A Lover of Pigs.

For many year's Lord Gardenstone was one of the characters of Edinburgh and as such received a plac. among the famous Kay's portraits. He was represented riding on an old horse, with a dog in front and a boy dressed in a kilt behind. A detailed account of the picture states that Kay por-trayed him as, what he really was, a very timid borseman, mounted on an old back, which he had selected for its want of spirit, preceded by his favorite dog Smash and followed by a highland boy, whose duty it was to take charge of the horse on arriving at parliament house. His eccentricity took the even stranger form of a strong affection for pigs. He became so much attached to one that he allowed it to share his bed, and when good feeding and rapid growth made it a rather cumbersome bedfellow it was still lodged in comfortable quarters in the apartment. During the daytime it followed him about like a dog. One morning a farmer had occasion to visit his lordship and, being shown into his bedrocm, stumbled upon some object. That object gave vent to an uncompromising grunt and squeal of complaint, and from the bed there proceeded a voice, "It is just a bit sow, poor beast, and I laid my breeches on it to keep it warm all night."-Dundee Advertiser.

Enting Ants For Dessert.

Savages, we know, indulge in such luxuries as grubs and locusts, but for a civilized white man to finish up his dinner with a dish of raw ants seems too nasty to be credible. Yet in Mexico it is the custom—and a custom adopted by plenty of colonials and visitors. The ant eaten is called the honey ant and is perhaps as curious an insect as lives. With a tiny head and legs, it has a huge body as big as a large pea, and this is yellew and swollen with excel lent honey. In each nest there are 300 or 400 of these honey ants, which are attended by thousands of others. The honey ants hang on to the roofs of the cells in the nest while the others feed them. They are, in fact, living storehouses of winter food. An observer says that if one of the honey ants falls from his perch a worker will go and pick him up and replace him. This feat is equivalent to a man walking up the face of a cliff carrying a large buffalo or cart horse on his back.
