This Was Pathetic. Our little Willie in the best of sashes, fell in the fire and burned to ashes. Suddenly the air grew chilly. But no one dared to poke up Willie.

The Observer.

If the will is the determining factor in belief, it is also powerful in guiding and controlling emotion. The "will to believe" suggests, the "will to feel," which is an idea that perhaps runs counter to some of our preconceived notions. Just as there is a wide spread impression that we are not responsible for our beliefs, so there is an impression, equally wide spread, that we are not responsible for our feelings. The Observer last week, attempted to show the baselessness of the first assumption; he will endeavor now to expose the fallacy of the second.

It is true that the hand of arbitrary and violent compulsion cannot be laid upon our emotions. Mere force and will power on the part of a gardener cannot cause the tendrils of a vine to cling instantly to wall or post. Mere force cannot compel a child to like the things which he ought to like, or to feel sorrow and shame for his misdeeds. Emotion can no more be forced through a sheer effort of will than can a cubit be added to one's stature through a mere taking of thought. But indirectly and mediately emotion may be trained and controlled to an extent almost unlimited. By understanding the nature of emotion and by taking advantage of the laws which govern it, we may develop and control it with a success equal to that of Mr. Luther Burbank in his remarkable achievements with plants.

The great law of emotion is that we like that to which we have become accustomed. It is this law that explains why, "be it ever so humble, there is no place like home." It explains the hold upon us of familiar faces and scenes and occupations. Let two persons associate closely together for a length of time, or even for a short time under unusual circumstances, and a sense of comradeship will be developed between them which years of subsequent absence from each other may not wholly efface. Romantic love between the sexes is apt to prove evanescent and is in itself a poor guarantee of the permanence of the marriage bond; but the association of husband and wife in the home, and the close community of their interests, may be relied upon, in the great majority of cases, to develop in each for the other, an affection that is both deep and enduring.

The way to take advantage of the law that we like that to which we are accustomed, is to accustom ourselves to that which we ought to like. Our environment and associations are largely a matter of our own making. The actual world of men and things, which surrounds us, is so complex and multifarious, that no one can be in responsive touch with the whole of it. The world as it exists for each individual is merely a sort of personal selection of certain persons and things out of the great totality of the real world. One's world is really therefore an expression of his own character and choice. He who puts himself in association with what is evil and accustoms himself, to it, is himself responsible for his resulting love of the evil and repugnance towards the good. Our associations and the likings and loves which spring out of them should wait upon a high purpose and ideal. We should learn to love what we ought to love. The law that we like what we are accustomed to, applies to the word of ideals as well as to the world of actuality. If we accustom ourselves to thoughts of "the things that are more excellent," we shall grow more and more to like those things, and to grow into the likeness of them.

To one who is enslaved to some particular vice, the opposite virtue may seem hard and repellent. But let him cherish the thought of that virtue, and gradually he will come to love it. It is possible, in no hypocritical sense, to assume a virtue if we have it not. If one accustoms himself to think and speak kindly, even when the inward feeling is anything but kindly, the habit of kindly feeling itself will surely grow upon him. Mere emotion in not an end in itself but only a means to an end. If, as often happens, a passing emotion stands in the light of our higher purpose and duty, we have a right to deny and disregard the passing emotion, which to all intents is a traitor to our real self, and to assume the presence of the emotion which would reflect our true thought and intention.

Burglary. Last Saturday night Robert Dodson's drug store was broken into and a number of razors and knives stolen. The party or parties gained entrance through the Chestnut street door in the same manner as the parties who robbed him several years ago.

Accidentally Kills Nephew. Renn Christian, the nine year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Christian of Renovo, who had been visiting his grand parents, Mr. Hiram Moat and family at Mix Run, was accidentally shot and instantly killed, by his uncle Albert Moat, aged 19 years, who was handling a revolver, Tuesday, August the 2nd.

Fire. Last Thursday evening about 8:30 o'clock, the residence of Franklin Housler was discovered to be on fire, the alarm was given and the boys soon had the fire subdued. The fire started from a lamp in the kitchen, which had been sitting too close to the wall. Considerable damage was done to the building.

Rev. Mr. Bower to Leave. The Rev. H. C. Bower, preacher in charge of the Cameron Circuit, appeared before the Missionary Committee of the Methodist Episcopal Church in New York City last week and having passed a satisfactory examination was accepted as a Missionary to India.

In a school of over seven hundred native pupils, he will be a teacher and will serve as pastor of an English church. His successor has not yet been named.

Located in Emporium.

Mr. J. Paul Felt, son of our respected townsman, Mr. J. P. Felt, has located in Emporium permanently, being associated with Mr. B. W. Green. Mr. Felt is a graduate of University of Pennsylvania Law Department and has practiced in Philadelphia since his graduation. There is something peculiar about Emporium, for once a resident of our beautiful little mountain city all are satisfied to return. We think Mr. Felt has made a wise choice and hope he may realize his fondest expectations.

Coming Conferences on Divorce.

One good result of recent agitations in religious conventions and assemblies of the question how to remedy or stay the growing evil of divorce, has been the direction of attention to this subject by federal and state executives and legislatures. At the invitation of Governor Pennypacker, there will shortly be held in Washington a conference of representatives appointed by the governors of the several states, constituting the National Divorce Law Commission. The purpose of this conference, as indicated by Governor Pennypacker, is to promote uniformity of divorce legislation. The Governor has expressed himself strongly in favor of limiting the number of recognized causes of divorce.

This conference will follow a conference of a national commission on the same subject, at Narragansett Pier, August 18th.

This is, we believe, the first time that organized attention has ever been given to this subject outside of church conventions. The public sentiment against the scandalous and alarming frequency of divorce is growing rapidly; and it is reasonable to hope that these coming conferences will result in a long stride towards uniformity of sane and conservative divorce laws among the several states.

Eye Specialist.

Prof. W. H. Budine, the well known Eye Specialist, of Binghamton, N. Y., will be at R. H. Hirsch's jewelry store, Emporium, Pa., August 12th. If you can't see well or have headache don't fail to call and see Prof. Budine, as he guarantees to cure all such cases. Lenses ground and fitted in old frames. Eyes tested and examined free. All work guaranteed.

A Trip Down the County.

Cameron county has several fine ginseng gardens well started. One good one up North Creek and three at Sinnamonahoning. Mr. Krebs of Sinnamonahoning has a very fine garden, nearly half of which is ready to dig this fall. Cameron county is a natural home for ginseng, much of it growing in the woods wild. This is now getting scarce and I think persons having only a little land will do well to set out a few roots, as prices are still showing upward tendencies.

There is much said about cultivated roots not being salable, or bringing lower prices than the wild root, but Vice Consul Cloud, Hangchua, China, does not even hint at this in his report on ginseng, but on the other hand classes American grown ginseng as being third class, that is, Hsi yang shen, known as "foreign ginseng." Now as there are five varieties of ginseng, and American being third, I get considerable encouragement from the report. Of course we cannot compete with the genuine Manchuria root, "Lao-shan-yieh shen" selling at $135.00 per one and one third ounce; but grade five, Korea, sells at 35c per one and one third ounce; while the "foreign," American brings 65c to 70c per one and one third ounce. These prices are gold. Our 70c looks small by the side of the Manchuria grade, coming from Kirin, but it is not as small as the Korean 35c. There was a small lot of cultivated roots shipped from New York that the Chinese refused as being under grade. These roots were spoiled by fertilizing so heavy as to spoil the flavor. Growers should learn a lesson from this.

Being interested in the ginseng industry, I went down to Sinnamonahoning to see the ginseng gardens there. Never having been over the roads before, I naturally inquired whether I would find rough riding down that way, and from the inquiries I made, I was at loss to know whether to go by train or by wheel, but finally chanced the wheel. Leaving Emporium at eight o'clock, I passed through as fine scenery and over as good roads as I would ever wish to find. Stopping on the hill-tops to view the beautiful scenery and to pick what huckleberries I could eat, I did not arrive at Sinnamonahoning until half past eleven. This being my first trip over the road, there was too much for me to see to make any kind of time, but not on account of poor roads, as I made the return trip in one hour and a half.

Over this route there are long stretches of the finest kind of road, but there are also short stony pieces and sharp curves that could easily be made much better by using a little dynamite and a little work. I expect these places would jar a buggy some in passing over them.

Arriving at Sinnamonahoning I have never met a more friendly or accommodating people, in fact all the people I met going or coming were as fine hospitable people as can be found in the state. My motor-cycle excited some curiosity along the road and as Driftwood and Sinnamonahoning, and I was asked many questions as to how I managed to handle it, but could not induce anybody to take a ride on it. Gasoline is kept for sale at Driftwood, so autos need not be afraid to go down that way, but I expect some of those stony places below Sterling Run would shake up anything that went on four wheels, but these places are very short and soon over.

On this trip I saw four rabbits and one pheasant, showing a good out for game this fall. With the scenery along this route, and game in the roads, it ought to be a fine trip for the amateur photographer, and, if they are used as well as I was, they would not stop at one trip, for I certainly was never treated better in my life, than by the people along this route.

Of Household Interest.

Housecleaning is not the pleasantest of the housekeeper's tasks, but none the less necessary on that account. In the September Delineator Isabel Gordon Curtis offers in her series, "The Making of a Housewife," some suggestions that will tend to lighten the labor and lessen the disagreeableness of this household duty. Other items of domestic interest in the same number are illustrated cookery and a variety of recipes under the topics "Delicious Cream Jellies," "Decorative Color Salads" and "The Potato." In addition, Alice M. Kellogg explains "How to Select Finishing Hardware" and Ward MacLeod writes on "Growing Bulbs Indoors."

Local news on every page.

Two Women Locked Up.

On Tuesday evening, Chief of Police Mundy arrested Charles Irvin, who was in company with Esther Mundy, widow of the late Jas. Mundy, and Emma Dezal, all of whom had imbibed too freely of bad whisky, and proceeded with him to the lockup, but the Mundy woman followed and became so offensive, that the chief had to take charge of her. The woman then opened up her abuse in a most disgraceful manner, but her and Irvin were soon landed in the borough lockup. Later in the evening the Dezal woman again made her appearance and she too was put away to sober up.

On Wednesday morning they were given a hearing before Squire Larabee, who fined Irvin $7.00 and the women $5.00 each, which fine they refused to pay and as a result, at this writing, they are still locked up. The women have visited here a number of times, but this is the first time they have been fortunate enough to stop where the bill of fare and other accommodations are so elaborate.

Coming Attractions.

Manager T. J. Butler, of the Emporium Opera House, gives the information that he has signed contracts, which will result in the conversion of the Opera House into a high-class theatre this coming season, and will open Aug. 30th, with the original New York production of "When Knighthood was in Flower." Among the plays and players booked for the coming season are: Olie Olson; The Village Parson; The Sign of the Cross; Culhane, Chace & Weston's Minstrels; Miss Elnor Mortimer in "Echos from Broadway;" Chester DeRose Co., in "Hearts Astray;" Dora Thorne; A Country Boy in New York; The Holy City; A Millionaire Tramp; Over Niagara Falls; Arthur Vall in "The New Bell Boy;" A Royal Slave; Nothing But Money; The Little Outcast; The King or Rogues; and Edward N. Death of Mrs. A. W. Baker.

Word was received in Emporium last Sunday morning of the death of Mrs. Annie Shrimp Baker, wife of our former townsman, Albra W. Baker, M. D., at their home in Williamsport, at 9:35 o'clock, Saturday evening. The interment took place in Wildwood Cemetery Williamsport, on Tuesday morning. Mrs. Baker had long been a sufferer from chronic rheumatism; and it was in the hope that a change of residence might prove beneficial to her, that Dr. Baker was induced to remove to Williamsport two years ago. This hope was sadly disappointed, for within a few months after their removal unmistakable symptoms of an alarming nature developed, and since then she was almost continually at death's door.

Dr. and Mrs. Baker were residents of Emporium for ten years, and both were held in the highest esteem of our people. So deep was the hold which they gained upon the affection and life of the community that the lapse of two years has diminished naught from it. Mrs. Baker's personality was singularly lovable, and winsome. Her example of wifely devotion; her true-hearted, sympathetic interest in others; her ministrations to those in suffering and distress; her friendship for the friendless; her love for the children of her acquaintance, and her extraordinary power of winning their affection and of influencing them for good; and her labors in the Sunday school, and other activities, of Emmanuel Parish, of which her husband was a vestry man; will be held in grateful and lasting remembrance.

Lulu Miller Dead.

Miss Lulu Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Miller, of Castle Garden, died at the residence of her parents on Monday, aged 24 years. The young lady was taken sick last Friday and was not considered dangerous but on Monday at three o'clock she passed away. The lady is well spoken of by all who knew her. The funeral took place from the home and interment was made in the Castle Garden cemetery yesterday afternoon, and was very largely attended.

At a recent meeting of the State Forestry Commission the following resolution was adopted: "Rule No. 16. All grazing of horses, cattle, sheep, goats and hogs upon the State Forestry Reservations is prohibited."

Considerable excitement was caused last evening about 8:30 by the alarm of fire which proved to be a box car back of Shives' barn. The fire was soon put out, after our people found there were no explosives near.

General Roy Stone, veteran of the Civil and Spanish-American Wars, died at his home in Mendham, N. J., on Sunday, aged 69 years. Deceased was a resident of Stuben county, N. Y., and served in the Civil War in the 149th Pennsylvania Infantry and First Pennsylvania Rifles.

The Knights of the Maccabees in this county will be interested to learn that the members of the order in Pittsburg and other parts of the State are going to keep up the legal fight against the increase of rates that has attracted widespread interest, which now is decided against them but will be taken to a higher court.—Wellsboro Gazette.

The Medix Run correspondent in the Ridgway Advocate says: Recently our two hotels have secured their license, and again are doing a rushing business. The management of these hotels under the supervision of Mr. Martindale on the New York side, and Mike Hackett on the Brooklyn side, render them without a doubt, two of the best hotels in the county.

A Buffalo dispatch of August 1, says: "The Pittsburg, Shawmut & Northern Railroad Company was placed in the hands of a receiver to-day by Justice Kenefick. The company was defaulted in the payment of interest on $15,000,000 bonds. Frank Sullivan Smith, of Angelica, was appointed receiver, and the bond was fixed at $100,000.

"Babes, Birds and Blossoms, a Morning in the Midst of Them" will be Rev. L. B. Twichell's topic at the Baptist church in the morning service on Sunday. The church will be decorated, many birds and babies will be there and the pastor will preach a sermon in simple sentences. Cordial welcome is extended. Baptist Sunday School will attend.

Base Ball.

There will be a game of ball between the Old Leaguers of Renovo and the Emporium team at the Keystone Park, next Saturday the 12th, game to be called at three o'clock. All lovers of this great American game should see it as this promises to be a good one.

A very interesting (?) and exciting game of ball was played at Keystone Park last Friday, by the Y. M. I. Jrs., of St. Marys and the "Steenth Team" of this place. The score resulted in a victory for St. Marys, 15 to 6. By a glance at the score book, the Emporium team must have put up a snappy article of ball juggling, only making 21 errors, while St. Marys had the honor of making but half that number. While we do not profess to know the many different terms for plays, but one player is credited with three "navy yard" home runs, while in the grand total of runs his record shows but one score. We confess we dislike to publish the tabulated account of the game owing to the humiliation it might cause some of the boys. Try it again.

The base ball team went to Port Allegany on Saturday and defeated that team by a score of 10 to 4. Orvis Hemphill had his eye on the ball—out for four times up, had a home run, a two bagger, and a single, making three of the eight hits made by the Emporium team. Orvis is always there with the goods and is one of the best players on our team.

The National Flower.

Arrangements are being made by the Ladies' Society of Emmanuel church, for the production at an early date of a pleasing operetta, entitled "The National Flower." This operetta, which will be given under the direction of the author, Mr. John Sinclair, organist of Grace Church, Ridgway, is an adaptation of Sir Arthur Sullivan's "Trial by Jury." Various flowers, represented by classes of girls, compete for recognition as the national flower of America, their claims being heard before a jury of eighteen musical matrons. The parts of Uncle Sam, the oak, the onion, etc., require baritone and bass interpretation. Nearly one hundred voices will be required.

The proceeds will be devoted to the fund for the purchase of a new organ for Emmanuel.
