A young man, by the name of Hartman, went to the Williamsport hospital from this place to-day. He is suffering with appendicitis.

FIRST FORK.

I enclose a picture of the Alma Beet Sugar factory at Alma, Mich., an extensive plant which cost $650,000 the capacity of the plant being 500 bbls of granulated sugar per day.

The grinding or pulping capacity is 760 tons, in same length of time. The storage sheds at left of picture are 500 feet long, with a chance for four rows of teams, and a train of cars the length of the sheds to unload at one time.

The capacity of the sheds is several thousand tons, and were about full when I was there.

The beets are carried from the sheds to the factory in water sluices where they are taken up by an automatic auger and carried to the washing tanks, where they are thoroughly cleansed before going to the pulping machines.

After the juice has been pressed from the pulp it goes through a chemical process, which is the secret of the sugar maker. The refuse pulp goes to the drying room where it is dried and put up in 100 lb. sacks and sold for feed for cattle and hogs at $1.00 per hundred.

The raising of the sugar beet is the principal industry in Gratiot and Montcalm counties. Good sugar beet land in the vicinity of the factory is worth $100 an acre, and the company are paying that figure for all the beet land they can get near by.

There is another sugar factory at St. Louis, Mich., three miles from Alma, of about the same capacity. Both factories have weighing stations at the small railroad stations in the sugar beet district, where the beets are weighed and tare taken out for dirt, etc., and then shipped on cars to the factories. There are said to be sixteen beet sugar factories in the state and more building.

A good crop of beets is from 10 to 20 tons per acre, though some acres do better than that. The farmer gets $5 a ton for beets and if he sells them by the sugar test at the factory, and they test over 12 per cent. he gets more according to the test.

On Oct. 21st, I drove by an 80 acre field of beets owned by a man by the name of Angell and they had just begun pulling and topping that day. These beets were tended by a party of Bohemian beet raisers from the old country, but when the cold snap came they all "skiddooed" to a warmer climate.

A party of hunters consisting of C. E. Logue, Chas. Council, Fred Caldwell of this place and Wm. Darbyshire, of Austin, got Fred Williams and his two tents and are camping on the head of Muley Run. They captured a large buck on Friday, and are having a jolly good time.

Pap Berfield an old veteran hunter got the fever last week and brushed up his old muzzle loader, disdaining to use one of the new fangled Winchester, started out Saturday with his grand-son to help bring in the game, charging the lad not to shoot until he had the first shot.

The lad showed the old vet a couple of fine deer standing feeding and waited patiently for the old gent to shoot, but Pap pulled the wrong trigger and the old gun failed to go off and in the mess walked off and Pap came home without any venison.

James Mead had a close call while hunting last Thursday. A deer came up to him and as he was getting ready to shoot, it kicked sand in his eyes and gave Jim the slip.

E. H. Fry had a very close call while standing on his watch; he had to get out of the way of a big deer to keep it from jumping on him.

Jas Council reports seeing a deer's bed in the snow, 14 feet long, with tracks as big as a cabbage leaf.

John Jordan and Wm. Logue were down last week to take a hunt, but after getting into the woods, there was so much shooting and so many bullets in the air they left for Huntley the next day.

V. A. Brooks and party left for a hunt at Lincoln farm Tuesday.

The Independent seems to have a hard time getting down that pill of Nov. 6th. DERSE.

FOUR MILE.

"The harvest is past and the summer is ended" and we the citizens of Four Mile, are comparatively or reasonably happy. No death or alarming sickness has invaded our peaceful valley during the past year.

Our crops have been plentiful and already the plowman is in the field, preparing the soil for another season.

We are favored with religious services every alternate Wednesday evening. Have a very excellent preacher, the Rev. E. E. Sponsler of the M. E. Church at Keating Summit. A good pastor too, who visits all the people regardless of creed and last but not least, "Old Glory" floats proudly over our school house every pleasant day.

The event of the season was the box social last Saturday evening, at the school house. The entertainment was furnished by the children and much credit is due our teacher for her part in the work.

A nice sum was realized from the sale of the boxes, although there was great scarcity of bidders on the handsomely decorated and well filled boxes that were auctioned off by Wm. Bell, but they were sold, every one of them, (thanks to a few young men from abroad) and their contents of fruit, cake, sandwiches and other good things diminished like snow drifts in the sun.

Mrs. Lizzie Shearer of near Lock Haven is visiting her mother, Mrs. Al Ramus.

J. B. Davy, who has been working in the Olean yard, came over to Four Mile on Monday to make his parents a short visit, and move his household goods to that place.

Mrs. Lane and daughter Miss Avis spent Saturday and Sunday in our neighborhood and attended Sunday school.

Andrew Jenks, who has been farming in the state of New York for several years has returned to Cameron county and will manage the farm of L. K. Huntington at Cameron again. Mrs. Jenks and children are spending a few days with Geo. Minard and family.

The crossing of Four Mile stream near N. P. Minard's is a dangerous affair, as every one knows who travels the road. We hope to have a new bridge there P. D. Q. and save accident and cost.
