The Hundred Best Books.

"The fact is that there is no possibility of naming the hundred best books. The naming of them for any large general audience is quite impossible. All that is possible in such a connection is to state emphatically that there are very few books that are equally suitable to every kind of intellect." says Clement Shorter in his book of "Immortal Memories." "Temperament as well as intellectual endowment makes for so much in reading. Take, for example, the 'Imitation of Christ.' George Eliot, although not a Christian, found it soul satisfying. Thackeray, as I think a more robust intellect, found it well nigh as mischievous as did Eugene Sue. There are great books that can be read only by the few, but surely the very greatest appeal alike to the man of rich intellectual endowment and to the man to whom all processes of reasoning are incomprehensible."

Same, but More of It.

Sitting in a Broadway restaurant the other evening were two young women who had not met for four years. One of them had grown stout and the other had admitted that she wouldn't have recognized her old friend under ordinary circumstances. They sat silently looking at each other for a moment, when the heavyweight inquired: "What are you thinking about?" "I was just trying to see whether your expression is the same as it used to be," said her friend. "Just the same," the girl with the avoidpous declared. "Only more of it."—New York Globe.

An Irish Tale.

One day an Irishman, having put his hat upon a gate post by which he lay down to sleep, sprang up at midnight and, mistaking the object for an enemy, dealt it a desperate cut with his scythe. Perceiving his mistake, the man gave thanks to heaven that he had taken it off before lying down. "For," said he, "had my head been in that hat, 'tis ten to one I had laid it open with my scythe, and 'tis a dead man I would have been seen meself at this minute!"—London Captain.

Sour Stomach

No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, general debility, sour risings, and catarrh of the stomach are all due to indigestion. Kodol relieves indigestion. This new discovery represents the natural juices of digestion as they exist in a healthy stomach, combined with the greatest known tonic and reconstructive properties. Kodol for dyspepsia does not only relieve indigestion and dyspepsia, but this famous remedy helps all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying, sweetening and strengthening the mucous membranes lining the stomach. Mr. S. S. Ball, of Ravenswood, W. Va., says: "I was troubled with sour stomach for twenty years. Kodol cured me and we are now using it in milk for baby."

The Choice.

A young man stood before the mirror completing the finishing touches to a toilet of which he felt justly proud. He was going to call upon the girl's widowed mother to ask for her daughter's hand in marriage. At last everything was complete except his cravat. Before him on the dressing table spread the two cravats between which his choice rested, one, a neat black with a narrow white stripe, which he had bought himself; the other a cravat which the girl had given him for a present, a tie such as only women purchase. "If I wear the black and white one, I'll look my best," he mused. "On the other hand, if I wear the one she gave me I'll please her immensely, but will look like a fright." Then he whistled, walked around the room and carefully tied his cravat. The mother said, "Yes," although there were tears in her eyes, and the girl thought he was the handsomest and best dressed man in the world. Which cravat did he wear?—Bohemian Magazine.

In the Ghost Laying Business.

This advertisement appeared in London in 1777: "Haunted Houses.—Whereas there are mansions and castles in England and Wales which for many years have been uninhabited and are now falling into decay by their being haunted and visited by evil spirits or the spirits of those who for unknown reasons are rendered miserable even in the grave, a gentleman who has made the tour of Europe, of a particular turn of mind and deeply skilled in the abstruse and sacred science of exorcism, hereby offers his assistance to any owner or proprietor of such premises and undertakes to render the same free from the visitation of such spirits, be their cause what it may, and render them tenable and useful to the proprietors. Letters addressed to the Rev. John Jones, 20 St. Martin's lane, duly answered and interview given if required. N. B.—Rooms rendered habitable in six days."

Durability of Glass.

It does not seem odd to find inscriptions written ages ago still visible on the Tower of London or on the steeple of some cathedral, but one would hardly look on a fragile pane of glass in a common window for characters 200 years old. A notable case in point is that of the old house in London where lived the notorious Jack Sheppard once lived as a carpenter's apprentice. One of the window panes still bears an inscription cut in it by a glazier's diamond recording the name and address of a man who preceded Jack's master in that house. The inscription is: "John Woolley Brand, Painter and Glazier, March 12, 1706."

That was nine years before the coming to the house of the famous Jack Sheppard and over 200 years ago.

Alexander the Great's Escape.

As a young man Alexander the Great escaped death in a curious manner. A great banquet was being held at Pella, the capital of Macedonia, at which were present the future conqueror of the world and his father, Philip. During the feast one of the guests proposed a toast and prayer offensive to Alexander, who hurried a goblet at him. King Philip, angry at this outrage, started up, drew his sword and rushed furiously upon his son, but he had drunk so deeply that before he reached him he fell prostrate among the terrified merry-makers. Not a whit perturbed at this extraordinary escape from death, Alexander retorted, "Here is a man preparing to cross from Europe into Asia who yet cannot step surely from one couch to another."

London's First Pawnbroker.

No one would guess that "uncle" had so illustrious an ancestor as a right reverend prelate, yet this seems to be so, for pawnbroking was first introduced into England by Michael de Northburg, bishop of London, in Edward III's reign. He set up an establishment for lending money to the poorer Londoners on portable property, and, according to Dugdale, if any sum so borrowed was not paid at the expiration of a year the preacher at St. Paul's cross was to announce that the pledge would be sold in fourteen days unless it was previously redeemed.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Servant.

"Remember," said the patriot, "that so long as you hold public office you are a servant of the people, a plain servant."

"Great Scott!" answered the suburban resident who had just been elected. "Can I act as haughty and overbearing and take as many holidays as all that?"—Washington Star.

Hard.

"Pa, is it true that all men are made of dust?"

"I've had reason to think lately," replied the man who had been trying to get his notes extended, "that a good many of them are made of cement."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Women as Dramatists.

I have yet to see a woman's play in which the male characters shall seem real and vital. As portrayings of a sex not their own, men have a decided advantage over women.—Max Beerholm.

Partial Lapse.

"Did you cry, Ethel?" (Doubtfully) "N-no, ma'am." "Are you quite sure?" (With sudden illumination) "I booped, but I didn't hoo."—Puck.

Did He Refuse?

They were alone in the conservatory. He turned to her. His voice was low, but passionate.

"You know," he said, "why I have asked you to come here. Will you be my wife?"

She looked at him intently. "No," she answered, and she uttered the monosyllable as if she loved it.

No doubt she expected him to reel and clutch at something, but he did nothing of the sort.

"Very well," he briskly said. "That's all I want to know. Shall we go in and finish our dance?"

She stared at him in wonder. "Are—aren't you hurt by my refusal? Don't you intend to do something desperate?"

"Desperate? Certainly not—unless you call tackling the lobster salad desperate."

Her pride was sorely wounded. She had meant to hurt him. It would have been a proof of her power. Now she hungered for revenge. There was only one way to get even with him.

"George," she said, "I have reconsidered my decision. I will be your wife."

And the two scrawny rubber plants and the three yellow palms quivered with suppressed laughter.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Lace Dressers.

Lace dressing has been considered a necessarily unhealthy occupation on account of the intense heat required to be maintained in the room. In some cases the temperature exceeds 100 degrees F. and much moisture is evaporated from the wet fabric. The evidence brought forth at a recent investigation in England, however, shows it to be an exceedingly healthful pursuit. New workers are often temporarily upset at the beginning by the high temperature, but no cases could be found where health had broken down. On the contrary, some ailments—colds, for instance—were found less prevalent among lace dressers than among the workers in other branches of the industry. Time keepers' books showed few absences from illness. No special tendency toward lung diseases could be found, notwithstanding that most of the workers lived in poor and insanitary localities and led irregular lives. Many lace dressers now enjoy vigorous old age after doing this work from childhood.—Indianapolis News.

The Deaf and Dumb.

In early times it was an opinion, maintained even by philosophers, that the education of the deaf and dumb was impossible. It was then believed that language could be acquired only through the medium of the ear, as shown by the couplet of Lucretius: To instruct the deaf no art could ever reach, No care improve them and no wisdom teach.

The first mention of instruction for the deaf and dumb is found in Bede, A. D. 685. No other case is met with for some centuries. Rudolph Agricola of Heidelberg makes mention of an educated deaf mute in his "Dialectica," 1480. It was not until 1620 that instruction for the deaf and dumb began to be general.—New York American.

Frederick the Great.

Frederick William I, father of Frederick the Great, was a most brutal old fellow, treating his son almost as badly as they treat the exiles in Siberia. Unable to endure such barbarity on the part of his father, Frederick resolved to run away and seek refuge at the court of his uncle, George II. of England. Ready to assist him in his attempt were his two young friends, Lieutenants Katte and Keith. By the imprudence of Katte the secret was found out, and Frederick was placed under arrest. Keith escaped, but Katte was tried by court martial, sentenced to death and executed. Frederick also was sentenced to death and would have been shot but for the earnest expostulations of the kings of Sweden and Poland.

A Powerful Combination.

Tim was a protégé of Mr. Blank, a well known Boston lawyer. He was often in trouble, but by personal influence with the courts Mr. Blank managed to have him let down easy, so it became a matter of talk, the Green Bag says, that he did not suffer greatly in being arrested.

"How is it, Tim," some one asked one day, "that you are arrested very often, but never go to jail or pay any fines?"

"It's just this way," Tim replied. "I have Mr. Blank for me lawyer, and what he doesn't know about the law I tell him."

Didn't Want to Be Left.

Miss Vere—Mr. Desmond, why did you go to the dining room before you greeted the hostess? Mr. Desmond—Well, the hostess will keep, but the refreshments seemed to be getting away.—London Telegraph.

"Water," said the scientific person, "is H₂O."

"Yes," answered Dustin Stax as he laid aside the market report, "some of it is and a great deal of it I. O. U."—Washington Star.
