WASHINGTON LETTER.

of the Navy Department and talk among naval officers is helping? to clear it up and show, that it has at the bottom the same element that is back of most crimes in human life, the gold hunger.

It will be remembered that the explosion occurred in the after turret of the Georgia off Boston during target practice. According to the official statement, a charge of about 200 pounds of smokeless powder was being loaded into one of the 12 inch guns when it exploded. It was said that a floating spark, coming from somewhere, had set fire to the bag containging one of the powder charges, and that this had gone off, setting fire to the other bag. Here was a mystery. It was intimated that the floating spark might have come from the smoksstack of thians of high caste wore long, flowing the battleship or that it might have hair, while the poorer classes were been a spark wandering around in the air after discharge of the gun. This explanation was good enough for the outside world. But those familiar with the construction of warships know that it was almost a physical impossibility for a spark to "float" into a turret, The automatic gun ports and inside ladders were all against such a supposition. Also, the silk bags in which the powder charge is "encased are not flimsy enough to be set on fire by any ordinary spark. The fact remained that ten of ion of all others, and on which they must render monthly reports. Of course, the Commission want expert railroad accountants to check these reports. These clerkships pay about $1,500 a year. PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY Not a princely salary, but still pretty good for the government service. The only trouble is that the men who are capable of filling the places are mostly in the employ of the railroads already. If they take the examination they are pretty certain to be fired for doing it by the railroads employing them. Of course, they might take the examination and not get the job. So most of them are figuring that the risk is not equal to the chance and there is a fear that there will not be many eligibles to qualify.

Long Live the King.

Is the popular cry throughout Europ-can countries; while in American, the cry of the present day is "Long live Dr. King's New Discovery, King of Throat and Lung Remedies!" of which Mrs. Julia Rede Bries The Merice Merice Merice Country of the State Ryder Paine, Truro, Mass., says: "It never fails to give immediate relief and to quickly cure a cough or cold." Mrs. Paine's opinion is shared by a majority of the inhabitants of this country. Long Hair a Mark or rong. In olden times excessively long hair was considered a mark of honor and rank. For many centuries long hair was in France the distinctive mark of kings. The ancient Persians and Parobliged to cut theirs short. Homer speaks of the long haired Greeks by way of distinction. The Gauls considered long hair mark of honor, but Caesar obliged them to cut it off in token of submission. Long hair was thought by the Franks to denote high birth, and the Goths looked upon it as a distinctive mark of culture and honor. Short hair was considered by nearly all the old nations to denote thraidom, and even now criminals have their heads shaved. -Denver Times.

Umbrellas In Battle,

It is conceivable that the officers of cellington's day thought him a terri-le old bully. He actually forbade abrellas in battle! He expected then not only to expose and sacrifice their lives at the word of command, but ac-tually to risk the tarnishing of their beautiful uniforms in the rain which fell during a battle near Bayonne. He saw the Grenadiers sheltering under a forest of umbrellas and sent off Lord If ill with this message: "Lord Welling ton does not approve of the use of um brellas during the enemy's firing and will not allow the 'Gentlemen's Sons will not allow the 'Gentlemen's Sons' to make themselves ridiculous in the eyes of the army." After the battle Colonel Tynling was reprimanded by the duke for permitting the offense. Said the great man, "The guards in uniform may, when on duty at St. James', carry unbrellas if they please, but in the field it is not embradlements but in the field it is not only ridiculous but unmilitary." Let it not be forgot-ten, however, that the delinquents, dandies though they were, proved themselves among the bravest when fighting was going on.-St. James' Gazette.

What a Hatpin Revealed.

A certain large millinery establish-ment makes a specialty of women's trimmed hats at $5 and $10. It is cutting largely into the trade of the small er high priced dealers. A short time ago a woman of fashion went into the establishment mentioned and tried on several hats, but found none to suit her. Before going out she missed a her. valuable hatpin. A careful search failed to bring it to light, and its disappearance remained a mystery. A few days later the customer, still look-ing for a suitable hat, visited one of the expensive millinery shops in the city. Among the hats shown to her, one of which was priced lower than 5, was one that closely resembled $35, one of the hats she had tried on in the ten dollar store. She took it up to ex-amine it more closely. As she felt the trimming she noticed that the end of a hatpin was concealed beneath a bunch of artificial flowers. Drawing it out, she discovered it to be her missing hatpin .- New York Tribune.

Lions and Fowl. "There is a peculiar thing about lions," said a hunter who has trapped big game in Africa for menageries. "They will not eat the flesh of a fowl. You might tempt them with canvas back duck or the daintiest squab, but they would refuse it. I remember once having a swan which had broken Its wing. We killed it, dressed it care-fully and threw it into the cage of the lions, but they would not touch it, and it finally had to be taken out and thrown away. I have repeatedly put plgeons alive into the cage just to see what they would do. I have thrown grain down among the lions and the pigeons have actually got down and hopped around the big brutes, even hopping on their backs, the lions making no attempt to disturb them, even seeming to enjoy their companionship. There is something rather strange about this which it is difficult to explain.'

It Was Still There.

The story is told of a clergyman, who, after he had finished his sermon, heard one of his congregation say, "Yes it was a good sermon, but he

the men in the turret died of their burns and a dozen others were so seriously injured that several more of them still may die. The Department was of course shocked and grieved. So was everyone happened. All of the electric apparatus in the turret had been carefully insulated in view of some previous accidents of the same sort. All of the guns had been fitted with automatic air blasts to j prevent "flare backs", that is hot gases coming out of the breech of the gun when another charge was being put in. And most of all, there was never according to regulations a second charge of powder in the turret before the one in the gun had been fired. There] are automatic doors leading down to the powder magazine that are shut as soon as one charge for the gun comes up and the turret is clear of any power except that in the gun.

There are a good many fair sized jobs that will probably go begging for the lack of competent men to fill them. The Interstate Commerce Commission is about to start its new system of railroad accounting. The Commission has[furnish-ed the railroads with sets of books ed the railroads with sets of books

No matter how unsatisfactory his voyage, this nautical man always returned with an endless string of pre-posterous tales of great deeds and success. Art and Happiness.

Artists are not as a class the happi-est of mortals, but that is because they fail to relate the ideal rationally to life rather than because they are ed to standards of perfection. Unhappiness comes upon them as it would upon any one else-in consequence of folly and indifference and willfulness-and their devotion to art, which is often held to be the cause of their mis-fortunes, is in reality the only mitigating factor in their lives .-- Bliss Carman in Craftsman.

short time afterward the preacher called on the man, resented the accusation and asked him to retract what he had said.

"I am not," answered the man, "like-ly to take back anything that I have said, but in this case I will, for on re-turning home and referring to the book whence I thought you had taken your sermon, I found that it was still there." -St. Louis Republic.
