RAILWAY RATE LEGISLATION.

Biennial Convention of Conductors Ask Congress Not to Pass Unreasonable Railroad Laws.

The biennial convention of the Association of Railway Conductors recently held at Portland, Oregon, resolutions were unanimously adopted voicing their sentiments as to the effect of proposed railway rate legislation on the 1,300,000 railroad employees, whom they in part represented.

The further protested against such power being given to the present Inter-State Commission because "the proposed legislation is not in harmony with our idea of American jurisprudence, inasmuch as it contemplates that a single body shall have the right to investigate, indict, try, condemn and then enforce its decisions at the cost of the carriers, pending appeal, which is manifestly inequitable."

TALES OF THE TOTS. "Say, papa," queried little Harold, looking up from his book, "do they plant bird seed when they want to raise sparrow grass?"

Little Elsie's father was a very homely man. One day, after looking at him steadily for some time, Elsie said: "Mamma, didn't they have any good-looking men in stock when you went shopping for a husband?"

Small Bobby had just returned from an afternoon children's party. "What kind of refreshments did you have?" asked his mother. "Liquid," answered Bobby. "Liquid!" she exclaimed, in surprise. "Yes, ma'am," replied the son of his father. "Us boys all ran away from the girls and went swimming."

THREE YEARS AFTER. Eugene E. Lario, of 751 Twentieth Avenue, ticket seller in the Union Station, Denver, Col., says: "You are at liberty to repeat what I first stated through our Denver papers about Doan's Kidney Pills in the summer of 1899, for I have had no reason in the interim to change my opinion of the remedy. I was subject to severe attacks of backache, all ways aggravated if I sat long at a desk. Doan's Kidney Pills absolutely stopped my backache. I have never had a pain or a twinge since."

HINTS ABOUT BOOKS.

WHOLESONE FICTION AND HISTORY GIVE GIRLS IDEAS.

Pleasure and Knowledge from Novels—Good Plan for History Study—"Most of Us Shockingly Ignorant of Things That Lie About Us"—Business Girl Should Read Nature Books—How to Deal with Each Book to Make Reading It Profitable.

BY MARGARET E. SANGSTER. (Copyright, 1905, by Joseph B. Bowles.) The first question that arises when considering what our girls shall read, is what is their motive in reading. Do they read simply for diversion, for the recreation and pastime which are legitimate, or do they read for mental enrichment, and information? If the first is the object in view the answer is easy. For amusement and pleasure, girls, like everybody else, must seek the story tellers of the world, and lose the cares of reality in the romances that make them forget the daily grind.

Equally, a girl who would like to know something of the life of India may learn a great deal about it by reading "Kim," that masterpiece of Rudyard Kipling, or any book on India by Flora Annie Steele, or a little unobtrusive book entitled "The Bishop's Conversion," the author of which was long a missionary in that land of mystery and romance.

If girls desire more serious reading, and wish to take up any definite historic period, the best way is to let their reading focus itself about a single central and conspicuous figure. Take for instance Queen Elizabeth. In studying her era, one finds her surrounded by a group of great statesmen and by another group of writers who are still influencing and coloring English literature.

WILD FLOWER BEAUTY. Everyone Can Add This to Her Home and the Gathering and Arrangement Is Most Interesting. Not every one has a flower garden, but every one who spends even a part of the summer in the country has the freedom of the roadsides, pastures, meadow and woods; the wild gardens which belong to every man and no man, where every one is free to gather and no one to forbid.

Grayed Hair. Sage tea is very good for hair that is turning prematurely gray. Make a strong brew with the pressed leaves or, better still, make a sage extract. Get four ounces of the dried leaves and put in a pint of alcohol and a pint of rainwater. Let stand for a week, agitating occasionally.

A girl who is at business all day, and who has only her evenings in which to read, must necessarily specialize. If she attempt to read in a desultory fashion, taking a book at haphazard from the shelves, she will read to little purpose. For every one of us, it is a good thing to have some outside interest, or, better different from the daily routine, or interest that takes us into a new world, broadens our horizon and gives us different thoughts.

REASONABLE REFLECTION.

A Practice That Is Reprehensible at Unseasonable Hours Only.

John Farson, the Chicago banker, who has drawn up a list of satirical rules for entering society, holds that there is too much dissipation among the rich, says the New York Tribune. "A remark I heard the other day," he said to a reporter, "would apply well to the average society man. A middle-aged couple were talking about the Russo-Japanese war and the habits of Japan.
