Determing a Rhineceres. A rhineceres which lived by the Lon-don zoo was troubled by its horn. which grew down in front of its mouth so that only with difficulty could it eat or drink. To save its life the keeper decided on amputation. The horn of a rhinoceros is not a horn at all, but an accumulation of hair and skin which has hardened and become cemented together by some gummy substance. The owner of this one had a very touchy temper and was not easily approached. Its keeper, however, decided to try what he could do. For some days it required all his skill to persuade the beast to come to the front of the cage and put its horn through. Then for some days he stroked the horn, much to the animal's disgust at first, although later it seemed to like it. When it found he meant no harm it let him take the horn in his left hand and then with the right imitate the motion of a saw across it. When this had been done some time and the rflinoceros no longer minded it, a plece of wood was held in the right hand, and at last, when even this no longer worried the animal, a real saw was brought in and the horn cut off without the slightest remonstrance from the owner of it.

Outcome Always Same.

A Philadelphian was praising for his learning and uprightness the late Judge M. Russell Thayer. He quoted the moving passage from Judge Thayer's will, "Owing to the fact that almost my entire life has been passed in the public service of the United States and of the state of Pennsylvania, I have but a small estate to leave to my dear children and wife." "Judge Thayer," he continued, "was a very honorable man. First as a lawyer, afterward as a judge, he treated all with whom he had dealings with the greatest fairness. Once, years ago, after he had served me well in a dif-ficult case, I remonstrated with him about the smallness of his fee. "'Well,' he said, smiling and smelling the flower in his buttonhole, 'I, you know, am not that type of lawyer whose client once said: ""I never was entirely ruined but twice-once when I lost a lawsuit and once when I gained one."""-Washington Star.

A Terrible Punishment.

A man suspected of treason in Mo-rocco was punished by having the flesh of his hand sliced, the wound filed with salt and the whole hand sewed up in leather. It is a common belief that this punishment causes mortification to set in and that the hand decomposes, but such is not the case, for by the time the leather wears off the hand is healed, the result being that the hand is rendered useless and remains closed forever. It is a punishment not often in use, but is some times done in cases of murder or con-stant theft, as, without in any way in-juring the health of the man, it prevents his committing the crime a sec as the case may be. It is a pulsh-ment that cannot be applied except by the sultan's orders.—Blackwood's Magazine.

A Fairly Eig Fish. Paddy had been telling the story of a big pike he caught, too big to get into the boat, so that he had to be towed behind (with the gaff in it, it must be understood). Then followed this dia-logue: "What weight, Paddy?" "Divvil a know I know, but he was an ojøus baste." "Was that the biggest you ever saw, Paddy?" Then Paddy gave a description of the biggest he ever saw. "What weight, Paddy?" "Sorra a bit I know. He was a terror "How big, Paddy?" "Sure, I can't to "Sure, I can't tell to a foot or two, but a man could walk down his throat." On this incredulity but Paddy "clinched the matter and silenced all controversy" by adding, "Wid his hat on."—Angler's Evenings.

A Dying Glass. In the glass collection at the Museum of Art in Dresden, Germany, there is a large drinking cup which stands apart from all other art objects under a heavy glass cover. It is of Dutch workmanship, and the inscriptions and style show that it was made early in the eighteenth century. The vessel is remarkable because it is known in the museum, says a Berlin paper, "as hav-ing consumption which can be com-mulated to other the communicated to other objects of glass On that account it is isolated. There County Supt., Mattie Collins, visited are remedies against this glass disease which is usually developed because of defects in the glass mixture, but these have not been applied to the Dutch vessel in order that the progress of the wasting disease may be observed.

A Big Calculation In Water.

A Big Calculation in water. The ocean, sea and lake surface of our planet is estimated at something like 145,000,000 square miles, with an average depth of 12,000 feet, and is calculated to contain not less than 3,270,600,000,000,000 tons of water. The rivers of the earth are estimated to have a flow sufficient to cover thirty-six cubic miles of the above area each day. Now, if all the oceans were suddenly dried and the rivers could keep up their present rate of flow, which, of course, they could not with-out ocean evaporation, it would take 3,500 years to refill the basin.

Bread, however, does contain some; hence it balances up well when combined with sugar. In times of scarcity of food bread and molasses is not a half bad diet-at least it can be relied on to keep the body up to a fair state of efficiency.

Women as Walkers.

Even the athletic girls and women of today can hardly make any ad-vance upon the record of Mary Lamb, who wrote to Miss Wordsworth (both women being between fifty and sixty years old): "You say you can walk fifteen miles with ease. That is ex-actly my stint." She then speaks pityingly of a delicate woman who could accomplish "only four or five miles ev-ery third or fourth day, keeping very quiet between.'
