BLUE BELL.

FIRST FORK.

The first snow storm of the season came on Sunday afternoon, and it looked pretty bad to those who hadn't got their winter's fire wood up yet.

Clarence E. Logue captured the first bear of the season, for this section, on Friday. Caught him in a trap in Logue Run. He was probably a two year old, but was good for $20 in U. S. money.

The jury men from this part of the county all got home safe and only a few of them had been in jail.

Tony Mancuso and his gang of section men, among whom were Mac. Logue and Ralph Swank, came near going to "Kingdom Come" on Thursday morning. They pulled out on their hand car right behind the morning passenger train and did not notice a fast freight following until it was almost on them. They only had time to jump, and the hand car was struck, and badly smashed, as well as their dinner buckets, etc.

Chas. Counsel, of Sinnamahoning, came up on Saturday and took a "snap shot" at the bear, and stayed over Sunday, intending to go out and take a shot at one in his native wilds.

The bears have sprung Fred Caldwell's trap several times, but he hasn't caught any yet.

In my last communication you made me say, the "hot weather had hindered fall seeding." We did not see the hot weather, but wrote about "wet weather" which we had in plenty.

Howard Moat, of Driptwood, was visiting his sister, Mrs. Jesse Logue, over Sunday.

M. J. Logue is getting shingles sawed at Brownlee's mill at Costello to shingle his house.

Our schools are closed this week on account of Institute.

PRIZE ESSAY.

The Settlement of Jamestown and the Thirteen Original Colonies.

Jamestown, the first English town permanently settled in the New World, was founded in 1607. There the first American Legislative Assembly met in 1619. Negro slaves were introduced the same year. The cultivation of tobacco built up commerce and largely increased the population but did not favor the growth of towns.

Now let us inquire something about the character of the men who planted this settlement. They were men poorly adapted to endure the hardships of life in a new country. The settlers—about one hundred in number—were mostly men of gentle birth, unused to labor. They had no families and came here in search of wealth and adventure. The climate was unhealthy and before the first autumn, half their number including Gosnold, their leader, had perished. Then came romantic John Smith, and saved the colony from ruin. He taught the men how to swing an ax, and declared that those who would not work must not eat. He taught them that industry and self-reliance are the surest guarantees to fortune. Many interesting things are told of John Smith in connection with Jamestown. To tell of all these would fill a large book. History loves to tell us that one time he was captured by the Indians and only saved from death by the pleadings of a brave little Indian girl named Pocahontas.

This girl afterward did much for the colony and was later married to one of the colonists, John Rolfe. Many of the leading families of Virginia have been proud to say that the blood of Pocahontas coursed through their veins. If you were to take a trip up the James river now all you would see of the settlement of Jamestown would be the ruins of the old church. The crumbling tower, with the arched doorways, is almost hidden by the scrubbery which surrounds it. And this with a few weather beaten tombstones is all that remains of the first permanent English settlement in America.

Henry Hudson in 1609, sailed up the river which bears his name. He was an Englishman but was sailing under the Dutch flag, so the Dutch took possession of the country and called it New Netherlands. On Manhattan Island they founded the city of New Amsterdam. England and France were both jealous of the colony, and in 1664 England took possession of it and named it New York in honor of James Duke of York.

The Dutch first claimed possession of what is now New Jersey. The English Duke of York seized the country and gave it to two of his friends, Lord Berkley, and Sir George Carteret, naming the province from the British Isle of Jersey. A company then bought the land, granting to the settlers most of the privileges of self-government. In 1702 the Quaker proprietors surrendered their rights to the English and New Jersey became a royal colony until the Revolution.

Leaving these settlements in the south let us go up the coast as far as Cape Cod Bay. Here on a stormy day in Autumn 1620 a band of Pilgrims landed. The little band of one hundred and two, men, women and children had come over in the Mayflower, in search of a place where they could worship God as they pleased. They were rugged, hearty class of people well suited this wild country they had come to subdue. Nevertheless they suffered much during that first winter and half of the little band perished either from cold or starvation. Yet when spring comes and the Mayflower is ready to sail for England not one of the Pilgrims thinks of returning with her. They were rewarded for their perseverance and hard work for they left us a colony, which in after years became one of the noblest states of this grand Republic, Massachusetts. Massachusetts was first of the colonies in which her people assembled in town-meeting and established government for the people and public schools for the children.

New Hampshire originally formed part of the Maine or the Mainland, English colonists settled Dover and Portsmouth. Emigrants from Massachusetts and Scotch-Irish later founded the towns of Exeter and Londonderry. The Scotch-Irish set up the manufacture of linen.

Connecticut was settled chiefly by emigrants from Eastern Massachusetts and from England. It was the first colony in America to establish a written constitution of government—one which gave the right of voting to every citizen.

The colony of Maryland was planted by Lord Baltimore an English Catholic. He was the first in America to establish freedom of worship for all Christians. The peace of the colony was broken by a civil war, and some of Lord Baltimore's enemies withdrew the government and forbade the exercise of Catholic religion. Lord Baltimore succeeded after a time in regaining his power and again granted freedom of worship.

Rhode Island was bought by Roger Williams and his friends from the Indians for forty fathoms of white wampum, twenty hoes and ten coats. Roger Williams was an exiled minister from Massachusetts. He was the first to establish entire religious freedom in this country. This principle now forms a part of our Constitution.

Delaware, settled by the Swedes as New Sweden, was taken by the Dutch and later by the English, who sold it to William Penn. He governed it as a part of Pennsylvania. When it became independent it took the name of Delaware. After the revolution it was the first state to adopt the constitution of the United States.

Carolina, which was later divided into North and South Carolina, was settled by emigrants from Virginia, by English and also Hugonots or French Protestants. North Carolina engaged in the manufacture of tar pitch and turpentine; South Carolina began the culture of rice and indigo, both of which proved very profitable.

William Penn founded the colony of Pennsylvania, which was named after his father. He gave the people the right to take part in making the laws, and all persons believing in God were protected in their religion. He made a treaty of peace with the Indians which was sacredly kept.

Georgia, the last of the thirteen colonies, and the richest in its natural advantages was settled by English emigrants brought over by General Oglethorpe, as a work of charity. Slavery and the importation of spirit-liquors was at first forbidden but later both were allowed.
