The Square Deal.

Closely following upon the disappearance of the premium on currency, with last Saturday's banking statement the deficiency in reserves of the New York banks vanished and in its place was found a surplus over the statutory requirements aggregating about six millions of dollars. As all eyes have been fixed upon the condition of the New York banks since the beginning of the present difficulties, this return to normal conditions on their part may be said to end the acute phase of the great disturbance of 1907. From now on, according to all indications now before us, mercantile and industrial conditions should redress themselves until the business ship once more floats upon an even keel.

While we may, as a nation, congratulate ourselves upon the comparatively brief duration of a situation which for a short time seemed to threaten grave results, it must be admitted that this episode of dislocation and retardation has been a most expensive one to the country, and one of which it should be the wish and desire of every patriotic American to prevent the repetition, if possible.

All schools of financial and economic doctors are still diagnosing the case and are already prepared, or soon will be, to tell us exactly what our trouble was and exactly what the remedy should be. Without doubt many of these commentators will give us important facts and will propose preventive measures which would be useful if adopted, but as yet none, so far as our observation goes, has reached the actual bottom of the trouble.

In the midst of so much diversity of view, it may not be amiss for the Dry Goods Economist to express its opinion that in tracing back any phase of this recent disturbance candid investigators will finally meet at its real starting point, viz., the lack of a Square Deal. As a rule, people in times like these wish to hear some high-sounding name given to their disorder and to learn of some novel and brilliant discovery, the finding and application of which is going to set everything right. They do not like to be told that the remedy which the case mainly calls for is the observance in their affairs of the ten commandments and the golden rule. Without doubt this country needs a new banking system and probably some modification of currency laws, but no legislation on this subject, however wise, can take the place of the Square Deal. The Square Deal is the only safe foundation stone for credit to rest upon. Without that under it, credit may fall at a breath.

To change the metaphor: The business of the country is equipped for locomotion something like a kangaroo, which has a pair of short, weak fore-legs, which amount to little, and a long, powerful pair of hind legs, by means of which it does most of its moving. The fore-legs of our business kangaroo are its currency, and the hind-legs its credit. For nearly two months, ending with the recent holidays, these hind-legs were almost paralyzed and a lot of the doctors were trying to remedy the catastrophe which had brought the animal to a standstill by seeking to lengthen out by a half-inch or so, the little fore-legs with which there was nothing the matter. The country's agricultural wealth is so great that all the currency in the land would not pay for one-half the crops of 1907. All the currency in the country amounts to less than one-third of the deposits in the banks. It was not reasonable, therefore, to expect remedial results from the addition of a hundred million or so to a currency as good as gold and already sufficient, if not abundant, for all ordinary uses. The failure of the situation to our enormous imports of gold showed that it was not lack of money, but prostration of credit which was holding us down.

Credit, then, which handles ninety per cent. of our transactions, is the vital instrument, the sine qua non of business, without which the growth and prosperity of a nation cannot exist, and the country's credit, to be impregnable, must rest upon the Square Deal. We have over-traded, it is true; we have speculated too much in stocks and real estate, as well as in commodities; we have pushed business to and beyond the limits of our present equipment for transporting and exchanging goods. All these features required correction, but none of them, nor all of them together, is sufficient to have produced the phenomenon we have recently witnessed, and which was the culmination of popular distrust caused by a knowledge of the lack of the Square Deal in high places—in financial institutions, in railroad management, in insurance companies, in great corporations, in legislative bodies and administration. At the first alarm people took fright and that fright showed by its violence and its rapid spread the unsoundness of the conditions which caused it.

There is much more to be said on this subject. We shall probably say some of it later. And we again urge upon the Economist League, who are the men of light and leading in every community, to spread as they also practice the Square Deal, and to enforce it upon all the institutions with which they have business as the best remedy and preventive for such costly experiences as those through which we are now going.—New York Dry Goods Economist.

New Newspaper Law.

We desire to thank the many considerate subscribers who promptly came to our aid by complying with the new postal law, thereby enabling us to get our subscription list in shape to pass postal inspection. Of course there are a few, who never calculated to pay, put up a howl. Again some are actually not able to pay, unfortunately. The dead beat few we will get rid of—and they are few. We trust our subscribers will aid us to comply promptly with the law.

Thanking kindly, our numerous subscribers who have grasped the situation and promptly aided us in this matter. We hope to get all righted in due time to meet the demands of the Post Master General. Please be prompt.

Fence Posts Made Durable.

Fence posts of many kinds of cheap woods which ordinarily would soon decay if set in the ground can be made to last for twenty years by a simple treatment with creosote. Most of the so-called "interior" woods are well adapted to the treatment, and this is especially true of cottonwood, aspen, willow, sycamore, low grade pines, and some of the gums. When properly treated, these woods outlast untreated cedar and oak, which are becoming too scarce and too much in demand for other uses to allow of their meeting the demand for fence posts.

Impregnation with creosote has been greatly cheapened by the introduction of the "open tank," which can be installed at a cost of from $30 to $45, or for much less if an old boiler is used. A tank with a bottom 12 square feet in area will suffice for treating 40 or 50 6-inch posts a day, or double this number when two runs per day can be made. The absorption of creosote per post is about as follows: Eucalyptus, one-tenth gallon; willow, two tenths gallon; sassafras, ash, hickory, red oak, water oak, elm and maple, four-tenths gallon; Douglas fir, quaking aspen, and black walnut, six-tenths gallon; sycamore, cottonwood, and lodgepole pine, seven-tenths gallon. The price of creosote is about 10 cents per gallon in the East and Middle West, 16 cents per gallon on the Pacific coast and 27 cents per gallon in the Rocky Mountain States. The cost of treating a post will therefore vary from 4 to 15 cents. Properly treated it should give service for at least twenty years.

Experiments of the Forest Service show that with preservative treatment the durability of lodgepole pine in Idaho is increased sixteen years. The cost of creosote is there relatively high, yet by treating posts there is a saving, with interest at 6 per cent. of 2 cents per post yearly. More important than the saving, however, is the fact that through preservative treatment other woods are fitted to take the place of cedar, of which the supply is rapidly becoming exhausted. A detailed description of experiments in preserving fence posts, together with practical suggestions for treating them on a commercial scale, are contained in Circular 117 of the Forest Service. This publication can be obtained upon application to the Forester at Washington.

O'Dell Guilty of Murder as Indicted.

At the hour of going to press last Friday the jury was locked up deliberating on the evidence in the case. At 11:19 p. m., Friday night the ringing of the court house bell notified the court that a verdict had been arrived at. Immediately crowds of men and women hurried to the court room to hear the verdict. At 11:30 the jurors, in charge of the constables, filed into court and took their seats, when the prisoner was brought to the bar. A death-like silence prevailed while the Court put the usual question, "Is the prisoner guilty or not guilty?" Foreman, Geo. Darren, in a distinct voice replied "Guilty as indicted." The prisoner was visibly agitated and leaned over on the table. Court at once adjourned until 10:30 a. m., Saturday to hear the argument for a new trial. At the appointed hour the Court listened to the argument made by the counsel for the condemned, when the motion for a new trial was refused. The prisoner was then sentenced to "be hanged by the neck until dead." The prisoner was remanded to the jail to await the action of the Governor, who fixes the date for execution. Death watch Albert Murry, who has been on duty ever since the crime was committed, resumed his duty.

Thus closed the second murder trial in the history of this county, but the first conviction. The first degree verdict was a surprise to many, yet the evidence produced was of such a nature that the jurors could not do other than convict.

We understand it is possible that an application will be made to the Board of Pardons to commute the sentence to life imprisonment.

Since the trial O'Dell repeats the evidence he gave on the stand that he has no recollection of committing the crime. He finds no fault with jurors or court. The wonderful nerve of the prisoner, under the circumstances, is remarkable.

Married on Jan. 2nd.

Thursday evening, January 2, at 7:30 Miss Marie Meyers, of Kawkawlin, and John P. Dodge, of Emporium, Pa., were united in marriage by Rev. Henry, of Bay City. After the ceremony a wedding supper was served at the home of the bride's sister Mrs. Max Schwelberg, Kawkawlin. Mr. and Mrs. Dodge left Friday morning for Toledo, Ohio, where they will reside.—Bay City (Mich.) Times.

This is somewhat of a surprise to John's many friends here and it now becomes evident what his great attraction in the western country was. The PRESS extends congratulations to Mr. Mrs. Dodge and wishes them a prosperous future.

How many men are in the habit of concealing some of their actions from their wives, and how often do we hear the expression "Don't tell my wife." The successful farce comedy "Don't Tell My Wife" is constructed on this weakness of mankind. While it is a farce comedy and deals with the humorous side of the question it still teaches a wholesome moral lesson. One small lie told in the beginning leads up to the endless complications and laughable situations. "Don't Tell My Wife" will be presented at the Opera House next Saturday, matinee and evening, January 25.

Hurd, the Magician.

When we see Hurd in his marvelous exhibition, we ask ourselves if it is possible that the great Herman has really passed away, or if his spirit is still with us, for surely his mantle has fallen on worthy shoulders in the person of Hurd, as never in Herman's palmist days was he a greater magician than is Hurd to-day. At the opera house, Tuesday, Jan. 28.

Pringle Will Case Has Been Settled.

"The Pringle will case was settled at Towanda this afternoon. By the terms of the settlement Dr. and Mrs. E. R. Kline the heirs by will are to receive $55,000 out of which they are to pay the costs of their own witnesses. The heirs of the late Samuel Pringle by blood are to receive $15,000, are to pay the costs of their own witnesses and the court costs.

Mr. Pringle made his home with Dr. and Mrs. Kline during the last years of his life. After his death his will executed while a resident at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Kline was read which showed that he had failed to provide for his relatives and instead had given his property to the Klines. The relatives commenced a contest claiming that Mr. Pringle was of unsound mind when he made the will. The first contest was before Register and Recorder McCabe at Towanda, which resulted in Mr. McCabe admitting the will to probate. The second contest was commenced before Judge Cameron, of Tioga county, setting at Towanda during November. The trial came to a sudden termination by the jury being withdrawn because two jurors had indulged in oyster stews with L. T. Hoyt one of the attorneys. The final contest commenced at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, a jury was selected and it was expected that witnesses would be sworn to-day. But at 3 o'clock this afternoon a settlement was reached. As the relatives who live in Wilkes-Barre are to pay the court costs, which are large, the settlement reached to-day is a material victory for Dr. and Mrs. Kline.

We clip the above item from the Sayre, Pa., Daily Times-Record. The Doctor referred to in the will decision, is a brother of our respected friend and public spirited citizen, Mr. C. R. Kline, of Beechwood, this county. Naturally he is pleased with the favorable decision in his brother's behalf.

The First to Comply.

T. W. Snyder, deputy P. M., at Sinnamahoning believes in complying promptly with the law at all times. Not waiting to be notified of this office he read Uncle Samuel's new ruling relative to newspapers and promptly sent us a M. O., for an amount sufficient to pay for his PRESS well into 1909. That's better than compelling the printer to obey the ruling. Thanks friend.
