

STRANGE STORY OF DR. OLIVER HAUGH

Searcher for Mysterious Drug Haugh was considered an authority in the state of Ohio on the origin and Becomes Its First Victim.

SEEMS TO PROVE THEORY OF DOUBLE PERSONALITY ate a new era of science, a new order of thought, and a new race of beings.

women who saw a man leaving the spot where the mutilated body of Lulu Mueller was found described him as stooping, gray haired, shaking as if palsied and with a glaze in his eye. This description fits Dr. Haugh, as he was on October 14, 1904, within a few days of the girls' death. On that date Mrs. Mary Johnson, an old friend of the Haugh family, refused him admission to her Cincinnati lodging house because of his drug eating habits. She especially noted his appearance.

The Cincinnati police are working on the theory that Haugh may have knowledge of the murder of these three girls.

W. C. Parish, a brakeman on the Baltimore & Ohio railway, was in Dr. Haugh's rooming house in Lorain the night of February 16, 1904. He became ill and Haugh gave him treat-ment. Then he began growing worse and was taken to the hospital, where he died.

"I gave him medicine," Haugh explained when an ambulance called for him. "But it doesn't seem to have done any good." The physicians thought Parish was suffering with pneumonia and made no investigation.

Dr. Haugh advocated the painless killing of all aged and infirm people and those suffering from incurable diseases while he operated in Hamilton, O.

composition of drugs, and about his laboratory there hung an air of mystery and fascination for the people of Dayton, for he boastfully declared:

"I am at work on the evolution of a drug, which in its perfection, will cre-I will bring into the reality of day something more wonderful than Stevenson in his wildest dreams ever imagined. I will prove that which he only suggested—the certainty that two beings can exist in the one body, the one blotting out the influence of the other.

In those days he had a pretty home on the outskirts of the town presided over by a comely, confiding little wom-an who was happy in the thought that her husband was on the verge of a great discovery which would some day startle the world of science.

The Unmasking.

But imperceptibly at first there A Long List of Victims. It is alleged by officers here that the ment than ordinarily would be wise or justifiable. Such is true in reference to the case involving Dr. Oliver Crook Haugh, confined in the jail here on the find-ing of the coroner, whose verdict father, Jacob Haugh; his mother, Mary Frances Haugh, and his broththe Dr. Haugh, whom his wife and the public had known, but the monster Mr. Hyde, which his drugs had cre-ated. Henceforth he was to be under the power and control of that other self, that evil personality, which had been created and fed by the drug he had been experimenting with, hyoscine hydrobromate

The Dark, Mysterious Chapter. And now begins the dark and myster! ons chapter in his career for which officers of the law are trying to find explanation in the long list of mur-ders laid at his door. And the long-limbed, loose-jointed, shambling figure sits in his narrow cell altern ly crying for the drug which has transformed his nature and brought him within the shadow of the gallows. and cursing the officers who have placed him behind the bars. He seems indifferent, nay, rather fiendishly glee-ful, over his plight, and in talking about the crimes charged against him, says "They say that I murdered my father, my mother and brother with hyoscine for the sake of the money. Then they say that when I have taken enough of the hyoscine the man within me disappears, and Hyde is the power. It seems as though I must do something—destroy something. My only recourse is to get out into the My street-out into the open country-away from men and women, lest I murder them. It is possible for me to nothing of it. It is possible for me to have killed these people and know nothing of it. It is possible for me to have committed all the other murders of which they accuse me, and in my normal condition be in ignorance, for in my normal condition I am another man. All that I do know is, that if I die for these crimes, I shall have at least established the proof of the theory on which I have always insisted-that two beings, one of good, the other of evil, may exist in the same man, and in that respect at least I shall have rendered a distinct service
