feel that to them it is given to know the mysteries. This class, says Dr. Osler, has ever formed moral leaven of humanity. "They are the salt of the earth, so far as preserving for us a firm conviction of the existence of another and better world." The author's sympathies are with the Teresians, and he prefers to be wrong with them than to be right with the Gallionians.

While one must admire the heroic spirit which leads the author to align himself with those who believe in spiritual realties, in the face of opposing intellectual currents, with which alone he has come into closest contact; it must nevertheless be said that the lecture on the whole is depressing and disappointing. He conceives the intellect and the emotions as standing in such separation from each other, and even in such opposition to each other, that his purely emotional vindication of the belief in immortality reminds one of the boy's definition of faith: "Faith is ing something that you know ain't so." The Observer believes that the head and the heart, reason and faith, cannot be in substantial separation, but that whither one of these truly leads. thither the other will surely follow.

Valuable Hens. Valuable Hens.

Mr. William Wykoff claims to have the best flock of hens in Cameron county—and he certainly has good grounds for his opinion as the following true statement will show: Mr. Wykoff moved his goods from Square Timber Run to Cameron on Sunday. Among his belongings was his chicken coop, which he had loaded on a car. His 24 chickens were inside the coop and no attention was paid to them till the no attention was paid to them till the train reached Stillhouse Junction, where it stopped to cool a hot journal. where it stopped to cool a hot journal. Considerable time was consumed in cooling the journal and in the meantime the ladies in the party began to feel hungry—and some one suggested there might be an egg in the coop. Mr. Wykoff looked in and found six eggs that had been laid since the train left Square Timber Run, and five more hens on the nests. The oil stove was unpacked and a quick lunch was soon served. The distance travelled was three mile and the hens laid at the served. The distance travelled was three mile and the hens laid at the rate of two eggs per mile, which is a very good record, considering the sharp curves and low points to contend with. Mr. Wykoff intends to present one of his hens to General Kurophalkin, so he can keen up his strength. patkin, so he can keep up his strength while retreating from the Japs. J. F. S.

Destructive Fire in Williamsport.

Destructive Fire in Williamsport. At an early hour last Sunday morning the Brown Building at the Corner of Pine and Willow streets, Williamsport, and the Gazette and Bulletin of fice on Willow street, were badly damaged by fire. The damage to the Brown Building is estimated at $20,000, and a heavy loss was inflicted on almost all the tenants of the building. The third floor of the building was fitted up with sleeping rooms and some of the occupants barely escaped with their lives, not having awakened before the flames had cut off escape by the stairway. They were rescued by ladders placed by the firemen.

The Gazette and Bulletin building suffered the most loss in the basement, used as a press room. The building escaped the fire in a fortunate manner.

The Deliverymen Have Their

Say EDITOR PRESS: Being interested in the treatment of horses, I wish to com-menton the article in your last issue signed signed "Anti-Gruelty." I am signed signed "Anti-Cruelty." I am glad that a number of citizens are as noticeable of the treatment of horses as they infer, but I wonder if these same citizens, when cleaning their back yards, do not throw old iron, hoops, glass, papers, etc., into the alley or street, endangering horses lives. Will they not see the proper authorities in order to stop the automobiles and motor eveles from racing through and motor cycles from racing through the streets at a terrific rate of speed, frightening poor dumb horses more than a lash of the whip would do. Too, might they not look after livery horses while interested in Delivery horses while interested in Delivery horses and see that they are not raced over twenty or thirty miles in a short time, left standing in the cold, unblanketed, driven past watering troughs or fed when warmed up to a high pitch. Surely none of the "Anti-Cruelty" ever do such things (?). As I too am very much interested in the welfare of horses and do not wish to criticize the article above mentioned, but I do believe that it would be better for the "Citizens" to look after such things than to watch an experienced horseman make his horses mind, in order to have them drive up well aud enjoy the appreciation of his employers.

Daisy Gets Ripping,

Daisy Gets Ripping,

Editor Press:—

In a recent issue of the Press we noticed a letter written by "Daisy," in which the management, or the mismanagement, of the schools of this place, was the subject which called forth a glowing tribute from the gifted pen of our inspired Daisy. He speaks of the high rate of taxation. Are the teachers responsible for the amount required to run the schools? Can he prove that the directors are not attending to their duties? "Daisy" seems to think that the teachers receive too much pay for their work. Why does he not use his influence and perhaps the salaries MIGHT be reduced. "Daisy" also insinuates that the truant officer is not looking after truants as he should. Can "Daisy", prove the truth of all that he said? In regards to the entertainments or "theatricals," as "Daisy" so lovingly styles them, he made a slight mistake in his count, or it maybe that he has not the usual number of fingers on his right hand. "Daisy" should endeavor to keep truth on his side, in such matters, at least, for someone, who has nothing else to do, may dispute his statements. The "Ao larger" class may run the school but the lady in charge has reserved the the right to offer suggestions and for some reason her suggestions are immediately acted upon. Strange isn't it?

In every village we are sure to find one or two persons who are unwilling to attend to their own affairs and to this class "Daisy" evidently belongs if he was dissatisfied with the work done in the schools, why did he not complain either to the directors or the teachers? Oh what a picy that "Daisy" cannot reform the universe. In conclusion, we would advise "Daisy" to attend to his own affairs. He has not covered himself with glory nor has he made any friends by the stand he has taken. He seems to be standing alone and his figure is not a pretty one. We think the directors and teachers are capable of attending to the schools and that they require no assistance from such as "Daisy."

GEORGE HARRISON HALL, aged about 65 years, died in his room over Frank Shives' store, last Friday morning, after an illness of two weeks of pneumonia.

after an illness of two weeks of pneumonia.

George came to Emporium in Feb. 1866 from the army, having followed the troops from the south. At Norfolk, Va., he tied to Capt. R. M. Overhiser and cared for his horses. When the war closed George shouldered his knapsack and musket and kept with the Cameron county boys until he landed here, where he has ever since been a familiar figure, working for years for J. L. Cook and Judge Cochran and the last few years for Mr. Shives. During his last illness Mr. Shives and family gave him every attention and ministered to his every want. Nothing positive is known of George's history, but he was evidently born in slavery, although George in sisted he was born in Dublin, his mother being Irish and his father an Indian. While he was unable to read or write he was cute enough and took pride in remembering how to pronounce big words and use them in or write he was cate enough and took pride in remembering how to pronounce big words and use them in their proper place. During all his years passed here he was trusted by every employer and never once was his honesty questioned. Tell George Harrison not to repeat what was todd to him it was a sealed book. He was a character and everybody had a pleasant word for him.

to him it was a sealed book. He was a character and everybody had a pleas ant word for him.

Undertaker Egan took charge of his remains and placed them in the parlor over the store, dressed in his G. A. R uniform and decorated with his sash and badges of honor—the latter highly prized by the deceased during life. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon at two o'clock, Rev. J. M. Robertson Rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church officiating. The rooms were well filled with our citizens, a large number following him to the grave. Floral offerings decorated his casket and potted ferns were stationed around the room. His pall bearers were prominent citizens—Capt. R. M. Overhiser, H. L. Burns, M. T. Hogan, M. C. Tulis, J. W. Kriner and A. A. McDonald. The faithful old soul had a good christian burial, thanks to the friends who had known him for 39 years—Mr. Shives purchasing the lot in Wiley Cemetery, and paying for his care during illness, other friends defraying the undertaker's expenses. Peace to his soul.

Letter to C. A. VanLew.

Emporium, Pa.
Dear Sir: You want a cheap job of paint for a cheap house, don't you?

Its Devoe. It's the regular thing its Devoe; there's nothing, in all paint, so cheap as Devoe. Oh, yes you can paint with mud: bra that isn't paint; you want it to look about right for a month or two.

Paint Devoe; can't do it for less, there's nothing so cheap; say nothing of wear, ther's nothing so cheap as Devoe. It goes so far; save gallons; no matter about the price, save gallons. A gallons of paint, put-on, costs $4 or $5.

Devoe is your paint; save gallons; Devoe is your paint.

Yours truly F. W. DEVOE & Co.
