THE RERUBLICAN CONVENTION

Vast Body Called to Order by Chairman Harry New and Julius C. Burrows, of Michigan, Made Temporary Chairman.

CHICAGO, JUNE 16.—Thousands of delegates, visitors from all parts of the world, still more of politicians, spectators and hangers-on today wended their way from all parts of Chicago to the center of the universe, at least for a few days, the Republican national convention hall—the Coliseum.

Hours before the schedule time for opening of the convention immense throngs were about the big building. The people came early to avoid the rush, but the rush could not be avoided for the crowd was so great. The plan to avoid the rush began too early. Great preparations were made to handle the crowd. Scores of policemen were on hand and the sergeant-at-arms stood within the building attending to the last details and was prepared to throw the doors open an hour before the scheduled time.

The city is in gala attire. Every business house on State street is a mass of red, white and blue bunting and American flags. Wabash avenue is like a triumphal parade ground from the loop district to the Coliseum at Sixteenth street. The leading hotels are elaborately decorated within and without.

Within the convention hall early this morning the scene was really beautiful and stirring. The interior of the great building fairly groaned under the folds of bunting and flags of every nation on the globe. Many large parties of ladies started early for the convention hall.

The Pennsylvania delegation adopted a resolution, as was expected, which will go to the platform committee, favoring a change in the representations at the national convention. The change advocated is on a basis of one delegate to ten thousand votes cast at the previous election for president.

The sole hope of the allies for beating Taft lies with the Credentials committee, which for the coming 48 hours or more will hold the center of the stage of the convention. There is little reason to believe the committee will overturn the verdict of the National committee on the matter of contested seats in sufficient number of cases to prevent Taft's nomination on the first ballot.

It is not improbable that there will be a few reversals, because since the action of the "steam roller" proceedings of the National committee, the unsuccessful contestants who really believed that they had a good chance, have been working hard to get their claims in the strongest possible shape. The strongest lawyers among the allies have been engaged to work in committee with this material under the leadership of Mayor Bonwaller, of Indiana, Frank Smith, of Illinois, and James Scarlet, of Pennsylvania. Congressman Sloat Fasset, of New York, will make the final charge on the Taft fortifications.

It may be said that the Credentials committee is as fully as strong for Secretary Taft for president as the National committee, and when the final roll of the Convention is made up on Thursday or Friday, Secretary Malloy will find it practically the same as to-day.

President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor has not received assurance that his labor proposal for the platform will be dealt with to his satisfaction. He has by no means given up hope, saying: "Our demands are moderate and we hope that the Republican party will give them proper consideration."

The Republican convention, which is to name candidates for president and vice president, and make declarations which will be the articles of faith of the party which has for the greater part of a half century governed the United States, started on schedule time at noon.

Every man was occupying a delegates seat in the great convention when Chairman Harry New, of the national committee, rapped for order and when he got it he said that he was absolutely confident that the men nominated by this convention and the policies enunciated, will govern this country for another four years. There are fully thirteen thousand persons in the Coliseum.

Prayer was offered by Bishop Muldoon and after the presentation of the gravel to chairman New, the call of the convention was read by Secretary Malloy.

Maybe the delegates and spectators accept the idea that everything is cut and dried. Maybe the fireworks will come later. That is if Speaker Cannon, filibuster for Roosevelt, stampedes the convention or succeeds in any measure.

Once there was a flare in the immense building. It was when Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth entered. The crowd recognized the president's daughter and instantly set up a cheer. Aside from this incident the convention is splendidly orderly and reservedly decorous.

When the band played "Dixie" the south responded vociferously. When a Taft banner was brought in it caused less than a half minutes noise. At 12 o'clock exactly the band struck up "America". A flashlight of the hall was taken as Chairman New's gavel fell. When New mentioned Roosevelt in his opening speech there was a noisy demonstration.

United States Senator Julius Caesar Burrows, of Michigan, was elected temporary chairman of the convention, as has had been previously arranged for by the national committee.

After referring in his opening remarks to the overwhelming victory of the Republican party four years ago. Senator Burrows said in his address upon assuming his duties as temporary chairman:

"What has the Republican party done in the last four years of governmental control—in many respects the most remarkable and brilliant in the history of the party and the country—to forfeit public confidence or create distrust in its capacity for future administration? Although some untoward and unforeseen conditions have beset the republic during the last four years, yet these have been met and overcome with alacrity and courage, and the country has marched steadily onward in its matchless course of industrial triumphs. The wise and beneficent legislation of the Republican party during the long years of its ascendancy and administration of national affairs laid the foundation for the public weal so securely that no disquieting condition, not even a temporary panic, which necessarily touches the mainspring of all industrial life, could arrest the country's resistless advance."

In a few brief and pointed sentences he traced the industrial growth and development of the country during the past four years, and then reviewed in eulogistic terms the records of the executive departments of the government.

He spoke of the achievements of the last session of congress; of the American shipping interests; of the management of our out lying possessions by a Republican administration, which he said had been attended with remarkable success; of railway legislation and he put the Republican party fairly and squarely in favor of tariff revision, after referring to the financial legislation enacted by the recent congress he spoke at length of the United States as a world power. In closing his speech he said:

"The work of this convention will soon be concluded. The platform will voice the dominant thought of the people, and the candidates nominated must stand upon it firm and erect. They must have the patriotism of a Lincoln, the tenacity of a Grant, the wisdom and moderation of a McKintley, and the courage of a Roosevelt. With such a platform and such candidates the issue cannot be in doubt. The Republican party confidently submits its record to the approving judgment of the American people and upon its renewal declaration of faith, invokes continuance of public favor."

The nominating speeches are being made to-day, (Thursday). The balloting will likely be done Friday.
