The Origin of a Great Invention.

On one of the daily trips of young Westinghouse from Schenectady to the foundry at Troy his train was held up by a bad wreck. Two freights had come together in a head-on collision on a piece of straight track. The engineers had seen the danger plainly, but by the time the hand brakes were brought into play it was too late. The young man allowed these facts to sink into his mind. Then he said to one of the train hands:

"If the engineers had been able to control their trains from the cabs, the wreck could have been prevented, couldn't it?"

"Control 'em how?"

"Brake them."

"Yes. They had lots of time."

That was enough. The air brake was conceived. Amid the piled up wreckage the thing that was to make the name of Westinghouse familiar to every schoolboy the world over was called into being. It did not come in its perfected form, but the idea itself had germinated.—Paul Latzke in Everybody's.

A Fight In the Air.

W. E. Webb, the author of "Buffalo Land," tells this cat story:

The chicken hawk of the west is a savage and dangerous enemy, but once one of these air pirates got worsted. I was sitting in front of the doctor's office when a hawk shot down with wonderful rapidity of wing—so fast that its shadow seemed hardly to reach the earth before its body. It pounced upon the doctor's favorite kitten, which lay asleep on the grass, and made off with it. At an elevation of about fifty feet puss recovered from its surprise and went to work for liberty. Its refined mind was exercised to astonishment and wrath. Twisting like a wasp, its claws came uppermost, and to my straining gaze a sight presented itself much like a feather bed being ripped open in midair. The amazed hawk received new light on the subject of prey, let go and made off like a badly plucked goose, but the cat came safely to earth—on its feet.

The Onion Dodge.

"Incredible as it may seem," said the detective, "there are many shoplifters who steal by the agency of the onion. These men, before setting out upon their contemplated crimes, eat of raw onions abundantly. Then they stroll into the silversmith's or the haberdasher's or the jeweler's that they propose to rob."

"Show me those large solitaires surrounded with pigeon blood rubies, please," says the jewel thief.

"The clerk brings forth the tray of gems and, bending over it, the thief sighs with admiration. His face close to the clerk's, he sighs again. And the clerk's nostrils quiver, and he turns away his head. The inspection of the diamonds continues for some minutes. Throughout it the thief keeps breathing hard, the clerk keeps turning his head away, and hence it is no wonder, at the day's end, that a couple of costly rings are missing."—New York Press.

Imitation of Ebony.

There are two processes, says the Carriage Monthly, in use in the imitation of ebony. Take a fine grained piece of wood, use French black polish, made black with fine coloring matter, or good air drying black varnish may be applied. This, however, gives only a superficial coloring, and when the edges wear off the light colored wood shows. The other method is to wash three or four times any dense wood with a boiling concoction of logwood, allowing it to dry between each application. Then wash with a solution of acetate of iron, which is made by dissolving iron filings in vinegar. This stain is very black and penetrates into the wood so that ordinary wear and chipping will not show the original color.
